DIES WAITING FOR JOB IN NEW ADMINISTRATION

Chicago Political Worker Succumbs to Disappointment and Exposure in Washington

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The first of the dreamers of hopeless dreams, who threw the capital at the beginning of each new administration looking for place in the government, lies at the morgue here, dead of disappointment and exposure.

Mrs. Lum is destitute, and Congressman Boutell of Chicago will have the body returned to that city.

Mrs. Lum says in a telegraphic account that her husband worked hard in Washington and exposure.

"Had he worked as hard for his own interests things would have been different," she said.

GAY OLD METHUSELAH "CROAKS" IN ZOO HOME

Being a Toad, 'Tis for the First Time in His 1000 Years, and, Alas! the Last

NEW YORK, April 16.—Methuselah is dead.

He passed away at 9:11 o'clock yesterday morning, without apparent pain. Having reached the ripe age of from 1000 to 1200 years, it is presumed Methuselah died of ills incident to longevity.

Methuselah was a toad. Last December he was discovered by Charles Van Zandt, a mining man, in a pocket in the rock 500 feet below the surface at Butte, Mont.

Methuselah was a toad, accompanied by affidavits relating to his discovery. His birth certificate was among the papers, but geologists and zoologists agreed he must be 1000 years old, while nature fakers did not hesitate to say he was double that age.

John Burroughs alone said he didn't believe it, but Mr. Burroughs never pretended to have accurate data on the subject, and only heard about Methuselah in the latter's declining years.

He simply followed illustrious precedent and put poor old Methuselah in the Annias class.

Methuselah had a pleasant, dark meditation parlor in a corner of the snake house. It was made of an inverted aquarium, and contained the half of a coconut shell, under which the old gentleman could sit and think of the happy days so long ago when he was young, and some of the mountains were holes in the ground.

These thoughts awakened in Methuselah a spirit of unrest, and he had not been in the zoo for more than a few weeks before he escaped one night and went out looking for a toad affinity.

He must have found her lawful protector at home, for when he got back to his house he had lost one eye and was muzzed and frayed about the edges. He should have been old enough to profit by that lesson, but he wasn't.

He never went out again. That last experience seemed to prey on his mind, and he felt the bitter truth that he was not so young as he used to be. He grew moody. He refused the dainties.

And yesterday morning, all the friends of his childhood gone forever, lonely and disheartened, he gave up the struggle and passed into history. His remains will be preserved in alcohol, so that in the time to come he may be surrounded by the choice spirits he missed in his declining days.

The grocer had warranted the maple syrup to be the real stuff. "It doesn't taste like any maple syrup I ever bought," said the customer, who had just sampled it, "and I strongly suspect—"

"Sir!" said the indignant grocer. "I strongly suspect in spite of your guaranty that it's genuine."—Chicago Tribune.

BURLINGTON, N. J., April 16.—Eloping from a dinner party to wed Miss Irma Leigh, who was the guest of his mother at a brilliant social function, Binney W. Earl, son of Mrs. Frank Earl and grandson of William G. Binney, a very wealthy resident, won one of Burlington's prettiest maidens for his bride last Saturday evening.

He returned, battered up, and his legs half chawed off. He never went out again. That last experience seemed to prey on his mind, and he felt the bitter truth that he was not so young as he used to be.

DROPS HER DISHCLOTH TO GRAB AT $1,000,000

Brooklyn Servant Hears She Is Heir—Quits Work, Though Cash Hasn't Come Yet

NEW YORK, April 16.—A million dollars in Wales is better than $16 a month in both hands, when the hands are busy washing dishes. That is what Martha Coles thinks. She was an heiress. A lawyer told her; so it must be true, even though she never had seen him before and he didn't bring the million with him.

News of the elopement and wedding became public today and was confirmed by the parents of the young elopers. The mother of young Earl appeared in fine spirits and expressed her delight at the success of what she termed a "lark" of the young people.

Parents of the bride, on the other hand, are far from pleased. Mrs. Earl's father, Alfred S. Leigh, manager of the Armour meat company's South Jersey branch here, is deeply grieved. Mrs. Leigh is prostrated and in the care of physicians, and Clinton Leigh, a brother, is today.

"The worst disgrace that could come to our family is the marriage of my sister to Binney Earl. We wish to have nothing more to do with either of them."

The dinner party at which Miss Irma Leigh, pretty and petite and 18 years of age, was a guest Saturday night, was given at the Earl home in honor of Mrs. Earl's sister, the Princess de Camporeale of Rome, Italy, formerly Florence Binney-Kingsland of Boston, who is now visiting in the country.

The wedding was performed by the Rev. James F. Stoddard of Mount Holly, rector of the Episcopal church at that place, and it is alleged that the elopers, after leaving Burlington ostensibly to go to the grand opera in Philadelphia, took an automobile from Camden back to the county seat of Burlington county, thus eluding the girl's relatives.

Rumors of the elopement are said to have reached the ears of the young woman's parents Saturday evening, shortly after the young couple left this city by train. By the fact that they doubled on the train in an automobile they eluded pursuit, although efforts are said to have been made by Mr. Leigh to head off the wedding.

Young Earl, it is said, telephoned that he and his bride would return to Burlington if assured of a welcome from the Leighs.

The principal objection of the Leighs to their new son-in-law is said to be an elopement with Mrs. Margaret Cook, wife of William Cook of this city. The pair were arrested in Baltimore and brought back. Charges which had been filed against Earl were quashed and both were given their liberty. Earl being sent to a sanitarium. Cook recently obtained a divorce from his wife, who returned to the home of her parents.

"My son and Irma Leigh have been engaged—that is, they have had an understanding for nearly five years that some day they should wed," said Mrs. Earl this afternoon. "I am very sorry that they were not married at home, but one can scarcely blame the young people for thinking it romantic to have an elopement. I came very near eloping myself once, but—but I didn't."

"I have always thought a great deal of Irma Leigh. She is a dear girl, and I am sure she and my son are very fond of each other. They have been close friends since the Leighs lived in the house adjoining, and the acquaintance has continued up to the present day. "It is preposterous for the Leighs to appear angry over the wedding. Miss Leigh's brother, Dr. Leigh, came to see me this morning and appeared very indignant. Several of my friends had a good laugh this morning over the declaration that the Leighs could object to my son as a husband for their daughter."
