Burglar Who Shot Former Chief Eludes Capture for Twelve Hours Although Five Hundred Heavily Armed Men Follow His Trail of Blood Throughout City—Caught at Home of Friend as He Sought Aid

CAPTAIN WALTER H. AUBLE, for twenty-one years a member of the Los Angeles police department, is dead from the bullet of an assassin, and Carl D. Sutherland, who fired the shots that killed the police officer, was hunted down and captured by the police twelve hours after he committed the murder.

"Dead or alive" was the order given to the officers who were searching for the slayer, and dead they took him, but it was by his own hand that he died, for rather than face the hangman's noose at San Quentin he committed suicide, as he had threatened to do.

When apprehended last night by Sergt. Frank Benedict and Patrolmen Smith and Marden, Sutherland swallowed poison. The capture of Sutherland ended a chase taken part in by 500 keen men trained in the tracking of criminals, who searched high and low and far and wide for the assassin.

Capt. Auble was shot at 9:35 o'clock yesterday morning while trying to arrest Sutherland, who was a known criminal wanted for a contemplated burglary. Exactly six hours later, or at 3:35 o'clock p. m., the wounded police captain breathed his last in the receiving hospital at the city jail with the members of his devoted family at his bedside and a number of lifelong friends and brother officers standing near.

Sutherland, who fired the shots which killed Capt. Auble, escaped immediate capture by a chain of fortuitous circumstances against which no human agency could have provided. So close and keen, however, were the officers on his track that twelve hours after the shooting of Auble he was run down and captured at the house of a friend to whom he was going presumably for aid to escape.

Charles Weihe, this friend, horrified at the utterly depraved and criminal nature of the man, which, for the first time he became aware of, gave every assistance to the officers of the law, and it is due to information which he furnished the police that Sutherland was finally taken.

Within an hour after the shooting of Capt. Auble, Chief of Police Kern, Sheriff William Hammel and United States Marshal Leo Youngworth had covered the city and county of Los Angeles with officers searching for the murderer. It was the fortune of Detectives Ritch and Roberds to secure the clew which ended in the taking of Sutherland.

As soon as it was ascertained that Sutherland had been employed as a waiter in both the California and University clubs Chief Kern detailed detectives to find out the man's friends and acquaintances among his fellow workers. Detectives Ritch and Roberds found Charles Weihe, formerly employed as a waiter at both the clubs at the time Sutherland worked there.

Weihe was perhaps the most intimate acquaintance the dead criminal had in Los Angeles, but as soon as he learned of the crime committed by Sutherland he volunteered to the officers all the information in his power, and during the entire afternoon, in company with Ritch and Roberds, he scoured the town in search of the guilty man.

Finally, as the day grew into evening, he stated to the detectives that in his opinion Sutherland would either come to his house when it grew dark or else go to the house of another friend at 414 South Grand avenue, for assistance. He advised the officers to cover both points and stated that he believed that such action would lead to the capture of the criminal.

This was reported to Chief Kern and he ordered a detail of officers to both places to lie in wait for Sutherland. Sergt. Benedict, Patrolmen Bert Smith and Leo W. Marden were sent to the Weihe home at Seventy-seventh street and Moneta avenue.

To the South Grand avenue house Detectives Ritch and Roberds were sent to keep watch. It was at the Weihe home, however, that Sutherland came as soon as it was dark.

Where he had hidden in the meantime after leaving his room on Georgia street is not known, but he probably lay in the brush in vacant lots near Ascot park or in the empty barns and stables at that place.

SUTHERLAND WALKS INTO POLICE TRAP The Weihe home is a small four-room California cottage surrounded by a high board fence on three sides. Believing that Sutherland would come along a path from the south the officers took position on that side of the house against the fence and within the shadow of some trees. Eight o'clock came and the much-wanted criminal had not appeared. Nine o'clock struck from the bell in a nearby house and still there was no sign of the man. A few minutes after 9 o'clock, Sergt. Benedict saw a form approaching along the path. "Is that the man?" he asked Weihe, who stood at his side. "I cannot tell, but I think it is," he replied. As the man approached nearer Benedict again asked Weihe if it was Sutherland.

By this time the man was near enough to be recognized and Weihe replied in the affirmative. Benedict waited until Sutherland had approached within thirty feet of him and then stepped from the shadow of the fence. Leveling a shotgun loaded with buckshot at his breast Benedict cried, "Throw up your hands!" Like a flash Sutherland's right hand flew to a level with his

HOSTS TRAVERSE HISTORIC PATHS

OLD MONTEREY SCENE OF GRAND CELEBRATION

Famous Landmarks, Including Colton Hall, Attract Crowds of Native Sons and Daughters from Many Cities

MONTEREY, Cal., Sept. 9.—Never before has Monterey, the first capital and for a while the chief city of the state, witnessed such a splendid pageant as that which today, in commemoration of the admission of California into the Union, passed through its crowded streets to historic Colton hall, where was framed the original constitution of the commonwealth. Thousands of Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West, with many pioneers of an earlier generation, marched by landmarks of national interest and through the Presidio, where Fremont's troops once were quartered. All sections of the state were represented, though the greatest number came from San Francisco and other northern cities. Special trains arriving almost every hour for several days were laden to their capacity, and the surrounding country gave its quota of the great assemblage here today. Official headquarters were opened last night in the old customs house and everything was in readiness for the parade, constituting the main feature of the celebration.

Formation of Parade The parade was in five divisions. The first, headed with the Twentieth United States Infantry band and a detachment from that regiment, acted as escort to the grand officers of the Native Sons and Daughters and the pioneers of Monterey.

A number of floats preceded the second division, headed by the Monterey band, and composed of local and visiting parades of Sons and Daughters. The other three divisions were also made up of members of the order, all attractively uniformed or bearing flags and banners. The line of march was to the Presidio reservation, where the reviewing stand was placed and where the various parades passed before their grand officers, countermarching to Colton hall, where the literary exercises were held.

After music and a few opening remarks by Col. Martin, president of the day, William Jacks, mayor of Monterey, delivered an address of welcome which was responded to by Henry H. Lawrence, Charles M. Belshaw, grand president of the Native Sons, then made an address which received great applause. The oration of the day was delivered by Judge Davis. Aquatic sports and a baseball game occupied the afternoon.

There was a big illuminated celebration in the evening.

TERROR STALKS IN FIRE'S PATH

WHOLE TOWNS FIGHT FOREST CONFLAGRATIONS

THOUSANDS BATTLE FLAMES ALL DURING NIGHT

Minnesota Rangers Hourly Encompassed by Death and Wage Terrific Battle Against Ravaging Wall of Blaze

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 9.—It was a night of terror on the range and of deep anxiety in Duluth, but today conditions appear to have changed for the better. All yesterday afternoon and last night fires threatened half a dozen of the larger towns on the range.

More than 1000 residents of Hibbing fought back the flames all night long, stamping out brush fires and wetting down the fields about the town to keep the fire from spreading. Bovey had as hard a fight as Hibbing and the residents of Coleraine, two miles away, had to go to their assistance. All business was suspended and citizens, after packing a few valuables ready to flee at a moment's notice, fought the fires all night.

At Aurora, Nashauk, Buhl, Wrenshall and several smaller towns and villages the same story was reported. This morning the wind died down and the fires appear to be gradually burning themselves out. Great vigilance is still necessary, however.

Grand Marais Hemmed In

The most dramatic incidents of the entire fire developed around Grand Marais. The steamer Gopher, carrying a fifty members of the naval militia, left last night for Grand Marais to rescue the settlers along the north shore. The latter village is entirely shut off from communication by means of telephone or telegraph. The passengers on the last boat reported that the fire was rushing toward the lake and gradually hemming in the inhabitants of the little village, comprising about 600 people, mainly fishermen and Indians. There are many settlers along the lake shore. If the fire sweeps right up

BANKER KILLED BY COLLISION

SAN FRANCISCO FINANCIER LEAPS TO DEATH

Companions Remain in Machine When Horse Strikes It and Escape Harm—Victim Is Prominent

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—Philip Lillenthal, manager of the Anglo-American bank of this city, was killed this evening in an automobile accident near this city.

Mr. Lillenthal, in company with Gregory Wilenkin and Ignace Warschansky, both of Washington, D. C., was returning to the city, and on the Mission road they encountered a horse and buggy.

The horse became frightened and a collision followed. Mr. Lillenthal jumped out of the automobile, and in doing so received injuries which resulted shortly after in his death at St. Luke's hospital, where he was taken. His companions remained in the automobile and escaped injury.

Had Gone to Fight

Mr. Lillenthal had gone to the prize fight, which was held in the arena near the county line, accompanied by Gregory Wilenkin, the financial agent at Washington of the Russian government during the Japanese-Russian war, and Ignace Warschansky, also of St. Petersburg and well known in Washington.

After the fight the party again entered Mr. Lillenthal's automobile and started to the city along the broad Mission road.

The car was making good speed when the chauffeur decided to turn down a street leading directly to the east ferry. As he swung the machine around the corner a horse attached to a heavy sulky, coming in the opposite direction, became frightened and pranced in front of the car. Although the chauffeur brought his car to a stop very suddenly, he could not avoid the collision, and the horse was piled upon the fender of the automobile, falling to the ground.

The chauffeur and Messrs. Wilenkin and Warschansky jumped out at once and set about helping the driver of the

COAST CHAIRMEN MEETING CALLED

DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEEMAN ORDERS CONFERENCE

Aggressive Campaign to Be Waged in California, Oregon and Washington—Hope for Big Victory

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—With the object of perfecting an organization and developing plans for an aggressive campaign in the Pacific coast states, a meeting of the national committeemen and the chairmen of Oregon, California and Washington has been called by National Chairman Mack to meet in Portland, Ore., September 16.

The call was issued today following a conference of Mr. Mack and National Committeeman M. A. Miller of Oregon, who discussed in a general way a plan to make an effective campaign in the far west.

Mr. Mack is convinced from the reports which were made at the national committee meeting yesterday that there is an excellent chance of bringing the Pacific coast states into the Democratic column if a fight is made. John W. Kern is expected to make several speeches west of the Rockies, and Senator Gore of Oklahoma and Theodore A. Bell, who was temporary chairman of the Denver convention, will also speak in the far western territory.

While no definite announcement has been made at headquarters, it is generally believed by the national committeemen that the latter part of October will find Mr. Bryan campaigning along the Pacific.

MAN IN SUICIDE PACT ARRESTED

OMAHA BANK CLERK IS HELD UNDER BOND

Two Alleged Principals in Strange Criminal Combination Are Held While Police Investigate Mystery

OMAHA, Sept. 9.—"Dr. Frederick Rustin came to his death by a pistol shot fired by a person unknown" is the verdict of the coroner's jury which took up the greater part of two days hearing evidence.

The jury recommended that Charles E. Davis, the bank clerk who was yesterday implicated by Mrs. Abbie Rice, be held and that his conduct on the night of September 1 be thoroughly investigated.

Charles E. Davis was taken into custody late this afternoon and taken immediately before Justice of the Peace Crawford, where after arraignment he was released on bond signed by his brothers.

Today it was stated by Frederick E. Davis, brother of the man under arrest, that Charles E. Davis had been afflicted for about thirteen years by spells of insanity and that they had come on him periodically since that time. Mrs. Abbie Rice, whose statement yesterday caused the jury to investigate the Davis story, is also detained until further investigation can be made.
