Sues to Recover $110

The second day's trial of the case of Cox against Ida Monterola was held yesterday before Judge Young in the township court and the case was continued until Monday for further hearing. The suit is for the recovery of $110 alleged to be due on a note made out to a man named Sanchez. According to the prosecution, the money is due for value received. Miss Monterola declares that she made out the note, not knowing the significance of it, and that she was ordered to do so by Jose Nieto, a former deputy constable, who has been in trouble in Los Angeles several times before. The young woman contends that Nieto told her that if she didn't make out the note he would send her and her father over the road. She further alleged that Nieto contended the note was for no particular purpose, and that he was simply going to give it to his wife.

ASKS COURT FOR AN INJUNCTION

REAL ESTATE FIRM WANTS TO DISSOLVE

George C. Cote Requests Court to Grant Dissolution of Partnership.

C. C. C. Tatum Applies for Restraining Order

In answer to a complaint recently filed by George J. Cote in the superior court asking for a dissolution of partnership of the firm of C. C. C. Tatum & Co., of which he was a member...

Tatum is one of the most prominent real estate men of Los Angeles and has been intimately connected with several large and influential firms in the city. He went into business for himself more than a year ago and Cote was taken in as a partner. Several weeks ago because of constant disagreement between the partners there was something said of dissolution and Tatum stated that as far as he was concerned there no longer existed a partnership.

Asks for an Injunction Tatum charges Cote with having misappropriated funds of the firm amounting to nearly $5000. He further charges that Cote took the assets fraudulently and then made false entries in the partnership book to cover up the action.

In attacking Cote's ability to act as partner, Tatum says in his answer that Cote knew nothing about the business and that his connection with the Charles P. Cote vintager firm of St. Louis put him in bad repute with the patrons of the Tatum firm.

In finishing up his cross complaint and answer, Tatum states that he has the $500 mentioned by Cote and that the money is in the bank where he put it to keep it away from Cote so that the creditors would in some way be protected.

"HABEAS CORPUS" LADD GIVES OFFICERS WILL RIDE IN AUTO

ATTORNEY ARRESTED FOR LEAVING MACHINE

"Chug Wagon" Rushes Down Broadway at Lightning Speed, Detective Redmond Serving as Battering Ram

"Habeas Corpus" Ladd, a prominent lawyer, fell victim to "long-range" Detectives Ingram and Redmond yesterday afternoon for violating the automobile ordinance and, while taking the officers to the station, gave them a taste of speed which they will remember for many a day.

In obedience to Captain Broadhead's orders, Ingram and Redmond set out to discover law violators. True, they were on a specific mission, but they were to work out of Captain Broadhead's office as supposed to keep their eyes open as they pass along the street.

"Ah! Billy, here is our chance to put Broadhead and Mojonnier into the rear," quoth Redmond, pointing out a machine standing numberless in front of the Wilson block. The officers hastened to where the "chug-wagon" was standing but to their dismay saw it had a number.

The odor of gasoline smoke with the buzz of the machinery in the abandoned auto caught the attention of the officers. In a moment the man had their watches in their hands waiting for the unfortunate chauffeur to appear. Thirteen minutes passed and then Mr. Ladd came running downstairs.

the officers bail, but, no, he must accompany them to the station. Ingram took his seat at the side of the chauffeur and Redmond took the seat over the hood of the auto. Things progressed very well until the police station was reached, when, in heading his auto down hill, Ladd lost control of it and in another instant was rushing down First street towards Broadway at a furious speed. Ingram suggested that the chauffeur run his machine down Broadway, a sort of human battering-ram Redmond reclined a little more against the back of the machine raced at a high rate of speed, but Redmond never moved—that is, voluntarily. As the speed of the auto increased Redmond's hat raised inch by inch and his spine became a trifle more rigid, his muscles became more tense.

The machine was again under control, Redmond reclined a little more against the back of the machine would be his wont. There seemed to have been a strain on his nervous system which was suddenly relaxed. Ingram says that he answered questions a little like the boy who has just seen a ghost.

Back to the police station the trio proceeded in the haste wagon, and when they were landed safely at the doors of the jail Ingram and Redmond heaved a sigh of relief. The machine that caused all of the trouble is Cal. 2900, which is listed as belonging to R. K. Wilson of 441 Lake street. It is believed among the officers that Attorney Ladd wanted to show the detectives a little touch of high life when he took them the pace down Broadway. They say that for the reason it only cost Ladd $5 for bail.

Once, the officers say, the sergeant threatened to put the lawyer behind the bars if he did not produce more bail money, but remembering his reputation, he of the habeas corpus fame, the sergeant thought it of no use and allowed him to fix his own bail at $5.

Arrest Ladd

As he was about to enter the machine Ingram tapped him on the shoulder and told him that he was under arrest. Ladd remonstrated and offered

Ellery at Venice The opening of the fall musical season in Venice will occur today, when the Ellery band begins its series of winter concerts at the auditorium. The band returns to the Pacific coast full of honors won in the principal cities of the middle west last summer and its permanency near this city for the entire winter is subject for rejoicing, the organization being one devoted to the highest ideals in the musical art.

Since the Ellery musicians left here last spring their repertoire has been largely increased and many novelties chosen from all schools of composition are promised during the coming months. For the present there will be thirteen concerts a week, seven in the evenings and six in the afternoons. Those of the evening will commence at 7:30 o'clock and last till 10:30 o'clock, with two intermissions, while those of the afternoon will last one hour only— from 2:30 till 3:30 o'clock. On Sunday, however, the afternoon concert will be as long as that of the night. For the opening concerts of today Mr. Ellery has chosen programs of special attractiveness. The leading features of the afternoon program will be the "Maritana" overture, Liszt's second "Rhapsody," the finale from Puccini's "Boheme," and the fantasia from "I Pagliacci."

Of course, the Trust stores offer excuses, make feeble efforts to assert their strength, but turn straight to any advertisement of a Trust store and the very language will sound weak, flat and half-hearted. Now, Mr. or Mrs. Furniture Buyer, we want a serious, plain matter-of-fact talk. We want you to turn the searchlight on us and find out whether or not we are telling the exact truth. Our claims are big—bold—and daring. We spread broadcast over Southern California the sensational charge that the big furniture concerns in Los Angeles (except Brent's) are members of a Trust. The Trust does not dare to deny this charge. The Trust hopes, by lying quietly, that it will escape some of the public censure. It is afraid—mind you we say this openly—the Trust is positively afraid to say anything or do anything that will reveal its identity, for these two reasons: FIRST—The Trust exists contrary to the laws of the United States by endeavoring to restrict trade and gain a monopoly. SECONDLY—The Trust is so handicapped by expenses, red tape, big salaries, incompetent managers and limited output that it is forced to ask big prices. The Trust could not sell cheaply even if it wanted to, not unless it took severe and probably fatal loss. These statements, indeed, are calculated to arouse every buyer of furniture for miles around. It is your affair as much as ours.
