WHITE MEN REFUSE TO BELIEVE CHINESE

MANY ARE CALLED BUT FEW ARE CHOSEN

Several Hundred May Move to Be Called Before Jury Is Secured to Try Culprit

Two hundred and forty men have been examined before Justice Rose in a vain effort to get a jury with which to try G. S. Chan, Chinese, charged with practicing medicine without a license.

Out of the 240 men only five have been found who have satisfied the qualifications demanded by the law of those who shall decide another man's fate. They are J. O. Clifford, L. L. Ward, L. L. Hart, O. C. Bowers and C. W. Pettiford.

These are the only ones out of 240 who have fulfilled the legal qualifications and yet have no prejudice against the honesty of a Chinese who is testifying in his own behalf. All of the other 235 men have said that they would not give as much weight to the word of a Chinese as they would to that of a white man, and consequently they have been excused.

Is Losing Willingness
Pettiford was the first man to be chosen. He has appeared daily at the police station since July 10 and has been told by the court to "come again tomorrow."

Pettiford complains that it is an outrage to keep a man from his business without remuneration, but now he has resigned himself to his fate, hoping that seven other men will soon be found who will be his fellow jurors.

Yesterday afternoon Justice Rose ordered another venire of sixty men, making a total of 300 men summoned in the case. In the previous venires the ratio of men secured to that of men called has been one to forty-eight. If this ratio holds up, 120 more men will be required in addition to those summoned today.

This would make a total of nearly 500 men examined for the trial of one Chinese. Jones & Weller, the attorneys for Chan, say their client is entitled to a fair trial and they will not stop until they get a fair jury. They regret exceedingly that so much time is being taken up, but it is necessary.

All other cases on Justice Rose's calendar are being held over for a month in hopes that Chan's trial will be finished by that time.

ATTRIBUTE THEFT TO BULLET WOUND
INJURY TO MAN'S HEAD HELD RESPONSIBLE

Served in the Philippines and Hurt Sustained There, Physicians Say, May Have Made Him a Thief

William Martin, a former soldier, was arrested last night by Detectives Steele and McCann and placed in jail on a charge of misdemeanor embezzlement.

It is alleged that Martin has gone to various establishments, including the Maier Brewing company, and borrowed tools on the representation that he was working for some plumber and needed the tool for temporary use. After securing the tool he would sell it, the police say.

In this way, the police assert Martin has secured and sold nearly $100 worth of tools, including hammers, saws, braces and bits and hatchets.

Martin is said to be mentally unbalanced. He served in the Philippines as a member of the hospital corps. At the battle of Calacon, while aiding a wounded man on the firing line, he was himself struck in the head by a bullet which glanced from the steel tire of an ambulance. The bones of the man's skull are said to be depressed in such manner that they press on the brain as a result of this wound.

An effort was made some time ago by Drs. Quint and Bonyng to get Martin to submit to an operation to relieve him, but he refused. Since then he has been brought to the station several times for medical treatment, but has never before been arrested here on any charge.

SCIENTIST FINDS VALUABLE PAPERS
COPENHAGEN, July 15.—Y. L. Heilberg, professor of philosophy in the University of Copenhagen, made a most interesting historical discovery in the convent of Holy Grave at Constantinople a few weeks ago.

While studying old manuscripts in the convent he discovered a number of palimpsests which in addition to prayers and psalms of the twelfth century contained copies of works by Archimedes, the Greek mathematician, who was born about 28 B. C.
