

CONSIGN BODY TO LAST HOME FINAL SERVICES HELD FOR MRS. CANFIELD

Fragrance and Tears at Obsequies, and After the Funeral Flowers Were Sent to Different Hospitals

Surrounded by sorrowing friends, amid a wealth of flowers, the still, white form of Mrs. Charles A. Canfield—ruthlessly stilled by the hand of the slayer—lay yesterday morning in the beautiful family residence, 803 Alvarado street, where simple funeral services were held.

While the family and near relatives stood sobbing at the side of their beloved and the community stood outside the mansion in respectful silence awaiting the last look at the face of the one whom they all loved, the slayer pretended sleep—the quiet, peaceful slumber of which he has deprived his victim's family for so many nights of grief and anxiety.

Although it had been announced that the funeral would be private the large home was filled with friends from all walks of life. The high esteem in which the decedent was held was attested by the many floral pieces which were sent to the house of mourning and which probably presented the largest array of blossoms ever seen at a funeral service in Los Angeles.

Banked With Flowers The different rooms were banked with the flowers, the beautiful gray brocade casket being almost covered with pink and white roses. A large pillow of violets bore the touching inscription "Mother," while the little children of the family sent a large basket of white violets.

In the family dining room the wreaths of white flowers were arranged on the family table, where the gracious Christian woman, who is mourned by all who knew her, so often presided at the family gatherings. Over her chair a large wreath of the fragrant flowers was suspended.

Mrs. Canfield, while a deeply religious woman from youth, did not unite herself with any particular church. In deference to what the family knew would have been her wishes, Francis Murphy, himself a broad Christian and an old friend of the family, conducted the funeral services, speaking in kind sympathy and Christian consolation to the bereaved family.

Compared to Martyrs Mr. Murphy compared Mrs. Canfield to a latter day martyr and her life to that of the saints, so lovable, pure and sympathetic had it been, and with all a human happiness and hope which so often strengthened her family and friends in time of distress.

"Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God; believe also in me," words in the fourteenth chapter of the Gospel of St. John, were selected by Mr. Murphy as his text and which thought he carried throughout his touching address, pointing to the Heavenly Father as the healer of all wounds and the helper in all sorrows.

"Dear friends, we come here to this sacred place, to this beautiful home, to our beloved friend and neighbor, and his dear ones to express to them our love and sympathy and loyalty in this deep, deep sorrow.

Life of Sacrifice "Thank God for this noble life, a life of sacrifice and love and courage. She had been interested in the poor and the afflicted; she was one of the most gracious women. Her heart was in her work. Her gifts to the poor were made quietly because she did not want publicity. This sweet-hearted woman has not gone; she will stay here. It is a blessed memory; it is a blessed home made more sacred by her departure. It never was so sacred as it is this blessed morning or so precious. God has made it so, and with eyes raining tears, we look up to God and say, 'Thy will be done; she rests in thy peace and thy love.'

"The awful crime—I will not speak of it. I have been stunned, I have been made helpless by it. This beautiful woman, this lovely wife and mother, has been distinguished by destiny in removing her by this brutal act. She has been deemed worthy of a martyr's death. It is not often that such an honor comes to a woman—a martyr's death for her home, for her loved ones, Lincoln and Garfield were assassinated; our beloved McKinley was taken away by an assassin's bullet. This glorious woman has been deemed worthy to stand in the litany of these great, noble men. Thank God for the light and beauty that has been shed upon this beautiful life, in the gracious province of Almighty God."

Wife and Husband Mr. Murphy paid a touching tribute to the friendship existing between the bereaved family and E. L. Doherty and in a trembling voice spoke of the early days of the husband and wife now so rudely torn apart when the smile of wealth did not shine upon them, but when the loving wife was full of love and courage to meet and surmount the difficulties as they came, a true and loving Christian helpmate in every way. Continuing he said:

"They loved and lived for each other. The wife was a loyal comrade to her gallant husband. She never complained, but filled his life with sunshine, and in that respect they were never poor. They had their troubles and we all have, but it was love and loyalty that enabled them to weather the storms of life. When their wealth disappeared, as it did several times before they had their greatest success, this loving wife would meet the bad news with a smile on her face and the reminder: 'God is good.' We have our health and our beloved children, and we can begin life again. What an inspiration, what a comfort, what a joy she has been to this husband.

"It is beyond the power of human tongue to tell of her gracious life. No one can ever know the full extent to which she was interested in the poor and the afflicted, or how she helped them—how she comforted those who mourned, and healed broken hearts and cheered those in distress. There is not a neighbor within the reach of this sweet woman's influence who did not love her. She is not gone—she will always be here, enshrined in memory, for over that the grave has no power."

Following the address, Mr. Murphy a brief prayer concluded the service, after which the friends viewed the beloved face for the last time and the family took a sorrowful farewell.

By the expressed wish of Mrs. Canfield, the remains were cremated at Evergreen cemetery.

Flowers for Others Inasmuch as Mrs. Canfield had spent her life in working and caring for others, the family wished that the beautiful floral tokens be distributed on the graves of the forgotten poor and among the sick in the hospitals. Accordingly three express wagons and three automobiles were loaded with the beautiful blossoms, the floral pieces being distributed on the graves in the potters' fields of the cemeteries, while the cut flowers were sent to the hospitals to cheer the sick and as a last token of the life of the departed.

GIRLS RUINED BY OPIUM Pittsburgh Joins Increase Rapidly and Number of Victims of Deadly Drug Grows Apace

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 1.—Chinese opium joints have been multiplying rapidly in Pittsburgh recently, but not until today has the city witnessed the spectacle common in other large cities of young girls being lured into these dens and ruined.

Marie Sauter and Lydia and Isabella Jukes, daughters of prominent families in the Mount Oliver district of this city, faced a police court this morning and told the story of their downfall in the opium dens here, while their parents stood by weeping.

The girls, none of whom are over 16, were allowed by their parents to go to matinees unattended, and at a performance at one of the theaters where an opium den was pictured, they made the acquaintance of a woman who sat next to them, who told them she could show them a real opium joint. She turns out to be a notorious character of the town. Lured on by her, the girls visited a Diamond street joint, smoked opium, and have kept it up for three months.

They are physical wrecks and were placed by the court in charge of probation officers.

Where Baking Begins Right The baking of the NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY begins with right material, and every step thereafter through the whole process of baking is right. There is not one point of quality that care, skill and modern bakeries could make better. It is perfection itself—through and through.

It Ends Right when it reaches your table untouched by strange hands, untainted by odors. The quality, oven-flavor and freshness are preserved in a dust and moisture proof package, distinguished by the trade mark here shown. It always appears in red and white on each end of the package and warrants the perfect condition of the contents. For example try packages of GRAHAM CRACKERS—possessing the rich, nutty flavor of graham flour—unlike any graham crackers you ever tasted. FROTANA—a temptingly delicious union of biscuit and fruit—the newest delicacy of the National Biscuit Company.

Notes for Women Young Woman a Successful Guide The woman guide is the latest addition to the ranks of employed women whose business it is to lead her wealthier sister, who has taken to hunting, to the place to find game. The first woman to register as a guide was Miss Cornelia Crosby, in Franklin county, Me. She has contributed to sporting columns of the eastern papers under the name of "Fly-Rod," and finds much pleasure in conducting women hunters through the backwoods of Maine. She has killed hundreds of deer and is the only woman who has killed a caribou.

Grape and Nut Salad With a sharp penknife take the skin and seeds from 3/4 lb. grapes. Add an equal amount of English walnut meats that have been soaked in boiling water a few minutes and freed from their brown skins. Mix with a French dressing and let stand a few minutes, then serve on lettuce heart leaves.

White Still Popular Perfect avallanches of "white goods" are on sale these days and the ladies are busy making their selections for the summer. The prospects for a white summer seem decidedly good, but when you think of the "white" summer! The lingerie waists are more popular than ever, and more expensive, too.

Roasting Lamb The shoulder of lamb requires rather more than an hour to roast; a small saddle an hour and a half; a larger saddle two hours or longer. Boil all lamb an hour and a quarter to an hour and a half; ribs of lamb (as they are thinner than the loin) from one hour to an hour and a quarter; a leg of lamb weighing five pounds an hour and a half.

Proportions for Beauty The feminine figure should be eight times the height of the head. The face at its widest part should be five times the width of the eye. The face should be three times as long as the nose. The hand should be twice the length of the forefinger.

Sauce for Orange Puddings Cream one-third cup of butter, add one cup of powdered sugar slowly, then add two egg yolks, one at a time, and beat well each time. Beat all until very light, then add one-third cup of very light cream and two teaspoons of flavoring. Set over hot water long enough to melt the butter, but no longer. Pour the sauce round the little puddings and serve at once.

Currant Drop Cakes Cream one-half cup of butter and add slowly one cup of the fine granulated sugar. When the mixture is light add the well-beaten yolks of four eggs, then four tablespoons of cold water. Beat and add two cups of flour sifted with two level teaspoons of baking powder. Beat and mix in lightly the whites of the four eggs beaten stiff. Drop by tablespoons onto a buttered pan, leaving considerable room for the spreading and rising. Lay one currant on the top of each and bake in a moderate oven.

Cheaters Cheaters are having a great vogue. "And what are cheaters?" mere man is apt to ask. They are little curls, so necessary to the success of many of our milliners that millions sell them with the hats. One woman wears her cheaters, two or three, according to size, alluringly fixed over her left eye toward the front, while another fastens hers in a fascinating way toward the back of her collar.

BANQUETERS BOOST CLUB Coffee Brethren Raise $3310 at a Rousing Gathering, Gail Borden Leading

Gail Borden of Alhambra opened the subscription toward the proposed coffee club with $500, which was the starting of the raising of $3310 toward the $5000 required for the project, at the subscription banquet held at the Y. W. C. A. rooms last evening. The other subscribers making the sum ranged from $100 down to $5. The banquet was given by the Federation of Coffee clubs and proved successful.

Called E. P. Ryland, the president, reviewed the 150 banqueters to order and made a brief preliminary remark regarding the object of the banquet to raise by subscription the required funds.

O. D. Conroy was introduced, who spoke briefly on the coffee club project. He then gave a stereoscopic address, delineating a mother with her little boy and the growth of the boy to young manhood and the conditions with which he had to contend, closing with a bright coffee club scene.

W. H. Frost, first vice president and executive secretary, delivered an address on "The Club Idea."

Paul Brown, secretary, spoke of the experiments of the coffee club and the prejudice which had to be overcome in placing them on a substantial basis.

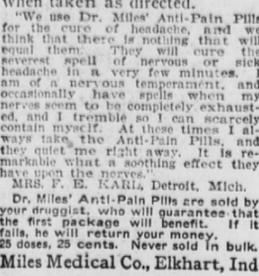

Rev. Hugh K. Walker, pastor of the Immanuel Presbyterian church, urged the cause of obtaining subscriptions with a brief but pointed address.

Rev. A. C. Smith, pastor of the First Christian church, then proceeded to urge the banqueters to subscribe the required amount for the new club with W. H. Frost as "rubber" of the blackboard.
