DEEP INTEREST MANIFESTED IN HERALD CONTEST

FIRST DAY SHOWS PROJECT WELL CHOSEN

Professional Men and Women Quickly Take Hold of Plan to Send Fortunate Ones to A. Y. P. Exposition

THE happiest days of all—vacation days—are drawing near. The mountain tops and ocean breezes beckon a welcome to the tired worker. Visions of the play days that were to come have changed many an otherwise tedious hour into a pleasure.

The memory of these pleasure trips, the rides and walks by the seashore, sojourns in the fastness of rural solitude, where the lowing kine, the buzzing bees and beautiful flowers, made the few short days an epoch time from which all things radiated for another twelve months.

So, in deciding upon something suitable to offer to its readers, The Herald naturally concluded that a vacation trip would be above all things else the most acceptable.

The great Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition was about to open. It was, therefore, only natural that it should decide that a trip to this, the most wonderful exposition that had ever been attempted, would be the best offering a newspaper could make to its readers.

Our first contest closed March 20. As a result twelve young women school teachers will visit the exposition as the guests of The Herald.

So unusual was the interest and so sincere the expressions of compliment of the project that it was decided to give others an opportunity to visit the exposition in the same way.

It would have been a source of untold pleasure to have made this second contest "free for all," but, after considerable discussion, the decision was to limit the contestants to the following:

Ministers of any denomination. Officers of organized labor. Officers of fraternal organizations.

The successful candidate will secure this trip not only for himself, but for his wife, or a friend, as well. Trips for fourteen are offered.

The first announcement was made in yesterday's Herald, and already the interest, which we felt sure would be manifested, has become a reality. Many of our readers have expressed their willingness to assist some friend in securing this pleasant and profitable vacation.

Do you want to get your share of the benefit of this proposition? If so, cut out the nominating blank found elsewhere in today's paper, fill in the name of your minister, some officer of your lodge or labor organization, and bring or mail same to The Herald.

In making this nomination you give to your candidate the credit of 100 votes. After making the nomination begin saving the vote coupons found in each day's paper, not forgetting the fact that the notes given for the securing of new subscribers.

The earlier start you make, the better advantage you will have. Start today.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WARN ORCHARD GROWERS

Horticultural Body Says Unscrupulous Persons Are Misrepresenting Authority to Spray

According to the county horticultural commission, a number of persons have been going about Los Angeles representing themselves as authorized by the commission to spray citrus and other trees for the purpose of exterminating pests, parasites and scales which tend to destroy the tree.

The commission has sent out a warning to property owners and taxpayers to be on guard against the misrepresentation of the commission's authority. It is stated that the only firm in Los Angeles duly authorized by the commission to spray and fumigate trees is the Stowell fumigation company.

Furthermore unauthorized firms, instead of fumigating the citrus trees have been spraying them, which necessitates that the work be done over again, thus holding up the taxpayers and causing them to pay twice for the work which could be properly done the first time.

PAINTING OF SHADOW OF CROSS IN EXHIBITION

Canvas, Which Has Peculiar Effects by Moonlight, Will Remain on Show for Two Weeks

"The Shadow of the Cross," the long heralded miracle painting, was placed on exhibition yesterday at the Y. M. C. A. to be continued on view daily for two weeks.

As an unusual painting this canvas has been exhibited to about 6,000 persons, being shown in the interest of charity only. The painting is the work of Dr. Wright of Washington, D. C., its chief attraction being its unusual power of emitting a pale moonlight effect from the background, which when seen by the usual light, is painted in deep bluish tones. Those, when the lights are turned off, seem to vibrate with a white phosphorescent light, which throws the figure of the Christ into shadow, with a cross seen behind the figure, which has given the title to the painting.

W. F. Thomas of Cincinnati is manager of the exhibition of the painting, and has a guard constantly with the painting; it not being left on at night or day. Aside from this precaution, the painting is insured for a large sum against fire or burglary.

The local exhibition is being given under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. the proceeds to be used for the Shanghai fund of the association to keep up the work of the organization in China. The painting is on its way to be exhibited at the Seattle exposition.

Henry Hammond Ahl is the artist who painted the picture, and to whom it is said the strange phenomena was unexplainable. The painting never has been completed, as the artist discovered strange properties and refused to finish it.

YOUNG AMERICA WILL FLY KITES

THIS IS ANNUAL TOURNAMENT DAY FOR CHILDREN

ALL SIZES, SHAPES AND COLORS TO APPEAR

Boys Encouraged to Exercise Ingenuity and Originality in Constructing Exhibits to Be Flown This Afternoon

Today is kite day for the school children of Los Angeles. Kites of all sizes, shapes and designs will be flown in the kite tournament which is to begin at 2 o'clock this afternoon on the vacant tract bounded by Catalina, Fourth and New Hampshire streets.

The kite tournament, which will be directed by Charles M. Miller, assistant supervisor of the city department of the public schools, is an event which has recently attracted wide attention in educational circles for the benefits secured through encouragement of kite flying.

Los Angeles teachers have found that it encourages home staying and keeps many active boys out of mischief, and for that reason it has had an even greater success in the past years. Kite making and flying, however, are not made part of the regular school work, but are encouraged entirely as home occupations.

Today's tournament will be the third annual kite day, and promises to be more successful than that of last year, which was watched by 5000 persons. There were more than 200 participants, and the display was full of kites, many of unique design.

As a result of the interest developed, the old-fashioned English bowkite, with its long tail, losing popularity, and the modern boy is more or less of a scientist when it comes to kites. Aeroplanes, kites, and other modifications of the Hargrave box kite, kites with tails and the latest kind, figures from "Foxy Grandpa," dragons and owls, kites representing yachts, banners and balloons, and other types have been constructed for the tournament.

Boys Keep Kites Under Cover "We may expect to see all sizes, shapes, colors and most any qualifications," says Mr. Miller, "and the boys have worked under cover—down cellar, in the barn, upstairs and in similar places. They do not want their kites to get the wind. Some very clever inventions have been exhibited at the former occasions, and we expect many more Saturday afternoon, by next year I look especially for quite a development in the line of aeroplanes."

"Kite flying is greatly encouraged through the yearly four meetings, which gives the boys a chance to exhibit their work. The occupation also allows them to try their own genius on the kites, and it gives the boys from the streets, enticing them to healthful sport in the open air."

The kite tournament program divides the kites into four groups. Each group will have its own set of judges. The first of these groups is that devoted to exhibition kites, including the most artistic and best decorated kites. The second group is for feats of skill, including acrobatic kites, high flyers, parachute displays, yacht race and quarter mile dash. An amusing feature of the contests in this group will be "kites races."

A special group is devoted to balloon ascensions, wireless operations, photography from a kite line, tetrahedra and aeroplanes, kites, dragons and the use of gliders. Another group covers the construction of kites, and the judges will be called on to inspect the smallest plan and box kites, the quickest construction of a kite, reels and windmill kites and kites with parts that move. The best original idea embodied in a kite will receive attention.

The Western avenue cars run to the tournament grounds, and the street cars to Bimlini baths pass nearby.
