You've probably noticed in the advertising of this house the direct, brief and to the point way in which things are put. There is no waste of words, no frills or verbal trimmings. Our advertising deals with the two things in which the public is interested—the goods and the price. Both of these may be safely reckoned as right when connected with this store. There is but little space wasted in explaining where we get the goods—how we can afford to sell them so cheaply—why we want to sell them—why this store is the best store on earth and all that sort of thing. Instead, we stick closely to the text—the GOODS, what they are, and the PRICE, how much. This is the sum and substance of today's message. Offerings for tomorrow are timely and the prices are money savers, every one of them. Read all the items carefully.
