

GEORGE HERRING DIES IN LONDON PHILANTHROPIST SUCCUMBS AFTER OPERATION

Englishman Well Known for His Generous Gifts to Charitable Institutions Throughout Great Britain

By Associated Press. LONDON, Nov. 2.—George Herring, the noted English philanthropist, who in the course of his life contributed large sums of money to hospitals and charitable enterprises, died today after an operation for appendicitis.

George Herring was chairman of the City of London Electric Light company, Electric and General Investment company, Municipal Trust company and several mining companies.

In December last he donated $500,000 to the Salvation Army for use in a home colonization scheme, the army engaging to repay this sum in twenty-five installments to the King hospital fund.

The plan was to purchase tracts of land in England, giving five acres to each settler, building cottages, providing seed and implements and supporting the settlers until the lands become productive.

Each settler was to repay the army in installments.

In this manner the Salvation Army hoped to provide for those who, for various reasons, were to leave England under the emigration schemes of the army.

Mr. Herring conducted a soup kitchen in Camdentown, built and endowed institutions, and was a member of the Rest for gentle folk brought to poverty through gulf misfortune, and furnished a number of Salvation Army shelters for the homeless.

Advertisements were placed in daily papers asking for a loan of a sum of money ranging from $200 to $400. Security would be given by one of the three men in the form of a pawn ticket for diamonds valued at $500 or $600.

Many persons, it is said, loaned the three men money and accepted the tickets. When the holder of the tickets was unable to collect the amount he had loaned he immediately went to the pawnbroker, paid the amount due on the articles pawned and accepted the goods worth less than the amount of the loan.
