

BIG PLAYERS EXCHANGED

NEW YORK AND BOSTON TEAMS OF NATIONAL TRADE

Bowerman, Ferguson, McGann, Brown and One Other Giant Go for Tenney, Needham and Bridwell

By Associated Press. NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—One of the largest exchanges of players ever recorded in major league baseball was effected at the conclusion of the National league meeting here today when the New York National league team exchanged Frank Bowerman, catcher; Cecil Ferguson, pitcher; Daniel McGann, first baseman; George Brown, right fielder, and either William Dahlen, shortstop, or John Hannifan, substitute, for Fred Tenney, first baseman; Thomas Needham, catcher, and Alfred Bridwell, shortstop, all of the Boston National league team. The exchange was effected by John J. McGraw, manager of the New York club, and Joseph Kelley, the new manager of the Boston club.

Late tonight a report of the Boston club said that Dahlen would be accepted. With the passing of Bowerman, McGann, Dahlen and Brown there remains but a fragment of the famous ball team familiarly known as the Giants, who captured the pennant after fighting close to it for four or five years. Devlin and Seymour are the only fielders remaining who were in the old aggregation. Several of the pitchers, including Mathewson and McGinnity and Catcher Bresnahan, remain, and of these it has been said that McGinnity was likely to be displaced. There has also been some talk of trading Bresnahan, but in view of today's changes the plans regarding him will probably be dropped.

While many baseball enthusiasts will figure that Boston is the better of the deal McGraw differs with them. All he would say tonight when questioned regarding this aspect of the wholesale house-cleaning was that time would show that he had the better of the deal. It is more than likely that internal dissensions were largely responsible for the changes made by McGraw. The men he has secured from Boston—Tenney, Needham and Bridwell—are thoroughly seasoned players and have stood close to the front rank in their respective positions.

NEARBY IS HANGED FOR MURDER OF TEACHER. Slayer of Kindergarten Instructor in Chicago Pays the Penalty for Terrible Crime on Gallows

By Associated Press. CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—Richard F. Walton, a negro, was hanged here today for the murder of Mrs. Louise Grant, white, last September.

Mrs. Grant was a kindergarten instructor and had for many years managed schools of this character in connection with local churches. Intending to move from one apartment to another, she had employed Walton to assist in packing some of her furniture. At night Walton, with the intention of stealing some of the valuables, climbed through a window and strangled Mrs. Grant in bed.

Walton has repeatedly declared he was anxious to be hanged as soon as possible and has made a great show of religious conversion.

RUSSIAN EDITOR MARKED FOR DEATH

Reactionaries Send Letter of Geneva Warning Louis Miller of New York That He Is to Be Killed

By Associated Press. GENEVA, Dec. 13.—The police here have discovered in the postoffice, en route to New York, a notice of the passage of the death sentence on the editor of the New York Russian Warheit, Louis Miller, by the Russian reactionaries. The notice reads as follows: "The Geneva section of the Union of Russian People, at its last assembly, took the following decision: 'The editor of the journal Warheit, Louis Miller, is condemned to death for publishing secret governmental documents. The promptest execution of this judgment is confided to three specialists of the fighting organization. We hereby inform you this resolution is in conformity with our statutes.'"

The documents contained in the above notification refer to the death of a revolutionist. A letter threatening death to Louis Miller, editor of the Warheit, and supposed to have been written by Russian revolutionists, was received by him last month. It was in a black-bordered envelope and was dated Geneva, Switzerland, October 31. The letter was signed by M. Fedatov and said that the Geneva department of the Union of Russian People had decided that Miller, who was known as M. Hander, while a revolutionist, was condemned to death for aiding the terrorist organization, and for printing documents of the government.

DOCTORS SAVE FIREMEN OVERCOME BY GASES

Thrilling Scenes Enacted During Blaze in Candy Factory—Priests Rush In to Administer Last Rites

By Associated Press. NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—The novel sight of a score of physicians impelling their lives to rescue firemen from a burning building was presented in East Eighteenth street tonight, when one of the six buildings of the Huyler Candy Manufacturing company was filled with deadly gases, generated in some way by a fire which started among a pile of paper boxes.

Fifteen firemen were overcome and of these three are in a critical condition. One Vernon McKenna, it was said, could hardly survive the night. The damage by fire was comparatively small.

The fire broke out on the tenth floor and the first firemen to reach the spot tumbled so rapidly that their matches could not remove all, and then the physicians took hold, half carrying, half dragging the senseless men from the building. Several others were rescued by firemen.

When the fire started fifty employees were in the building, but it is thought all escaped. Several priests also braved the flames and smoke and administered the last rites to firemen who appeared to be dying after the fire was controlled by streams thrown from adjoining buildings.

LOVE GUIDES SHIPS, REUNITING FAMILY

Captain Neilsen Meets in Harbor Vessel Bearing Wife from Norway. They Were 9300 Miles Apart

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Cupid must have sat on the end of the jibboom of the Marpesia, a Norwegian four-masted ship, all the way from Buenos Ayres, nearly 6000 miles, for when the vessel, after two months of baffling winds and heavy head gales, arrived at the entrance of Gedney channel, just at the time that the C. F. Tietgen, from Christiania, Norway, took on her pilot, Christian Neilsen, commandant, both account for the meeting of both vessels in no other way.

On the Tietgen was Mrs. Neilsen, whom he had not seen for a year, coming from their home in Norway to meet the meeting of the two ships bearing man and wife, for steam and sail had spanned a gulf of more than 9300 miles on September 13, when the Marpesia left Buenos Ayres.

Mrs. Neilsen planned as best she knew to arrive here before her husband's ship, and left Christiania, Norway, on November 9. Nothing had been heard from the ship since she left the Argentine port. There was a glad meeting when the Marpesia hailed into the East Bay yesterday, and, except to extend a warm greeting to the newspaper men, Captain Neilsen was too happy to talk much.

"I haven't recovered from the surprise yet," he said. "To think that my wife should start from home with me on the high seas trying hard to make New York and we should both meet as if by arrangement at the entrance to the ship channel! There must have been some miracle about the trip, for there were many days when I was discouraged by the baffling winds and our long tacks, with hardly any headway made toward the north."

While here the Marpesia will be changed to a four masted bark, and the two of her pet pigs on the ship, which the crew allege, awake the captain each morning at four bells by squealing for sugar, will be ended.

TRIPLETS ARE BORN IN HOME OF POVERTY

All Are Boys and Their Combined Weight is Twenty-five Pounds. Neighbors Come to Aid of Family

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—In circumstances, far from being an argument against race suicide, three boys were born to Mrs. Max Roseman yesterday. The advent of the youngsters found the father, who is taller, out of work, and the family larger empty except for the small donations of neighbors. Despite these untoward circumstances the three infant Rosemans are well and able to cry as vigorously as might be expected from a twenty-year-old trio.

Roseman lives at No. 240 Clinton street. He has been in America for five years and did well enough at his trade to bring his wife and two children from Russia a year and a half ago. A few weeks ago he lost his job, and since then the family has existed as precariously as few, even in the teeming lower east side, are forced to live.

Nevertheless, when a boy was born yesterday, there was rejoicing in the Roseman family, although it was not entirely clear how the augmented family was to be supported. Dr. Meyer Schwartz, of No. 213 Henry street, who was called, noted the condition of the family and began to make arrangements for bettering it. Four hours later, before he could put the machinery of charity in motion, he was summoned again to the Roseman home. This time he found even more need for his services in welcoming into the world two more babies, both boys.

By this time the news began to sift through the neighborhood. The women who came in to nurse the boys were called, and between a agents and neighbors the mother and children were cared for properly. The father has redoubled his efforts in seeking employment.

Between New Book Covers

Are a substantial one, both pure and good. Round these, with tendril strong as flesh and blood. Our pastime and our happiness will grow. —Wordsworth.

"No other works of D'Annunzio, not even the beautiful 'Francesca,' reach such heights," says Charlotte Porter of "The Daughter of Jorio," in her introduction to the authorized translation of the Italian dramatist's pastoral tragedy, which Little, Brown & Co. are publishing in handsome style.

The December issue of Suburban Life contains a number of articles which are specially suited to the holiday season. These are introduced by a "Christmas Toast" by J. Horro McFarland. There is an illustrated poem by Arthur Gutterman entitled "Spying on Santa Claus;" Booker T. Washington contributes "Christmas in Old Virginia," an account of the plantation festivities in the days before the Civil War. This has an illustrated article called "Bringing Holiday Cheer to City Waifs." Other special features of this number are: "The Pleasures of Winter Photography," by C. K. Tucker; "A Christmas Feast for the Birds and Squirrels," by Eleanor R. Thatcher; "An Out-of-the-Ordinary Christmas Gift," by Mary Taylor-Ross, describing different sort of aquaria and goldfish, and "Should the Young Man Who Works in the City be a Commuter?" a symposium of the opinions of prominent business men on this subject.

The December McClure's abounds in strong features. Burton J. Hendrick's "Great American Fortunes" is the history of the exploitation by a few men of the rich country in the west. The present installment deals with Ryan and the Metropolitan Railway company. Cleveland Moffett describes the evolution of the oldest of toys, the spinning-top, into the gyro-car, which bids fair to revolutionize the life of the world. Harry Smith Williams follows this up with "The Gyroscope and Ocean Travel." President Elliot of Harvard, in "The Canadian Act," gives an interesting account of what the Dominion government has done to aid the prevention and settlement of strikes in mines and industries connected with public utilities. Professor Lowell's "The Planet Mars" is the very latest word from our neighbor planet. "Some American College Boys," by Cannon Mackenzie, is a thrilling account of the Cornell university fire, which proves that heroism is not dying out. This number is notable for the beginning of a serial by Mary Stewart Cutting, called "The Wayfarers." Percival Gibbon, Herminie Templeton and Mary S. Watts each contribute a characteristic short story, while "Charley-fom-the-Orphan-Home," by Augusta Kortrecht, introduces a new writer of much promise.

The thousands of Americans who laughed over Gelett Burgess' admirable essay, "Are You a Bromide?" will read with keen relish his sparkling motor story, "Courtesy of the Road," which serves to open the Red Book Magazine for Christmas. No less interesting, in the same sort is F. L. Steadley's tale of the border, "The Toy Amassador." A tense little sketch is "In the Dark." A story that contains all the coldness of the far north is "The Sign of the Silent One," by Newton A. Fjessli. The "Christmas Gift," by William Hamilton Osborne, breathes the very spirit of the Christmas season. An elopement by balloon forms the basis of Harriet Gaylord's sprightly narrative of "The Elopement of the Christmas Eve," which is a wife's education of her husband is cleverly disclosed in "Reclamation," by Alma Martin Estabrook.

The real Santa Claus must have come straight from his toy shop to pose for the cover of the Christmas number, which has painted for the Christmas number of the Circle. Printed in four colors, it is one of the most attractive covers of the holiday season. The cover, however, is but an introduction to a wealth of Yuletide good things for the Christmas number. There is appropriate fiction by such notable writers as Gilbert Parker, Maude L. Radford, Frank H. Sweet, Georgia Wood Pangborn and Egerton Castle, in all a splendid collection of Christmas tales.

Putnam's Monthly for December opens with the first of a series of papers by Charles H. Caffin, collectively entitled "Painting and the Word." As this is a Christmas number, the article is appropriately devoted to "The Word of the Christian Faith." What Mr. Caffin proposes to examine in these papers is the utterance through the spoken or written word of common or collective ideas, and its influence upon painting in different periods. The text lends itself readily to pictorial illustration, and the present article is accompanied by a reproduction in colors of Raphael's Sistine Madonna (frontispiece) and half-tones plates reproducing famous masterpieces by Albert Andree del Sarto, Murillo, Rembrandt and more modern men.

A critical but heartily appreciative paper on John Greenleaf Whittier appears over the signature of H. W. Boynton. It is a propheet of the Whittier centenary, and contains a series of papers showing the influence upon painting in different periods. The text lends itself readily to pictorial illustration, and the present article is accompanied by a reproduction in colors of Raphael's Sistine Madonna (frontispiece) and half-tones plates reproducing famous masterpieces by Albert Andree del Sarto, Murillo, Rembrandt and more modern men.

In the Nautilus for December one of the leading articles is "What I Know About the New Thought," by Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Mrs. Quinn writes "On the Man with the Hoe," with an interesting side light on Edwin Markham. Adelaide Keen's "Habit of Happiness," and "The Road to the Kingdom of Heaven," by W. R. C. Latson, M. D., are worth while; and Prof. Edgar L. Larkin's "The New Movement." Among the special features are a concise short story of Christmas and the new thought, "Miss Sally's Affinity," by E. Louise Liddell; a good bit of verse, "Be Still and Know," by Grace MacGowan Cooke, and "A Christmas Meditation," by Florence Morse Kinsley.

Christmas stories that cheer the heart are to be found in the Housekeeper for December. Mrs. C. N. Williamson contributes a tale, "The Brown Man," the charm of which reminds one of Dickens. "A Christmas Clock" is from the inimitable pen of Gelett Burgess. A well illustrated article by W. G. Fitz-Gerald tells where the children's toys are made. "The Christmas Prophecy of Isaiah," by Frances Squire, is exceptionally well written. The Christmas dinner, not by Harry and is ably described by culinary experts. Of course, there are the many helpful departments.

Since the appearance of an article by Gertrude Atherton on the political situation of San Francisco in a recent issue of Harper's Weekly, election day has passed and the outcome been decided. The result, a victory for the reform party, involves Mrs. Atherton's efforts in a way of which any worker for a cause, whether man or woman, might be proud. A straightforward statement of facts, the article immediately became a campaign document. It was copied in the newspapers, drawn upon for speeches and treated as valuable source of information generally. The reform party made use of it in the real campaign way, and posted placards which read: "Read Gertrude Atherton's article on San Francisco in Harper's Weekly before you vote!" This is an exceptional part for a woman who is distinctly not a political agitator to play in a political fight.

The Christmas number of Scribner's Magazine contains many rich and beautiful illustrations in color, notably "The Child in Fairyland," a series of drawings by Sarah S. Stilwell, fanciful and graceful, which is accompanied with verses by Edith B. Sturgis. Another striking series of illustrations accompanies "Josiah Wedgwood: American Sympathizer and Portrait Maker," by R. T. H. Halsey, who for many years has been making this collection, which is probably the finest in existence, has made a selection of portraits of particular interest to Americans. These are reproduced with the blue background and the white portrait in relief, with all the beauty and delicacy of the originals.

The Christmas issue of Woman's Home Companion is a sumptuous magazine, with several pages in color. The cover is reproduced from an exquisite painting by Jessie Wilcox Smith of a mother and babe. The number is full of Christmas stories, Christmas pictures by prominent artists and hundreds of Christmas suggestions of all sorts—practical, fanciful, unique. The stories include "A Wild Boar Rampant," by Robert Barr; "An Undiscovered Siddons," by Clara Wallace Flynn; "Captain Gilly," by Mary Catherine Lee; "The Lost Spirit of Christmas," by Grace S. Richmond; "Frederika's First," by William Hamilton Osborne; "The Little Water Boy," by Julia Hempstead Bull, and "A Bachelor's Christmas Eve," by Marguerite Campion.

IN THE MAGAZINES

The advent of the December magazines seems to bring the holiday season suddenly near because of the various "Christmas" subjects, both in fact and fiction, with which these current periodicals are filled. Uncle Remus' Magazine for December has several distinctly Christmas features, beginning with a most appropriate editorial by Joel Chandler Harris, which he calls "Santa Claus and the Fairies," and in which he elaborates the need of a strong belief in the Christmas saint. The "Christmas" features of the magazine are: "The Christmas Eve," by Edith B. Sturgis. Another striking series of illustrations accompanies "Josiah Wedgwood: American Sympathizer and Portrait Maker," by R. T. H. Halsey, who for many years has been making this collection, which is probably the finest in existence, has made a selection of portraits of particular interest to Americans. These are reproduced with the blue background and the white portrait in relief, with all the beauty and delicacy of the originals.
