SENATOR ALDRICH is going to quit. His health is not of the best, and he says he does not care to strain longer under the mountain of abuse that has been shovelled over on him.

Mr. Aldrich does not give the impression of a physically exhausted man. He appears to carry his 69 years with ease. He is a very hard worker, and his health has had a good deal of abuse that has been shovelled over on him.

Oh, corrugated waffles! John D. Rockefeller is not going to rush down to the pier when Teddy arrives and bring him home.

Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton university, thinks that Lincoln would not have been serviceable to the people of this country had he been a college man.

The American college must become saturated with the sciences that are the common people. The colleges in this country must be reconstructed from top to bottom.

The American impresario, Henry Russell, is now in London looking for new warblers. He has just perfected arrangements with Landon Ronald, conductor of the new symphony orchestra.

Edward Payson Weston, despite his temporary illness Saturday, is way ahead of his schedule in his trip across the continent.

Edward Payson Weston, despite his temporary illness Saturday, is way ahead of his schedule in his trip across the continent.

Then Dr. Brady came back with another from his trip the following Sunday. He brought with him what he wanted!

In spite of a weak knee, which she has put out of her mind, Empress Augusta Victoria of Prussia has taken again to horseback riding.

Peris Bartholomew of Worcester county, Mass., looked into stenography and decided that she wanted to be a farmer.

Miss Mary Dandridge Spiers, who for twenty-three days has been private secretary to Mrs. Taft, has resigned.

Lina Cavalleri admits that she does not love Winthrop Chanler. She is going to marry him in three or four days and she thinks that there is no need of love in matrimony.

Third—Give me more than I expect and I will pay you more than you expect. I don't want to increase your pay if you increase my profits.

Fourth—You owe so much to yourself you can't afford to owe anybody else.

Fifth—Dishonesty is never an accident. Good men, like good women, can't see temptation when they meet it.

Sixth—Mind your own business and in time you will have a business of your own to mind.

Seventh—Don't do anything here which hurts your self-respect. The employee who is willing to steal for me is capable of stealing from me.

Eighth—It is none of my business what you do at night, but if disapproval affects what you do next day and you do half as much as I demand you'll last half as long as you hoped.

Ninth—Don't tell me what I like to hear, but what I ought to hear. I don't want a valet to my vanity, but I need one for my dollars.

Tenth—Don't waste time cutting specks out of rotten apples.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

ANOTHER THEORY

"How do you explain this charge that beef magnates sell their product abroad cheaper than at home?"

"Patriotism," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "They believe that a nation of meat-eaters is likely to be at a disadvantage in the event of any conflict."—Washington Star.

RINGS on my fingers and bells on my shoes! Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth has aroused the city of New York by coming out to the footlights and whispering the suggestion that bells be placed, jingling bells and tinkling, upon the necks of cats.

You who have been lugging a monstrous molecule around, looking for relief, but with no way of making the burden lighter, now see your troubles ended. Dr. J. H. Novack of Philadelphia knows how to divide a molecule.

There is a sign at the lower entrance to a little stairway in the city of New York with the following reading as follows: "Miss Harriet Howard, Dress-making."

A week ago it probably would have been possible for anyone seeking a new gown to drop into the stairs and had Mrs. Howard chop one out.

Florence Roberts, who recently appeared here in "The Transformation" and "Gloria," and Dr. Cyrus Townsend Bracy, pastor of St. George's parish, 227 Tracy avenue, Kansas City, are mixing it in the middle west city.

In Hotel Corridors

The hotel bus from the midnight train. Brought only one passenger through the rain; A commercial tourist weary and sad.

Not a single order was on his book. The disgust he felt was shown in his look; With a careless hand he wrote his name On the page of a book unknown to fame.

The drowsy night clerk the signature scanned. Then a letter placed in the drummer's hand; See how he starts, what a smile of delight Comes over his face at the welcome sight.

Open, the envelope is quickly torn. And over his face so weary and worn Now fits like a sunbeam after a storm, Smiles of joy as the message takes form.

Thus clouds of despair that will often appear To the traveling man sometime in the year Are quickly dispelled by such simple means As one friendly letter—How queer it seems.

So wives, sweethearts, brothers, chums, If you know where we'll be when Sunday comes, Write us if your time will permit. Directly to night and we will remember OUR THANKS.

GUESS several traveling men who are now in Los Angeles don't know just how the boy felt who wrote that. He extracted a promise that his name would be mentioned in connection with it, but take this hint—just all know him, and he is staying just at present at the Hayward.

Some one started a hard-luck argument yesterday in the Angelus. A traveling man complained that it was too hot to live; another that his sales were rotten; a third that he couldn't sleep in the daytime, and a reporter that news was scarce.

"If you hear of anything," he said, "let me know, as I am promised to keep him posted. Then he wended his way to a free soup house, took nourishment with the hobos, and that night slept in a tramp apartment.

"I never mixed a drink in my life," responded the fellow, "I can't drink beer, I don't believe, but I'll take the job."

"Now, the bar was in a hotel—and a good one at that—and the bartender supposed to be a good mixer. He mixed a drink. It was a most difficult task, especially for a man without a minute's experience.

"The man on the other watch was a good fellow—a former hotel clerk, by the way, and showed the newcomer how to draw beer, mix Manhattan cocktails and several of the other more popular drinks, and he gave him a small book, called the "Barkeeper's Friend," which showed how to mix about eight hundred different drinks.

"His first day was uneventful. Orders came over for beer, whisky straight, whisky cocktails, Manhattans and other common drinks and the new barkeep got through the day all right. On the second day a fat gentleman, an old and good patron of the hotel, came in and greeted our friend with a cheery "Good morning. The new man smiled. "This fellow was all right," he thought, "it's straight whisky or Manhattan sure."

"The new barkeeper's heart began to flutter. A soda cocktail? Who invented that drink? He had never heard of it, but he had lots of nerve and needed his job, so he picked up the biggest glass he could find, scooped it half full of shaved ice and grinnod it and dropped it in the glass, being sure that it was in the glass, but no farther. "What in thunder was the next ingredient?" It was a moment of agony even if he did smile, and he realized that something must be done quickly. He looked at the fat man for a moment. There was hypnotism in his eye. In a confidential tone he said: "Mr. Fletcher, how do you like your soda cocktails and at the same time he set the big glass of shaved ice on the bar.

"I'd rather have a lump of ice," said the fat man.

"The shaved ice was dumped in a second and a lump substituted, and the new bar man reached for a bottle of white soda.

"Will you have a lump of sugar?" he asked, trying to conceal his timidity.

"Two of them," said the man.

"The barkeeper's heart leaped for joy. He grabbed a lump of sugar, twisted it and dropped it in the glass, being sure that it would go in."

"And I prefer Angostura bitters," continued the customer.

"And then, wholly unconscious that he was helping the barkeeper out of a tight hole, ordered him to fill the glass up with white soda. And that was a soda cocktail. A lump of ice, a lemon, a dash of bitters and white soda, strained into a smaller glass and served with a straw. The fat man declared that it was one of the best things he had ever tasted and told the boss so. It made that barkeeper in

Installation Services for the Rev. C. D. Williamson Are Held

Formal installation services for the Rev. C. D. Williamson as pastor of the Bethesda Presbyterian church were held yesterday afternoon with a large congregation in attendance.

The service was under the direction of the Los Angeles Presbytery, the Rev. Rush Dodd, who has acted as moderator of the assembly while the church has been without a pastor, acting in that capacity yesterday afternoon.

The Rev. W. A. Hunter, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, preached the installation sermon.

The Rev. R. N. Newman, former pastor of the church, who recently resigned the pastorate, delivered the charge to the congregation.

The Rev. R. M. Clelland gave the charge to the pastor. The Rev. Mr. Williamson is already prominent in his new charge, having supplied there for several months. He was at one time pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Pomona and had also acted as a missionary among the Nez Perce Indians.

JAP AGAIN ARRESTED

G. Shinohara, Japanese proprietor of an East First street poolroom, arrested Saturday and released on $50 bail on a charge of allowing small boys to patronize his place of business, was arrested yesterday on the same charge.

The Japanese was released on depositing $100 bail and will appear in police court today.

AQUEDUCT BOSS STRUCK DOWN BY ROBBER-THUG

Tom Hayden, 32 years old, superintendent of McGuire's camp on the aqueduct, was found by police early yesterday morning lying in an unconscious condition in a gutter in Main street opposite the Rival restaurant, where he had been struck by a man who approached him stealthily. Hayden gave a good description of the assailant.

SLIDERS GATHER SPLINTERS

Sliding down the cellar stairs sent two ten year old school boys to the receiving hospital yesterday for the removal of splinters. The boys were Irwin Remish, 222 Hewitt street, and Walter McCurren, 515 Hoover street.

The lads told the police surgeons they were playing "shooting the chutes" when Irwin took the first half of a protruding splinter and Walter the remaining part of the splinter.

You can buy it, perhaps at many places, but there's one BEST place to buy it—and that place is advertised.
