MRS. CORNELIUS COLE of Colegrove entertained a group of woman friends at luncheon yesterday, covers being laid for Countess Wachtmeister, Mrs. George Drake Ruddy, Mrs. J. W. Mitchell, Mrs. William Babcock and her charming niece, Miss Cuneo of Cleveland, Ohio, and Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Emma Cole-Brown.

The McMillans Going North Paymaster Ervin A. McMillan and Mrs. McMillan, whose marriage was the social event of February 12 and who have been spending the winter portion of their honeymoon with Mrs. McMillan's parents, Judge and Mrs. J. S. Chapman of Soto street, are leaving today for their home at Vallejo, just across the bay from Mare Island where Passed Assistant Paymaster Raymond McMillan is stationed.

Who Cares? "Out in Minneapolis hostesses last month had soft, fluffy pussy willows as table decorations at small teas. The mild weather even pushed these harbingers of spring into bloom before Christmas, and they were mixed with holly as holiday offerings." Exchange. Well, who cares? We had orange blossoms and violets and lilies and roses and carnations and geraniums, and now we have the poppies. Huh!

Miss Leonard Complimented Miss Hilbreth Maier was hostess yesterday at a buffet luncheon at which Miss Amy Leonard was special guest.

Business Women to Dance The California Business Woman's association will be informally entertained the evening of February 29 at Hotel Hinman by Mrs. M. H. Connell, assisted by the officers of the club. The program includes dancing and cards.

The Time of the Empire Women who love beautiful gowns—and, honest Injun, I believe that class is interested in the time of the empire—will be interested in the returning of "Mary Manning, the beautiful," who will reproduce next week for the delight of Los Angeles theater-goers the splendid beauty of that lovely Betsy Patterson who won the heart of the Emperor Napoleon's brother Joseph.

The Manning gown is said to be creations of lace, silk and brocade, but to the uninitiated her frocks appear to be constructed of that stuff of which dreams are made. "Betsy" claims that one responds to the dignity of some gowns and to the softness of others, and that she can feel all the sauciness of Betsy Patterson creep over her as she dons her frocks. One can readily imagine, then, as she sees Betsy trip on in the first act, how the frock is a part of the woman, for it quivers and scintillates with every change of mood of the wearer. The first gown is of soft, clinging silk, outlining the graceful figure in strong relief. Its color is a blend of the blue of the sky and green of the sea—like a cobweb with the sun shining through it. It is empire styled, with a corsege, filled in with a bit of lace. The sleeves are only a puff at the shoulders, and the skirt reaches to the ankles. A big poke bonnet, with bobbing ostrich and silk and brocade, rests for a time on the top of the pretty curly head, then anon droops to the neck. Betsy Patterson makes her entrance, bare-footed—no little shoes, no stockings, but in the sandals of attendant cavaliers. As the act proceeds the footwear is adjusted. The second dress of this act is a satin one of delicate violet tint, with foot border of gold applique in fancy design. The poke bonnet is adorned with silk and ribbon, and an aligrette to make a bird of paradise die with envy. A green fuzzy veil is strung across the top, but is afterward removed to be bestowed as a souvenir upon one of her ardent gallants. The green scarf of the first costume, a scarf that is like a bit of sea foam, and which has border of hydrangeas in colors, had been slung upon a nearby bench. This is again taken up and thrown around the shoulders. Tiny parasols are used with both gowns; with the first a green one, with the second a violet.

The dress in the second act is one of shimmering white satin with pearl and pearly garniture. A silver and pearl

BURBANK GIRLS PERFORM AMAZING CLIMBING FEAT

MISS ESTELLE GILMORE AND MISS INEZ HAGAN OF THE BURBANK STOCK COMPANY

If you were a pretty girl and another pretty girl dared you, would you don a natty sailor boy's uniform of the musical comedy, not naval, variety— And would you climb fire escapes and ladders to the top of an unfinished ten-story building— And when you had arrived at the top, would you make your way perilously out on a steel beam, 160 feet or more over the sidewalk, there to shake hands with the other girl while a photographer snapped your picture— Would you, on a dare?

Clubmen Cheer Girls The girls were roundly cheered for their heroism and not a few of the cheers came from the windows of the exclusive Jonathan club, across the street. The hazardous climb was made at the noon hour, just when the rooms were crowded, and it didn't take those clubmen long to discover that something was happening.

The girls were roundly cheered for their heroism and not a few of the cheers came from the windows of the exclusive Jonathan club, across the street. The hazardous climb was made at the noon hour, just when the rooms were crowded, and it didn't take those clubmen long to discover that something was happening. They heard the cheers from the street and a minute later every available foot of window space was occupied. The Jonathan club windows are considerably lower than the top of the Kerckhoff structure, but they still presented a good view of the climbers. From somewhere somebody dug up a pair of field glasses and almost mobbed by the crowd, each man evidently wanting to use those glasses himself. The girls took it all as a joke, however. The audience didn't rattle them. They wouldn't be daunted. You can't see the height make them dizzy.

Once they had made their way out on those slender beams they seemed to enjoy the sensation, and the photographer requested to snap them there not once but in a number of poses. Perched high above the street, where the sound of the hurrying traffic below came only as a distant rumble, Inez Ragan proudest on one foot, leading her eyes with her hand and gazing earnestly into the distance.

Looking for the Fleet "I'm looking for 'My Yankee Sailor Boy' with the fleet," she announced. "That fleet now is on the high seas and I ought to be able to see it from here." Joseph Montrose, who was peaking through his camera, raised his head to grin his appreciation. "You can't see the high seas, dear," rejoined Eldred Gilmore, the girl who wouldn't be daunted. "You can't see the high seas," she continued sweetly. Miss Ragan was crushed temporarily, but she evened up the score later on.

The third act gown is suitable for voyaging—a golden satin almost covered with a cloak trimmed with narrow bands of sable. A tiny, delicately chic bonnet, also sable, fitted closely to the head. This is later changed to a wide spreading Napoleonic hat in honor of the country which Betty expects soon to visit. It is extremely becoming above the mass of tiny dark curls.

The yellow gown in the fourth act is covered with a gray redingote of uncut velvet, with high collar, faced with lace. Big buttons and button holes extend from the throat to the end at the feet. A very large picture-que hat, with graceful nodding gray feathers, is a frame for the sad and pale face. Betty's brightness as she looks at the act draws toward its close is reflected in her costume, as she trembles with her renewed happiness.

SIX BOYS ARRESTED CHARGED WITH THEFT Ted Hall, Ralph McKee, Guy Morley, Harry Morley, Fred Johnson and Perry Borden were arrested yesterday charged with theft. The boys are alleged to have robbed a wagon of $20 worth of candy. They secured four cans and eight boxes of the sweets. After eating all they could they stored the remainder in different places so they could draw on the supply when they were hungry.

CROWD GOES TO IMPERIAL

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MAKES BIG HIT

WAITING LIST ENOUGH FOR AN ENCORE

Lack of Extra Diners Prevents Adding More Pullmans to Special on the Southern Pacific Railroad

On 157 people gathered at the Arcade depot last evening to attend the chamber of commerce imperial excursion. The excursion was scheduled to leave at 8:30 o'clock and return to Los Angeles Sunday morning "at breakfast time."

Although the train did not leave until that late hour yet a large number of the excursionists gathered at the depot an hour earlier to arrange about berths. "We have four and a half Pullmans already arranged for," said one of the chamber of commerce officials who went on the trip. "That is, those who had friends on the train were permitted to pair off and go in the same section together. "But one Pullman and a half remains, and those going on these cars have to stand on the hat for the upper or lower berths. Fat men always want the lower berths, but we have to be sure to give each one a fair chance. Many will occupy the upper berth only, standing on the very top of the car, as it will be cooler that way, and some pretty warm weather is anticipated in Imperial. Doubtless those who will be left fellows, nothing like Taft in build."

Excursion of 157 Travelers One hundred and fifty-four of the chamber of commerce attended the excursion, the other three being railroad officials of the Southern Pacific. Some on the "waiting list" came to the depot last night to get a few of the excursionists would back out at the last minute, then they would be able to take their places. The waiting list, including all who desire to go on the excursion, numbered about 200. A trip is made is enough already to fill two more cars. "We could not put any more Pullmans on the train at the passengers provided with tickets last night was composed of James Slauson, chairman; Percy H. Clark, Charles W. Fleming, L. Kimble, M. Hamaker, J. C. Kays and E. J. Brown. "The duty of this committee to arrange the distribution of tickets and allotment of berths, which required no little manipulation. "The other committee received the party from the hands of Mr. Slauson's "deputies," and will see the excursionists through the city trip while they are in the city. "The committee in charge of the excursion is composed of Willis Booth, John E. Coffin, E. P. Boshyghel, Lee A. McConnell and Frank Wiggins. The Trouble Begins "How did your song go tonight, dear?" she remarked. Now this "dear" is always the signpost of trouble, and Miss Gilmore drew herself up to meet the onslaught. "I thought you wouldn't be daunted," continued Miss Ragan. "Really, the song is too good, you know, to get seasick over." "That started it," Miss Gilmore denied with heat that she had ever been seasick in her life. Miss Ragan ventured the opinion that she couldn't go up stairs in an elevator and look out of a window at the top without feeling "sort of qualmsish." Miss Gilmore asserted her ability to climb to the top of the tallest building in the city and to go where Miss Ragan couldn't follow her. "I don't follow," retorted Miss Ragan. "You follow me I dare you!"

MOTHER DROPS DEAD WHILE READING LETTER FROM SON The many friends of Rev. Daniel Daley, one of the assistant priests at St. Vibiana's cathedral, have been saddened to learn of the sudden death of his mother, Mrs. Mary Daley, at Dover, N. H. Father Daley left Tuesday to attend the funeral of his mother. Although Mrs. Daley had been in poor health for some time, her death came as a sudden shock to her son, who is the only surviving member of the family. She had just received a letter from her son, which she had read, when she dropped dead, death being caused by heart failure. Father Daley was for some time curate at the Church of the Sacred Heart, and has for some months been connected with the cathedral.

MONGOLIAN ASKS AID TO ESTABLISH NEW SYSTEMS Prominent Chinese Diplomat Would Found Banks, Railroads and Other Progressive Institutes Involving Vast Sums

By Associated Press. PEKIN, Feb. 27.—Kolochin, a Mongolian who has been prominent in the efforts of his countrymen for the reorganization of Mongolia, has asked the Chinese government to aid him in establishing in Mongolia a system of banks, railroads and mines, a local constabulary and a diplomatic bureau, a system of education and an army. The Chinese government continues to approve schemes for progress that involve the expenditure of vast sums of money. In the absence of any financial reform, however, the finance department will not take into consideration plans for any reorganization of the army or the navy.

GIRL'S DYING CONFESSION LEADS TO TWO ARRESTS By Associated Press. ELSBERRY, Mo., Feb. 27.—As the result of a deathbed confession made to her mother by Miss Lizzie Gleason, a school teacher, 22 years of age, Dr. W. A. Hemplin was arrested yesterday and charged over to the grand jury. Rev. C. W. Gow, a Methodist clergyman for whom a warrant was issued and who fled from the city, was arrested last night about sixteen miles north of here. He protested his innocence.

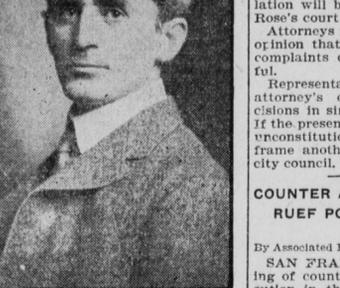

BOGUS CHECK MAN SAYS WAY OUT OF SAN FRANCISCO JAIL By Associated Press. SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 27.—Elmer Wellington, alias Harrison, being held for passing bad checks, escaped from the city prison last night by sawing the bars of his cell and crawling out of a hole in which ventilators for the prison were installed. It is the belief of Chief of Police Biggley that Wellington's wife slipped him the saw yesterday when she called on him. A thorough search of the town for the prisoner failed to locate him.

Liquor Limit Law Invalid By Associated Press. JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 27.—The supreme court today decided that the law passed by the last legislature prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors within five miles of any state institution having 1500 students enrolled is unconstitutional. The law applied only to the Missouri State university at Columbia.

HEWITT FRAMING ANTI-TRUST LAW

Designed to Prevent Restraint of Trade, Forcing Prices, Rebating or Controlling Local Commodities

LESLEIE R. HEWITT

Los Angeles will follow the lead of Portland in looking into local trusts if the city council is prepared to adopt an ordinance which City Attorney Leslie R. Hewitt has been asked to prepare. In Portland the ordinance was used in prosecuting the local furniture trust, but its provisions are sweeping. Several councilmen have told the city attorney that they are kindly disposed toward such an ordinance. "If the Cartwright law does not interfere with an anti-trust ordinance similar to Portland's I will frame such an ordinance for presentation to the city council," said Mr. Hewitt yesterday. "Whether we have the power will depend largely on the Cartwright law and I will make a thorough examination. "My idea is that we have the police power of the state invested in the city. The city has a wide latitude in California, the only restriction being where the state has legislated on similar questions. "It is, as I say, a question whether the Cartwright law will take the power from the city, and that I will know later. "The Portland measure makes it unlawful for any firm, corporation or association of persons to form a trust or combination in restraint of trade, and applies to selling, transporting, using, controlling any article, fixing standards of prices, refund or rebating, the penalties being from $50 to $500, with imprisonment of six months, each day to constitute a separate offense.

WOMAN WITH BABE ARRESTED BY POLICE IS CHARGED WITH SPEAKING ON STREETS Husband, Mother and Child Taken to Station, Where Friends Supply Bail—Multitude Cheers the Prisoners

"I am here to protest against our being denied the right of free speech on the public streets of Los Angeles," cried Mrs. Hazel Hubbard, who, baby in arms, attempted to address a crowd of several hundred persons assembled on Winsto street near Main shortly before 8 o'clock last night. Mrs. Hubbard had scarcely completed the sentence when she was told by the officers she was under arrest. The woman was greeted with great applause upon mounting the small box which had been placed in the street for the speakers. As soon as the officers approached the stand the cheers of the multitude was deafening. Forrest Hubbard was the first speaker. He started his speech at 7:30 o'clock. He spoke fully twenty minutes before the police appeared on the scene. He was arrested amid the cheers of the throng. As soon as he stepped from the stand his place was taken by his wife, who had scarcely time to speak a sentence before she, too, was arrested. At the sight of the child in Mrs. Hubbard's arms the crowd could not contain itself, but broken into a loud and prolonged applause. It was several seconds before it quieted down so the woman could be heard.

Invites Crowd to Meeting After the arrests had been made, A. F. Lindwall mounted the box and asked the audience to assemble in Mercantile place. The prisoners were placed aboard a car and taken to First and Main streets, from where the party walked to the central police station. The arrests were made by Patrolmen Gilpin and Weiss, acting under the orders of Sergeants Adams and Heath. The little tot who was in its mother's arms when she was arrested was placed on the counter at the desk sergeant's window. The child smiled at the big policeman and seemed to enjoy the situation immensely. Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard were released on bail and told to appear in Police Justice Austin's court at 9 o'clock this morning. The people began to arrive at Winsto and Main streets about 7 o'clock, and by 7:30 there were between 350 and 400 persons present. In the assemblage were many handsomely gowned women. The gathering was orderly and listened intently to the speakers, applauding frequently when stress was made on the ordinance which prohibited that right which the constitution of the United States gave them.

Will Speak Again The location of the next speaking will be at First and Broadway. "We selected that location for the purpose of aiding the police in arresting us," said a prominent Socialist. It is scarcely a block from the central station, and will facilitate the conveying of our speakers to the jail. Saturday night the committee has arranged for six speakers to make addresses at First and Broadway. From the number of persons who crowded the courtroom in police court yesterday morning it is evident the Socialists and their sympathizers in Los Angeles are evincing a lively interest in the proceedings.
