WOMEN PLAN TO AID DISTRESSED MOTHERS

Members of Maternity Cottage Association Will Meet and Review Charitable Work Performed in Past Year

The Women's Alliance Maternity Cottage association will hold its annual meeting at the Chamber of Commerce building on Tuesday evening, March 22, at 8 o'clock. At this meeting a report will be given of what the maternity cottage, 127 South Hill street, has accomplished during the past year and plans will be formulated for the future.

The Women's Alliance Maternity Cottage, which for three years has ministered to the distressed mothers of the city, was incorporated in April, 1909, and by its work has proved the necessity of such an institution in Los Angeles. Seventy cases have been cared for during the past year. Last May, owing to the growth of the work and the need of larger quarters, the premises now occupied by the institution on South Hill street were purchased for $4500, the terms being $250 cash and the remainder at the rate of $40 a month.

The women in charge have expressed their need of monthly or yearly cash contributions, or contributions of any nature including donations of second-hand clothing and articles for their store. In this store everything is sold for a nominal price, so as to eliminate the idea of charity, yet from this source the maternity home has received from $20 to $30 a month. Subscriptions will be received by the president, Mrs. William Barshite, 1633 West Edgeware road, or the treasurer, Mrs. C. J. Fox, 1650 Rockwood street.

HERALD PATTERNS

WORKS TO BEGIN CAMPAIGN EARLY

PLANS TOUR OF NORTH WITH JOHNSON AND WALLACE

HE WILL RESIGN FROM THE CITY COUNCIL TOMORROW

Candidate for United States Senatorship Declares Public Demands a Complete Overthrow of Railroad Domination in State

Judge D. Works, president of the city council, will resign from the city legislative body at its session Tuesday, and will later begin his campaign as the candidate of the Lincoln-Roosevelt league to succeed Frank P. Flint.

In company with Hiram W. Johnson and J. Wallace, the league's candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, respectively, Judge Works will stump the state, placing the issue of Lincoln-Roosevelt Republicanism versus Southern Pacific Republicanism before the voters for consideration at the primary elections in August.

In speaking of his campaign, Judge Works said in an interview at his home at 2729 Normandie avenue: "As candidate for the senate I will stand for the establishment of a federal steamship line between California and the isthmus, the necessity for which has aroused the public to a consideration of the status of the Southern Pacific railroad in California politics."

"The public now demands the overthrow of the corrupt Southern Pacific political machine which for thirty years has systematically exploited California and the isthmus, and the time is ripe for the beginning of the campaign, although the primaries are still five months away."

One Man Controls "During the control of the Southern Pacific the politics of the state has been under the domination of one man, who at the behest of the railroad has, at times used each of the old parties, without fear of successful opposition, as best suited to his convenience."

"It is a matter of common report that the existing steamship line to the isthmus, under the control of the Southern Pacific, has refused thousands of tons of freight, thus forcing its shippers to operate under a loss. The exploitation of the state was so successful that for many years California was contemptuously referred to as the 'Southern Pacific's plantation out west.'"

"It was to combat this grinding monopoly, which exacted its pound of flesh from every California industry, that the Lincoln-Roosevelt league was organized by honest Republicans, who blushed at the debasement of the party traditions by the corrupt ring which controlled the politics of the state."

"The success of the league at the polls two years ago, in its first campaign, surprised its most ardent supporters and is responsible for the interest shown by the public in this year's campaign, making it necessary to start at an unusually long period before the election."

Mr. Johnson, Mr. Wallace and myself will begin our campaign with a month's tour of the northern towns, and will be on the stump practically all of the time, and will endeavor to visit every community in the state."

URGES MEN TO BE HUMBLE, NOT PROUD

Rev. William Horace Day Preaches on "Humility" Before a Large Congregation in Palm Sunday Sermon

"It made a beautiful picture. Jesus the King rode in the midst, entering his capital in triumph. That picture was to teach his lowly ass—or burro, as it would have been called in California. He offended the Pharisees and others who thought of dignity as something in an external circumstance. Peter has told us the lesson that pagant in the words of the text, 'Gird yourselves with humility to serve one another.'"

These were the opening words of the Palm Sunday sermon at the First Congregational church by the pastor, William Horace Day. The children of the children's church, dressed in their best, were in the procession in memory of the boys and girls of Jerusalem who met Jesus with their songs as he entered the city.

"The Master never seeks to degrade men," continued the speaker. "He commands that which will exalt them in their strongest and most glorious achievements. To the pagan humility was the extreme and false thing, a slave simulated when he wanted to please his master or the demagogue pretended to win the applause of the people. To the Christian it is an honest sense of dependence or inferiority when he compares himself with others or with the standard of God. The New Testament would make us humble, not by lowering us, but by showing us at our highest, but still seeing that the divine ideal for us is so high above us as to leave us with conscious dependence and inferiority, and this brings us to an attitude of heart which God can bless. As Peter tells us, 'Humble yourself under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time.' When men begin to venerate humbly before God they can be trusted with great responsibility."

"We try to be proud and superior because we foolishly think it will lead to larger life. Pride produces the opposite, because it excludes God, alienates man and embitters the soul. Many a man wonders why he fails. He never seems quite able to reach the goal. God must always be in opposition to the proud man, for God resisteth the proud. No less are the many family quarrels, broken friendships and estranged neighbors the fruit of pride. 'By pride cometh only contention.' Within the soul the lack of humility works its bitter results. 'A man's pride shall bring him low.'"

Marjorie Rambeau Appears as Burbank Leading Woman

BY SHIRLEY OLYMPIUS

MISS MARJORIE RAMBEAU made good as leading woman of the Burbank theater stock company. Her debut yesterday afternoon in "Merely Mary Ann" was a triumph. Seldom if ever before has a stock company leading woman unlearned and almost untried received four curtain calls in the same evening. There were other curtains—dozens of them. Five came at the conclusion of the first act, a half dozen or more at the conclusion of the second act, and so on, which from the conclusion of the third act, that she simply had to make a little speech. She meant to say more than "I hope you will all love me or love you all, my glory—my emotions—or her nerves—overcame her and she burst into tears. She will be loved, for, judging from the greeting given, and the impression made by her yesterday, the Burbanks have taken her to their hearts.

"Merely Mary Ann" is a mixture of heart, soul, music and epigrams. It is the story of the typical London slavey who, when the story developed most interestingly, suddenly became prodigiously wealthy. From out the chrysalis of squalor and dirt disburdened, she emerged, but with a mind unspoiled by newly acquired learning. Mary Ann was ingeniously and true the slavey. She remained so as Marion, the social queen.

Lancelot, an indigent composer, is one of the gentlemen upon whom Mary Ann waited, and he should say "glory—and foot in her days as a slavey. She loved the composer, and in a "Bohemian" fashion, loved her. But, until after she had gone from him, she had had her fill of the last love he had had for the girl. Had Lancelot been soulless he would have possessed Mary Ann's body, but he did not. Had he been a cad he would have married her, but he did not. He was more virtuous than the majority of men in similar or any other circumstances. Of course he was not a famous rich before the last act, and when the curtain fell we all knew he would possess her—body, soul and heart—which makes the story complete and eminently satisfactory.

There are comedy and pathos in "Merely Mary Ann" in plenteity. It is Israel Zangwill at his best, some of the comedy is farcical, but it descends very nearly to the "low" level frequently. And then it will take a sudden upward trend and become so refined as to lead one to believe a problem in the art of presenting it to worry one's mind. But the problem becomes no more serious than a picture with a finely worded title.

"Merely Mary Ann" cannot be played broadly, it must be played with refinement, clever acting, not on the part of one or two players, but by all.

Miss Rambeau as Mary Ann, merely, is delightful. Her comedy is of the broadest, but her pathos is delicious, her pathos appealing. She has a note of pathos in her being which many an actress years her senior in experience and in the art of playing in stage parlance, she "gets it over." She is ingenious, natural, forceful and magnetic. Through the pathos of the slavey's life she makes the comedy of her words and her actions. Her prettiest having a case of weak knees, the fair one looked very well in their jockey attire.

Hartman now is forgiven for that atrocious act of a week ago. "Carmen" will be the next bill.

"The Easterner" George Broadhurst's fine American play will open at the Belasco tonight. After a vacation of one week Lewis S. Stone will be seen again on the Belasco stage tonight.

With two distinct features, "The Battle of Too Soon" and Lawrence Crane and company, on the program tonight. The latter is a new bill opening at the Los Angeles theater this afternoon should be well up to the standard of excellence that has marked the popular priced vaudeville houses. Besides Mathews and Bannon and the mysterious Crane, "Halfback Hank," a comedy playlet; DeVelde and Zeldia, comedians; Elsie Hester, and her dancing boys, and Adams and Andrews in burnt cork fun, are on the bill.

Under the personal direction of George Broadhurst, Lewis S. Stone and the Belasco company will renew rehearsals of the newest Broadhurst play, "The Garden of Lies," tomorrow. The premier of the play will be given Monday, March 28.

The chorus girls' big field day, which will take place at the Burbank Wednesday afternoon, promises to be the finest matinee performance of the year. It will be given in the nature of a benefit to swell the funds of the Actors' Fund of America. There will be a baseball game between the teams of the Hartman organization and the members of the McIntyre and Heath company. The principal contestants in the girls' running races, etc., between the "dones," show girls and "broilers" will be principally from these two companies. The affair will be attended by every professional in the city, while there has already been a very large number of tickets sold to theatergoers interested in this charity event. Both companies will take the field in the conventional manner in current productions, and there promises to be an exceptional display of color, life and beauty, mingled with an afternoon of good, lively sport.

The Players' club is hard at work getting ready for its big frolic and minstrel show, which will take place at the Belasco on the afternoons of April 12 and 13. The latest feature to be added to this burnt cork affair is a Julian Eltinge impersonation by Charles Rugles.

The new Orpheum bill, starting today's matinee, has two headliners on it, and the rest of the acts are unusually strong. It should prove one of the best offerings of recent weeks. Heading the list of newcomers are Walter C. Kelly, the Virginia Judge, with his unique monologues, and Fred Lindsay, the expert Australian whip manipulator. Mr. Lindsay has an act not comparable with any other known. Charles W. Bowser, Edith Hinkle and company will present a sketch new here, entitled "Superstition," dealing with practical politics, and the Reed brothers will offer something different in "Hogan in Society." Thorne and Carleton in a new skit, LaVeen Emma and company and dainty Emma Francis and her bounding Arabs, with two new sets of motion pictures, complete the bill.

The new artists to appear at Levy's Cafe Chantant, opening with afternoon tea today, are the Rappo sisters, Cosack and national dancers and Rogers, Stewart and Elwood, a trio of men singing popular songs. Miss Helen Bergette, who has become very popular, remains, as does Miss Jeanie Fletcher, whose Scotch songs in costume have delighted children from 6 to 60. The children of 6 see their own delighted mind playmates in human guise. And the children of 60 see—well, never mind what they see. Suffice it to say the principals are excellent, the chorus interestingly good to look upon and frankly depressed, and the music exceptionally worthy.

There are so many catchy lilting melodies in "The Gingerbread Man" that it is not possible to call them possibly "John Dough," "The Beautiful Land of Bon Bon," "Moon, Moon" and "Old Rameases" are better than the others, for last night's audience seemed humored more after numerous encores had been given. A male quartet also made a distinct hit. The comedy abounds in "The Gingerbread man." Some of the jokes are a bit forced from long labor, but many new ones have been written in the libretto since the play was last here, so it goes well and causes lots of merriment.

Walter Weston of the Gingerbread Man this season. He is as good, if not better than any of his predecessors. Lute Vrohman as the Good Fairy and Ross Snow as Wondrous Wise cause lots of laughter. Mr. Snow is particularly funny in makeup and actions. Inez Girard is beautiful as Mazie Bon Bon and Rose Murray is just about the clear stuff as Marjorie Daw. She is long labor, but many new ones have been written in the libretto since the play was last here, so it goes well and causes lots of merriment.

GERMANY PLANS NAVY EXPANSION. Regardless of Cost, Empire Should Continue Construction of Warships at Same Time Increasing Armament on Land. BERLIN, March 20.—High Admiral Von Koster, the president of the German Navy league, addressed a meeting of the Bavarian branch of the league here tonight. His speech was directed against the advocates of so-called "small" warfare, who contend that the German admiralty should pay more attention to the construction of small vessels for defensive purposes than to that of large ironclads. Admiral Von Koster pointed out that Germany has greater aims than a mere defense of her territory. She wishes to expand, to find markets over seas for her industries, to develop her colonies, and to increase her mercantile marine; and all this needs protection.

TEXTILE WORKERS TO TRY FOR GOVERNMENT BOUNTY. Council Recommends That $150,000 Be Contributed by Working People of Lancashire. MANCHESTER, England, March 20.—A meeting of the legislative council of the textile industry was held in Manchester tonight with the view to considering the movement to extend the operations of the British Cotton Growing association and to subscribe to the operations of the association to get the bounty of $50,000 promised by the government. The council unanimously agreed to recommend that $150,000 be contributed by the working people in Lancashire, each operative to pay 2 cents a month over a period of fifteen months. Shares representing a value of $150,000 in the British Cotton Growing association will be given to the Textile Workers' council, and any dividend that may be forthcoming in the future from the operations of the association will be given to the hospitals in the district.

CONVICTED OF POISONING TWO WIVES BY ARSENIC. Jules Maillard, an Elderly Swiss Farmer, Is Sentenced to Be Decapitated. GENEVA, March 20.—Jules Maillard, an elderly Swiss farmer, has been found guilty by the tribunal of Romont, near Fribourg, of poisoning by means of arsenic his first wife in 1903, and his second wife in 1909, while his mistress, Marie Demierre, accused as accomplice in the second crime, was liberated. Maillard was sentenced to be decapitated, this being the first time that capital punishment has been pronounced in Switzerland for a decade. Many years ago the death sentence was abolished in Switzerland, but the various cantons have since been given a free hand in the matter, with the result that ten out of the twenty-two cantons have re-established the capital sentence, including Fribourg.

FRANCE ABANDONS ALL PLANS FOR A GREAT NAVY. Republic Which Once Ranked Second Soon Will Be but Fifth. PARIS, March 20.—France has definitely renounced her ambition to figure among the great navies of the world. The naval program adopted by the government is a program of renunciation that is the argument of the "blue water school." Exclusive of the ships employed on distant stations France has only twenty-four units to put in line of battle. Whereas formerly she occupied the second rank among the nations, she has now descended to the fourth rank, and presently, no doubt, will fall to the fifth, immediately after Japan, so that she will be definitely relegated to head the list of the second-class navies of the world. Meanwhile Germany is consenting to enormous sacrifices at the bidding of the emperor. The result, the French experts insist, is deplorable. It means that in a future war, if England remained neutral, the Germans could land a force at Havre and proceed to the attack of Paris by the Seine valley, as well as meeting the troops of France on the eastern frontier.
