

NO BLAME IS LAD ON THE SANTA FE

LAMANDA PARK COLLISION IS PROBED BY CORONER

Witnesses Tell Terribly Graphic Stories of Death in Auto—Cyanide Bath of Death—Accidental

PASADENA, May 27.—Two inquests within half an hour of each other this afternoon. One was that of Madison A. Tipton, the South Pasadena man who died from bathing in a cyanide of potassium solution, and the other was over the body of the unfortunate Walter F. Foster, who lost his life through the collision of a train and an automobile.

The case of Tipton the coroner's jury found that the man died from the effect on the heart of the powerful solution used in the bath as a rheumatism remedy. It seems that Tipton was a sort of amateur assayer and knew the dangerous chemical through his researches.

In the case of Foster the highest class of citizens were impeached to serve on the jury, a very unusual thing. After listening to the testimony this jury brought in a verdict that Foster "came to his death through fracture of the skull," placing the blame on no one.

The most important witness at the Foster inquest was C. A. McNeil of 1215 South Figueroa street, Los Angeles. He was the fireman on the Santa Fe Limited which ran down the auto.

McNeil stated that the train was fifteen minutes late when it left Pasadena and it was running about fifty miles an hour as it passed the station at Lamanda Park. He did not see the auto until the train was about 150 feet from the crossing and did not believe that the chauffeur saw it at all because of the houses and trees.

When the auto was scarcely twenty-five feet away McNeil dropped back into the cab as he saw a collision was inevitable. He says that the locomotive did not strike directly against the front of the auto but that the blow was glancing and the train did not "take hold" until the step of the cab was encountered, when the auto was hurled against and under the rushing train.

TOO MANY PUPILS IN NIGHT SCHOOLS

Board Orders Enrollment Stopped

Students Number 1279 and More Demand Admission—Fee Will Be Reduced—Other Notes of Schools

More than one thousand young men and women of Los Angeles have availed themselves of the opportunities offered by the evening high school at Polytechnic. Notwithstanding a lack of funds that compelled the officers to debar further enrollments several months ago, 1279 pupils have been placed on the rolls.

The splendid success of the tentative scheme as outlined by the board in January has so far outdistanced the most hopeful of its supporters that the school is an established fact next term.

By action of the board of education, the schools of Los Angeles will close for the summer vacation June 28. September will be fixed as the reopening of the fall term.

Leonard Merrill was appointed as the board's arbitrator to meet with the representatives of the Los Angeles-Pacific railway, the two to decide on a third colleague.

Joseph Scott, president of the board, can do anything for the cause, Los Angeles school teachers will draw salaries during the summer months, even though they are not on duty.

Los Angeles parents who have had to buy new books for children when one series was thrown out of the schools will be interested in a recent arrangement of the board.

The McKimley Home school will be considerably enlarged when one temporary structure from Washington street school and another from the person who has been building the McKimley site at that place have only one building.

The drivers employed by the school department sent a petition to the board of education that they be given legal holidays with pay.

Superintendent E. C. Moore's office force was increased by another assistant superintendent last night.

his face. I said "Here are your two little baby girls. How proud and glad you were when God gave them to you and when first they said "Papa." How thankful you were to God and to her, she that you promised to love and protect with the nobility of your manhood. She has gone into the cold grave."

"The tall man knelt down and wept. The babies woke up and cried at the sight of their father. We all wept and the man cried for mercy at the hands of his God. He asked us to keep the children until he could find work and make a home, which we did and he learned to love his children as God's best gift. The triumphs of my key of love."

"The next key is sympathy. And above all is that precious rare gift of sympathy. Our century has been a wonderful one. We have the machinery of science and art, pupils are trained by the magnetism of sympathy. You can give so little and get so much in return—so I have found it in the slums. I could not always save the life, but I could weep with the weeping, I could very often be the smallest thing, but the immortal spark of sympathy did the rest."

Gives Kiss of Sympathy. "I remember one day I was standing before the prison and I heard the most awful screams. Finally a woman, ragged, hair disheveled, face spotted with blood was being led forth, a strong policeman holding each hand and two going before and after her. She was throwing herself this way and that. I thought quickly 'What can I do for that poor woman?' I could not quote scripture for she would not have listened. To sing would not do and I think an angelic thought came to me as she passed and I sprang forth and kissed her. She stood still in amazement and I do not know whether the policeman was taken off their guard or whether they loosed their holds, but she got herself clear and went meek as a lamb to the wagon. I could hear her say, 'Who was that that kissed me? No one has kissed me since my mother died.'

"The next day they told me at the prison that they thought she had gone mad. She paced her cell, saying: 'Oh, my God, who was it that kissed me? Not since my mother died has any man kissed me!' I asked to go into her cell and was granted the privilege, and there I found that once she had been beautiful. She told me that her mother had died when she was 7 years old and that in her dying breath she had covered her baby face with kisses, and not from that day had any one ever kissed her. I told her of him who came from heaven, told of Jesus and God, made her the means of saving many other souls. Only a kiss when the heart is broken, only a touch of sympathy."

The Third Key. "The third key is sacrifice. What can be accomplished without sacrifice? The faces that stand out from the canvas of time are those who have made great sacrifices. Sacrifice has sowed the seed of the church. They are wrong who say that today and die tomorrow. We die only to live tomorrow."

"The last key is action. After the greatest power is the power to do. Sympathy is grand, love is great, sacrifice is wonderful, but it is action, the power to do that is so wanted in our churches. In San Francisco when the city was laid low in ruins by the earthquake, blankets, clothing, food and thousands of dollars that told."

"So it is in everything that is in action that tells. In the slums I found no surer door than action. It was the practical, the washing of the children, the making of beds, helping in the work and doing the actual work that counted."

Not a Successful Scrubber. "Our mother was very solicitous that we should be trained for the work that we were to do, but there was one line of education that I sadly lacked when I came to do my work, might call it scrubology. I can remember the first attempt I made at scrubbing a floor. I had gone to the room of an old man, crippled and bedridden, and after doing various little things I asked to wash the floor. I hunted around until I found a pail and a scrub brush with a fine back and about six bristles. Then after a long hunt I got some soap and then for the warm water! I went down to the next floor very timidly and putting on my best smile I asked for a little warm water. 'Warm water?' warm water!' said the woman with a laugh. 'You will find the pump outside, and outside I went. After working desperately, lifting and pulling and finally jumping on it, I got sufficient water and went back to my task. I scrubbed the six bristles on the soap and then on the floor, but it made no impression, and finally old Joe said 'Why don't you use a little water?' Just the idea. I turned the water out and scrubbed and scrubbed with better results. I went out I heard old Joe say 'She don't talk, she does.' I thought 'I had 'does' and I think that the woman believed though that I had 'does', too."

S.C.C. PURIFIES THE BLOOD

There is no other part of our physical system upon which so much depends as upon the blood. The muscles, nerves, bones, sinews, skin, and other portions of the body are sustained, developed and enabled to perform their different duties, because they are supplied with nourishment and healthful properties through the circulation. In various ways the blood becomes contaminated and polluted. A sluggish, inactive condition of the system, and torpid state of the avenues of bodily waste, will leave the refuse and waste matter of the body to sour and form uric and other acids, which are absorbed into the blood and Rheumatism, or some itching, disfiguring skin disease is the result. Muddy, sallow complexions, eruptions, spots, pimples, etc., all show that some humor has taken root in the circulation and rendered it sour and unfit for nourishing the body. There is scarcely any disease which cannot be traced to the blood. Often the disease-tainted blood of parents is handed down to children and their lives are a continual battle against disease in some form, usually of a scrofulous nature. Rheumatism, Catarrh, Skin Diseases, Sores and Ulcers, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., are all deep-seated blood troubles, and until this vital fluid is purified they cannot be cured. For all blood diseases S. S. S. is the best remedy ever put upon the market. This great medicine is made of roots, herbs and barks of recognized blood-purifying and building-up properties. It goes down into the circulation and removes all poisons, impurities and humors, supplies the blood with the healthful properties it needs and completely cures blood diseases of every kind. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Skin Diseases, Sores and Ulcers, Contagious Blood Poison, etc. because it purifies the blood. Book on the blood and medical advice free.
