MUSICAL QUALITY

Bear This In Mind

You can buy a Piano for less money than you would pay for a FAIRBANKS, but consider this:

When you buy a Fairbanks Piano you get a Piano that will last you for many years and that will be a source of pleasure to your friends and to your family—the trouble and worry over the cheap Piano that will not stay in tune, whose tone is harsh and whose action is not responsive outweigh many times over the difference in cost between the cheap Piano and the Fairbanks. You are not justified in buying the cheap one.

BESIDES—it is not necessary to pay cash for a Fairbanks—take advantage of our easy payment plan—pay a little down and balance $6 to $10 monthly. Many other Pianos are here, also, ranging in price $350 to $1500. Any one on terms.

around the course with greedy interest. Neck and neck they ran the entire distance, both drivers plying their whips relentlessly, and as they rounded the stretch and dashed past the stands for the first circuit of the track the two horses looked as evenly matched as horses could be. It required two laps of the half-mile track to complete the mile and the heat, and the second turn showed no relative change in their positions. West forcing his horses across the tape, winners by a very scant length, amid deafening cheers. West was accorded an ovation as he returned to the stable, but not a whit more enthusiastic than that which greeted Hogoboom a moment later as he trailed past the stands behind the Baldwin car. The time for the heat was 1:39 3/4.

In the second heat Hogoboom had the pole and the vantage that this gave him resulted in an desperate a finish as the first, with the honors of the heat resting with Carman's fours. Time, 1:40.

The third heat was the hardest fought and fastest run of the three, with horses but heads apart in the stretch distance until the stretch, when West, who had the pole for this heat, pulled away from the blue chariot, winning by nearly two lengths. Time 1:38 1/2.

Cowboys in Quadrille

Between the heats the cowboys reappeared and continued their exhibitions of riding. A quadrille, made up of two sets of eight horses and riders each, proved graceful, though noisy event, the cowboys whooping as they went through the variations of a lancers with all the energy and boisterousness that characterizes a cowboy dance in real cowboyland.

A holdup of the Ormande stage by masked desperadoes, likewise elicited the plaudits and excited the amusement of the crowds. An old stagecoach of '49, heavily laden with luggage and treasure, and guarded from the roof by desperate looking frontiersmen of the Wild Bill type and a real cowboy, was being held up, perhaps more, and perhaps less, on the track, its occupants shooting at imaginary foes behind whitewashed fence posts or hiding behind blue-coated patrolmen up in the center of the 200-odd rough riders congregated in front of the stands.

A Whoop-ee was shouted, hands were shaken all around and the stage again departed on its way, the cowboys scampering off amid a cloud of dust to the corral. When the track was clear, three or four cut-throat desperadoes, heavily masked, flourishing wicked looking Colts, were engaged up the track and deposited themselves in convenient places for the bloody work to follow. Soon the stage coach reappeared and the fusillade of bullets began in earnest. Rifles cracked and revolvers pinged and men bit the dust and stayed there. When the smoke cleared the treasure box of the express company was seen, gripped by one of the bandits, who scurried down the track. At this exciting moment a young woman, gracefully mounted on a white Arabian, was riding a handsome black, was seen engaged in the desperadoes in a one-sided duel. After several exchanges of shots she threaded her way through the outlaws and disappeared into the signal relief, which soon appeared in the shape of the calvacade of rough riders, who dashed madly into the imaginary danger perfectly reckless of life or limb, pulling triggers as fast as the automatics would work and met by a deadly fire from the desperadoes.

Spill Buckets of Gore

Right finally triumphed, after the dust settled, and dead outlaws strewn the track, while handsome young fellows in sheepskin and goat gloating over their defeated enemies.

The dead highwaymen were feelinglessly bundled into the badly riddled stage coach and the entire procession of horsemen and riders, led by the heavy hand-clapping and cheers of the amused spectators.

The game of push ball was quick to rivet the attention of the spectators, who had not fully appreciated the interest that the game possessed.

The game is played much as is football, with the exception that there are fewer players, and the ball is thrown on horses, while the Rugby is an immense oval of leather standing fully six feet high and inflated into perfect hardness.

Two fifteen minute halves were played, each side scoring one goal, leaving the game a tie. The team known as the "Circle Stars" was much lighter than their opponents, the "Black Cross," but they were every bit as good riders, and the work of the horses on both sides was almost human. In the first half by persistent charging the Black Crosses gradually pushed the ball over the goal for a score, the last gain being an exciting event in which the Black Cross horse, like a solid phalanx, pushed the Circle Stars for fully thirty feet. The Circle Stars reversed this gain in the next half by a splendid gain of forty feet.

The line-up of the two sides was as follows:

Good Car Service

Despite the fact that there were delays that undoubtedly proved annoying to many persons who were anxious to return to their homes the moment the day's events were over, it is still worthy of mention that the street railway and the railroad service between Los Angeles and Pasadena, in moving the thousands that came and went during the day, was eminently satisfactory.

So far as was reported, there was not a single accident to mar this phase of the day's crowd, which is nothing short of marvelous, when it is considered that fully 20,000, and perhaps 30,000 persons were transported either way during the course of the day. The conclusion of the program at Tournament park there was a wild scramble for cars which overtaxed the capacity of the cars, but inside of fifteen minutes the crowds were entirely picked up and being hurried to their homes.

thanks to the American people and to the press of the United States for their sympathy and aid.

These resolutions were ordered telegraphed to President Roosevelt for the people and to Melville E. Stone for the Associated Press.

ARRIVES AT MESSINA AND TELLS GRIM TALE OF RUIN AND DEATH

PARIS, Jan. 1.—The special correspondent of the Matin, who has just arrived at Messina after an adventurous journey on foot through the devastated Calabria section, sends a vivid story of the scenes of devastation.

The dispatch was sent by special boat to Naples, whence it was telegraphed here.

"I arrived at last at Messina after tramping thirty-one consecutive hours, covering a distance of 67 kilometers (41 miles). My nerves were fast recovering from the atrocious impression to which they were subjected, and my eyes will always retain the vision of death and slowly melting oppression them. A mournful silence covers the whole country like a funeral pall.

"I proceeded as far as Palmi by train and six or seven inhabitants accompanied me to Tropea, and I decided to reach Reggio at whatever cost.

"Two or three railroad firemen, cut off from home by the catastrophe, were at duty, were returning to seek news of the fate of their families.

"They proceeded me, brandishing red-hot iron rods, and the rocks fell in single file through the tunnel from Palmi to Bagnara, holding hands and stumbling over ballast heaps.

"The roof of the tunnel was cracked everywhere and now and then rocks fell in the niches of the track. Whole families were encamped around wood fires and smoking torches. Many of them were wounded.

"Men, women and children, stupefied by the catastrophe and crouching among the stones, looked at us with great glare as if their thoughts were wandering.

Find Families Lating Birds

"Later we came upon families roasting seabirds, which had been killed by the tempest and cast upon the beach.

"Others had the strangest objects packed in sacks. In reply to questions as to what had happened at Messina and Reggio, they made vague and desolate gestures and continued to stare at us like stalled oxen. After two hours' march we saw Bagnara perched on the spur of the mountain overhanging the sea.

"The country house of the mayor on the summit of a rock was half tumbled into the sea, but the mayor was safe. He was giving orders for the installation of a telegraph wire on a flat-roofed house in the town and in the surrounding country was in ruins. Little palaces were open like cut pomegranates in sections. In one I saw tumbling down a disordered pile of stones.

"Seated on the broken wall was a man selling bread at exorbitant prices amid a chorus of curses and maledictions. Another, demented, was trying to dig into the ruins with his fingers. How many dead, one thousand, two thousand—who knows?

"After eleven hours we had covered only thirty-four kilometers and were only at Scylla we decided to rest, but rest was impossible.

"The whole country side was completely blotted out. The roofs were standing, but interiors had collapsed, burying down the sleeping occupants."
