

SALOMON-GREENE BATTLE IS DRAW

SECOND MEETING FAILS TO PRODUCE RESULTS

Clever Featherweights Go Through Rounds Without Decision, Both Putting Up Game and Fierce Exhibitions

With a whirlwind finish, the Greene-Solomon battle ended last night after the twentieth round and Referee Eytton declared the bout a draw and voiced the verdict of the audience which witnessed one of the fastest exhibitions of boxing ever seen in Los Angeles.

The pre-fight opinion, which held the two men as evenly matched, was clearly justified by the manner in which both battlers showed equal ability to give and take.

Although the battle resulted in a perfect draw, the crowd was on its feet from the first, anticipating a knock-out, because of the rattling lightning-punch which, in the second round, put Montana to his knees, where he remained until the gong tapped after seven or eight seconds had been counted off by Referee Robinson.

His came back at once in the next round and showed himself the handier man with the gloves, justly meriting the draw which was declared at the end of the bout.

At the conclusion both men plainly showed the result of the grueling battle, though Greene had more to show than Solomon. The right eye had been marked for the Aliso street boy and in the early rounds a continual tattoo started a swelling that, before the end, entirely closed the orb, and as he went after Solomon toward the close of the fracas, his left blinker eye was aiding him in finding openings for the slashing blows that threatened to put Benny away.

The local boy was present at all times with the return wallop and the was seldom taking or sending a stinging drive which fairly made the roof rattle with the approving cries of the respective supporters of the two fighters.

Solomon's lip bled from the twelfth round, though the reason did not hinder his work to any extent. To the thirteenth round Solomon had the better of the contest, but in the unlucky period Greene came through in astonishingly swift fashion and to the end it was all tuck, with both men sustaining much punishment.

The physical condition of the battlers was marked when they stepped into the ring and had it not been for the apparently splendid form which had been attained in training days, there is little doubt that one of the featherweights would have taken the count before the final round. Both, however, were prepared for emergency and to the end it was predicted as awaiting them and, although both slowed down in the seventeenth round and sparred for wind, there was nothing with which to find fault as the pace had been terrific and the remaining three rounds might tell a tale of a feat for one of them.

Solomon's left again was a prominent factor in the battle, and in addition to the customary punishing powers, there was more cleverness than the referee was not displaying.

There was more of calculation in the delivery with the result that in several instances the Chicagoan wined as the well directed blow went home.

The pre-fight opinion, especially of Solomon had closed Greene's eye, as he landed punch after punch on the injured member, showing no mercy when he recognized the advantage.

Greene was the game boy, which made him a favorite upon the initial appearance, but he hesitated for a moment to break in under the volley of withering thrusts and give as good as he received.

The thirteenth was probably one of the fiercest rounds that sent waves of excitement sweeping over a California night audience, and when the gong sounded after the mix-ups the fans were at the highest pitch of excitement, showing no partiality as they applauded the thrilling exhibition.

from vicious leads, and sidestepped up-bercuts was the reason that one of the two cannot claim victory today.

The contest was without doubt one of the best fighting exhibitions which have been witnessed in Los Angeles, and the enthusiasts probably will not be satisfied until the featherweights come together again.

Saine and Dalton could not decide the supremacy of either and after ten rounds of fair fighting Referee Robinson called the result a draw.

Saine was the cleverer, but did not appear to have a punch capable of distressing Dalton, who fought hard and did not let up till the end.

Mito Herrera and Montana Kid went fifteen rounds for the second draw of the evening and, though Montana was the favorite with the house, he was not able to gain the decision, the swarthy Herro assisting hand in the punch which, in the second round, put Montana to his knees, where he remained until the gong tapped after seven or eight seconds had been counted off by Referee Robinson.

His came back at once in the next round and showed himself the handier man with the gloves, justly meriting the draw which was declared at the end of the bout.

HESTER W. WINS FEATURE EVENT

SPL. DY FILLY EASILY BEATS FAVORITE

Steps Over Futurity Course in Fastest Time of This Season at Ascot. Flea Is Bared in the Steeplechase

By Jay Davidson

The steeplechase race was the principal attraction at Ascot yesterday, but the fifth race held the boards in point of interest, as it brought together half a dozen of the best 2-year-olds at the course.

Crowshade was made the favorite for this race, which was a dash over the futurity course. This favoritism resulted from the "info" which was public property that the Tichenor gelding would be the medium of a wagers' victory.

When the barrier was sprung Hester W. darted into the lead and made every post a winning one to the wire.

Cello showed remarkable improvement and ran into second place, Azona getting the show money, while Crowshade finished in the "also" division.

The time for this distance is the best of the meeting, 1:09 3/4, and is another season record to be made by Hester W. the Holland filly going the fastest five furlongs of the meeting on her previous out-coming at this course in 1:09 1/4.

The steeplechase event furnished much amusement for the biggest crowd of the week, the fun being furnished by Flea and Chief Ray, both of which run out rather than take the jumps and a chance at the wire.

Flea was made favorite, although carrying top weight, and despite his recognized dislike for the fourth jump, which he has refused three successive times.

As usual, Flea led all the way over the first three jumps, but ran out of the course when approaching the fourth jump and was pulled up by Jockey Dayton.

For this offense, Judges Hamilton and Cole notified E. Gilbert, owner of the erratic timber-topper, that future entries of this one would be refused until he showed that during this jump and show betting—Dorado 3 to 1 and 1 to 1, Nigrette 3 to 1 and 1 to 1, Dargin, show, 1 to 1.

When Flea ran out Casador was left in front and remained there all the way, getting the verdict by a nose in a three-horse drive.

Chief Ray made his first start at Ascot and promptly showed that he was no world-beater at the game by running out at the first jump and was pulled up, being the second entry in a field of five to not finish.

Marylander outraced Adams in the drive home and secured the place from the Schriber entry by that margin.

Marpessa won the second race in a driving finish with Henchman and Stoessel, getting away in front and holding this position all the way to the wire.

event this season will face the barrier, right starters having accepted the challenge.

Henry McDaniel seems to have a double-bladed elch on the long end of the stake with his entry, Rubric and Jake Sanders, although C. W. Clark is man willing to concede that anything can beat his speedy Chantilly.

S. M. Williams also has some pretensions here, having Fireball and Alencon coupled as his entry.

The probabilities are that Rubric will win, Chantilly should be second and Alencon ought to be no worse than third.

The third race is another of the free $500 handicaps which the jockey club has been making as an almost daily offering for several days.

Nine starters are carded to go to the post in this event, with honest old Hans Wagner carrying the biggest weight package, 117 pounds.

Retropaw seems to have a triple plate mortgage on this purse with New Mow Hay and Orchan as his strivers.

Orchan is not much, but New Mow Hay has only to run back to her eastern form to get the long end of the money.

Borghesi is a Dusen who made his debut as an owner by sending Hippocrates as his candidate for the money.

He may not win the race, but it is difficult to imagine how Hippocrates can be worse than second.

Borghesi is a bear at this distance, is a 1-40 runner and the hardest sort of a proposition to beat over a distance.

DORADO CASHES AT 100 TO 1

LUCKY BALDWIN WINS WITH LONG SHOT

Son of Amigo Could Not Win at Ascot, but Takes Handicap at Ingleside From Good Ones

Special to The Herald. SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 29.—The handicap at six and a half furlongs resulted in a decided sensation at Ingleside this afternoon. The talent divided between Nigrette, Dargin and St. Gargin, cut out the pace, but was passed in the stretch by Nigrette, which looked to be the winner at the saddling paddock, but Dorado came fast on the outside and won by half a length at the long odds of 100 to 1.

Dorado is owned by Lucky Baldwin and is a three-year-old gelding by Amigo. At least twenty-five people had a wager on the Santa Anita horse. The biggest winner was Julius Bowman of Chicago. He won $3500.

T. H. Griffin made his first start here this season. A wily Massa, which cap the last race easily, Massa was boosted from $400 to $1200.

A story was circulated that Possart was very lame and in consequence his price went back to 11 to 5. He is a well known horse at the California Jockey club, has instructed the bookmakers operating here not to take money on races run at other tracks.

Henry Stell, a local tailor, claims to have bet that amount with Phil Howell. The latter says Stell called the bet off because he would not shift the wager from the fifth to the second race. Tomorrow will possibly be the last day's racing over the Ingleside track, as the association may decide to sell the property.

CRACK AMATEURS TO MEET BOOED THE "BAD MAN" OUT

Christopher and Olinda Nines Will Cross Bats at Anaheim Tomorrow Afternoon

The Christopher baseball team will travel to Anaheim tomorrow afternoon, where it is scheduled to play the crack Olinda oil aggregation.

The local nine has signed Marshall, a new pitcher who is considered by many to be the best amateur twirler in Southern California. In the game against the Pomona team of leaguers two weeks ago he held the heavy hitters of the country aggregation to a single hit, losing the game by a score of 2 to 1.

Manager Troesti has signed "Dummy" Lachlan as shortstop. Lachlan is under contract to play with the Joplin team of the Western association next season.

The house of peers then adjourned until January 20.

Cincinnati Lawyer Met Threat of Death by Taking Pistol Away From Boy Who'd Be "Bad"

Special to The Herald. CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 29.—The career of an embryo "bad man" was brought to an ignominious end this afternoon, when Edward H. Pettis, a 17-year-old victim of the Diamond Dick novels, was unceremoniously "booted" out of the offices of Stem, Heldman & Melnhope, well known attorneys in the Traction building.

Pettis entered the offices flourishing a six-shooter of the long type, and, bringing it to the level of Attorney John Rohrer's eyes, ordered him to write out a check for $50, on the double quik.

"Don't trifle with me, man," shouted Edward when Rohrer hesitated. "I'm desperate; write as I dictate."

When Rohrer comprehended the situation he grabbed the youthful desperado by the nape of the neck, threw the six-shooter in the waste paper basket, and heading "the terror of Traction building" for the door, applied his number sevens to hurry the "bad man's" retreat.

Later the "terror" was locked up. His home is at 2212 Gilbert avenue. He was formerly employed in the attorney's office as a messenger.
