'SAPHO' REVISED BY NETHERSOLE

CHANGING METHOD OF THE ACTRESS IS SEEN

DAUDET-FITCH DRAMA OFFERED AT THE MASON

Tragedy of Love Which Came Too Late for Happiness to a Woman of the Half-World, Is Theme

'Sapho,' a drama in four acts by Clyde Fitch, translated from the French of Daudet and Belot, played at the Mason opera house Wednesday matinee, Dec. 29, 1909.

THE CAST Jean Gaussin, studying for the diploma; Hunter M. Dechelette, a civil engineer; W. S. Sainne Hills, M. Goussier, a sculptor; James B. Ross, Eugene Flamant, an engraver; Albert Perry, a painter; Hamilton Mott, M. Hettner, engineer; Frederick Browne, M. De Pottier, composer; Robt. W. Bruner, La Goussier, poet; Miss Alice Gordon, Divonne Gaussin, wife of General; Miss Charlotte Tittel, Irene, a dancer; Miss Florence Huntington, Fote, a dancer; Miss Lillian Stafford, Margot, a singer; Miss Ethna Winter, Françoise, servant to Fanny; and Jean, Fanny Le Grand; Miss Olga Nethersole.

BY W. HERBERT BLAKE

The velleterose art has outgrown 'sapho.' 'The Writing on the Wall' convinced us that she may retain the Daudet novel-ploy in her repertoire, and she may retain the genuine pathos and tragedy of a wayward woman's deluded love to cover so delicate a point.

The Sapho Miss Nethersole embodied yesterday was not the picture Daudet drew as a warning to his sons, "when they shall have reached 21 years of age."

The note is dated August 12, 1907, and bears the signatures of J. D. Arthur and Hector Rabagliati, the dead, according to the complaint, being executed in these names, arrested request of Oswald for the purpose of concealing the transaction from the public.
