STEAKS GIFT OF THE POPE
ADMIRATION FOR BROOCH IS OVERWHELMING
RUSSIAN GIRL YIELDS TO TEMPTATION
Pontiff Gives Diamond-Studded Jewel to Mrs. Bourke Cockran and Servants' Admiration for Bauble Causes Downfall

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Because of her reverence for a religious picture painted on a handsome brooch, the property of Mrs. W. Bourke Cockran, wife of the congressman, Nellie Wolkowitz, a young Russian girl, was locked up at police headquarters to await a requisition from the Rhode Island authorities.

Last Summer Representative and Mrs. Cockran paid a visit to Europe, and while in Rome had an audience with Pope Pius X. Later the holy father presented to Mrs. Cockran a handsome brooch made of gold and surrounded with diamonds, which contained a beautiful miniature of a religious subject.

As a matter of course, Mrs. Cockran valued the gift very highly, and when she returned to this country and went to Newport, where she is now staying, she showed it to her friends as her most treasured possession, telling over and over again how it had been presented to her by the pope and what an honor it was in possession and blessing she felt that it would be to her all her life.

Mr. and Mrs. Cockran went to stop at Newell's house in Newport, and among the servants there was a pretty little Russian girl, who was a Roman Catholic. She frequently saw the brooch in the possession of Mrs. Cockran, and admired it extravagantly, frequently asking that she might hold it in her hand for a closer view, especially as it had been blessed by the pope, and she felt that its nearness to her would benefit her from a religious point of view. These requests were granted, and Mrs. Cockran is said to have been pleased at the admiration and reverence with which the girl viewed the precious treasure.

One day the brooch disappeared, and Mrs. Cockran was in great distress. Search was made for it high and low. Carpets were taken up, furniture was moved, and her rooms were turned topsyturvy in a search for the brooch, but it could not be found.

Then there came a search for the little Russian girl, but she had departed, and left no trace of where she could be found. Yesterday afternoon Inspector McCafferty of the detective bureau received a message from Chief of Police Crowley of Newport asking him to go to 169 West 107th street and look for a little Russian girl named Nellie Wolkowitz, and if she had the brooch, which was described in the telegram, to arrest her, and a requisition would be sent from Newport, where Mrs. Cockran would appear against her.

Detectives Brennan and Miles were sent to the address, and last night they found the girl. Upon being questioned they say the girl showed them the brooch hidden by a string around her neck, and that this brooch answered in every detail the description forwarded.

The girl was taken to police headquarters to await the arrival of a warrant from New York, and the police said last night that if it was not forthcoming soon they would themselves obtain a warrant against the girl, charging her with bringing stolen property into this state.

It is not believed by the police that the girl took the brooch for her intrinsic worth, as the girl had apparently made no effort to dispose of it, but that she desired it because of its religious significance.

FUNNYGRAPHS
"We have left undone the things we should have done," acknowledged the fair worshiper.

"It's all right, dear," whispered a motherly soul in the pew back of her. "It's not undone, and you know I reached over and hooked it while you was standing up."—St. Louis Republic.

"She—Sometimes you appear really manly and sometimes you are quite effeminate. How do you account for it?" "He—It's hereditary, I suppose. One-half of my ancestors were males and the other half females.—Illustrated Bites.

"Mother-in-Law—Has the young man who saved my life yesterday called upon you yet?" "Son-in-law—Yes, indeed, he has already made his apologies.—Fillegende Blatter.

"Education helps a man to make his way in the world." "Yes," answered the man who always sneers; "there is no doubt that a little football experience helps out on a crowded street car."—Washington Star.

"Employer—Have you any excuse to offer for speaking so impolitely? Office Boy—Yes, sir; I forgot that I wasn't talking over the telephone. "Your apology is accepted."—Life.

"Father," said the small boy, "what is an optimist?" "An optimist, my son, is a man who believes the weather bureau when it says the weather is favorable and who congratulates himself on its unreliability when they are not."—Washington Star.

"Did Bulger say anything unkind of me when he visited you?" "Yes," said the Boston girl. "I'm sorry, but he did. He called you an epidermal."—Judge.
