IS VICE PROTECTED IN LOS ANGELES?—XXVII

Resort Where Men Congregate to Rob Chance Victim and Plan Other Crimes. Runs Without Molestation Two Blocks from Police Headquarters

IF ANY good citizen of Los Angeles has curiosity regarding the places where crime is bred in this city let him take a stroll through the district which a Herald representative has been investigating during the past few weeks.

The Chief of Police and his Captain of Detectives either know that these robbers' dens are in existence or they must admit that the department is inefficient. The Herald does not believe the police force of this city is made up of incompetents.

Citizens who have given the subject a moment's thought know that the police department should be allowed to perform its duty unhampered. The scene at the police headquarters the night the Apex club was so mysteriously raided has made a deep impression on many citizens.

BY A. C. THURSTON WITHIN half an hour after making the acquaintance of a man whom I met in the Arizona pool room at 12 South Main street I was told I could assist in blowing a safe or robbing a house.

My new-found friend pretended to have much knowledge of affairs in Los Angeles and talked knowingly of the police and the things the department did not care to see or hear about.

The man was wearing a "Good Enough for Me" badge and was explaining to a teamster how the recall election was being handled.

Well, I guess I can give you up. There's a chance now and then and if you'll stick to me I'll take care of you in case there is too big a squeal or if the huns bulls (police) get too gay.

I explained that I had a little stake and wanted to rest a few days. My friend came to the conclusion I had "made a long jump" since the last job.

"How much do you know, kid; can you blow a gopher?" (I jumped to the conclusion he meant blow open a safe.) "No, I'm not a juicer man, but I have seen one. I've got enough money to play safe for a while," I explained.

At the mention of money the "good enough for me" man brightened up and asked me if I didn't want to sit in a game. He led the way straight back to the rear and up a small, rickety flight of stairs to a small room.

They were playing poker. Little attention was given us and my guide did not send across any signals. I was looked on as one of the crowd.

I have since tried to find Dunkirk Paddy, but he has not been in the Arizona den or in other gambling rooms I have visited. I do not know whether there is any truth in the story of the attempted robbery and gun fight at Santa Monica.

NEW CABINET MEMBERS TAKE OATH OF OFFICE

ALL BUT TWO ARE READY TO ASSUME DUTIES EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS CALLED BY TAFT

March 15 is Date Set for Lawmakers to Assemble—Effort Made to Change Time for Inauguration

WASHINGTON, March 6.—All but two of the nine members of President Taft's cabinet are now in office. Six, including Secretaries Knox, Meyer, Ballinger, Wilson and Nagel, and Postmaster General Hitchcock, took the oath of office in the cabinet room today.

It was announced today that Secretary Cortelyou would remain at the head of the treasury department until March 15.

President Taft issued a proclamation calling congress in extraordinary session March 15. While cabinet are now in office, the call hinted as to the purpose of the session, its object has heretofore been stated to be to revise the tariff and to transact no other business.

The weather calamity which overtook the national capital on inauguration day, however, has created a general public demand for a change of date for the inauguration that the prediction of congressional action on this seems to have been interpreted to discourage the continuance of that body.

President Taft conferred today with the joint committees of representatives of the national and state bodies of this organization.

The position of the executive is said to be that the cabinet are now appointed by President Roosevelt as a consulting body on the question of conservation of the natural resources of the country, and that the states indicated their willingness to cooperate by appointing consulting committees.

That such an arrangement can be carried on without congressional approval and without federal expense seems to be the decision reached.

President Taft, second day at the White House was one of handshaking and glad words. Delegation after delegation was received.

Methods Differ His methods in the art of "mixing" were demonstrated to be different from those of President Roosevelt.

The incident recalled to the new president the incident of his own oath at the inauguration.

The chief justice, reading the oath, obligated Mr. Taft "to faithfully execute the constitution." Instead of "the office of president," this slip has been a subject of pleantry between Mr. Taft and his secretary of state, who, it is said, remarked at the time in an undertone, to Mr. Taft, "Don't do it."

The oath, however, is considered sufficiently binding.

Mr. Taft had his first conference as president with the corps of Washington newspaper correspondents at the close of the day.

He greeted the score or more of men personally and stated that in fairness to himself it would be his policy that quotation marks should not embrace statements of news which might be given out at the White House.

He desired to make a formal statement of policy which would be read in congress or be embodied in a speech.

This policy is a continuation of that which has heretofore prevailed, it being considered the prerogative of the president not to be quoted in the public prints in any case except in formal statements.

Secretary Cortelyou announced tonight that he expected his successor, Franklin Mac Veagh, to reach Washington some time Saturday, and that the treasury portfolio would be transferred to him on Monday next.

Before taking this action Senator Bailey made a protest against stories which were printed concerning the executive session of yesterday, when he suggested that Charles Nagel of Missouri might be ineligible for the office of secretary of commerce and labor if he had been interested as counsel in a suit against the Waters-Pierce Oil company, which litigation is still pending before a federal court.

Bailey Makes Sharp Talk Mr. Bailey made an extended speech criticizing sharply the publication of alleged inaccurate stories of executive sessions and lecturing persons who may have given out information concerning these sessions.

The changes in the Republican membership of the Sixty-first congress caused quite a shifting about. Some of the Republican senators, because of the uneven division of the party, have been seated in what is known as the "Cherokee strip," a portion of the Democratic side on the extreme right of the vice president. Senators Cummins, Borah, Page, Brown, Briggs, Bourne, Burkett, Dixon and Clegg, who had
