SOLDIERS ENGAGE IN MIMIC BATTLE

Troops Go Through Evolutions of Real Warfare at Camp Atascadero

(Associated Press)
CAMP ATASCADERO, Cal., Sept. 26.—Engagements between infantry battalions, outpost and reconnaissance by the cavalry, the taking up of defensive positions by the field artillery, the occupation of two successive outpost lines by the signal corps and the training of the newly formed ambulance company of the hospital corps today filled a long morning at this camp, while tactical rides by the battalion disposed of the afternoon.

Lieut. Edward Bracken of the Eighth infantry conducted his battalion in a spirited attack against an equal force hidden near the county road in the dense woods of Sherman hills, while Maj. Leon Rodriguez of the Thirtieth infantry was battling similarly on the Santa Margarita side of the camp. Lieut. Paul Beck was in charge of the signal corps operations, and Capt. Hopwood of the two ambulance corps.

A baseball league is in process of formation, the idea being to play three or four double-header games, beginning October 2. The Eighth infantry, Thirtieth infantry, Fifth cavalry, field artillery, engineers, signal corps, hospital corps, camp guard troops and civilian clerks headquarters have been asked to organize teams, and the winner is to challenge the California national guard for the camp championship. The army Y. M. C. A. has donated two handsome cups, which go to the winning and second teams of the regular army league.

One of the remarkable things of the camp is the excellent health of the command, there being practically no one in the hospital. Another happy feature is the absence of serious accidents.

Excitement was experienced yesterday afternoon when the bugles of the Eighth infantry camp sounded fire call, but the blaze proved to be a small one in the grass at the edge of the Atascadero, and it was soon put out by the soldier fire fighters with wet gunny sacks.

NATIONAL GUARD OF LOS ANGELES TO GO IN CAMP

Six hundred members of the national guard of California, under the command of Gen. Robert Wankowski, of the Seventh regiment, will leave Los Angeles Saturday afternoon for the army encampment at Atascadero. They will remain in the field fifteen days.

Companies A, B, C and F, troop D of the cavalry, the signal and hospital corps will be represented.

The men will assemble at the army and march to the Arcade station, where they will board a special train for San Luis Obispo county.

ADJUTANTS GENERALS WILL HOLD ANNUAL CONVENTION

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 26.—Adjutant General J. B. Lauck leaves tomorrow afternoon for St. Louis, Mo., where he will attend the annual meeting of the Adjutant Generals' association of the United States.

Gen. Lauck will visit several eastern cities while away, and expects to go to Washington, where he has matters to be adjusted for the state by the war department.

GIRL DIES WHILE WALTZING

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—"I could die waltzing," said Miss Elizabeth Harris, at the close of a dance last night. As she seated herself, she fell over, and died within a few minutes. She had been dancing continuously for four hours. She was 22 years old.

WORLD-FAMOUS HARPISIT DEAD

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—John Che-shire, aged 73, a world-famous harpist, considered by many musicians for years to be the greatest living exponent of his instrument, died today at his home here after a brief illness.

FRANCIS J. HENEY TALKS OF INSURGENT MOVEMENT

Will Not Guess G. O. P. Candidate for President in 1912

DENVER, Sept. 26.—Francis J. Heney of San Francisco stopped off in Denver today for a few hours on his way home from Wisconsin and Minnesota, where he made speeches for progressive Republican candidates.

"I have been campaigning for LaFollette in Wisconsin and against Mr. Tawney in Minnesota," he said. "I find the situation in Colorado interesting. The initiative and referendum are good, but a direct primary law with a convention feature is not so good. To my mind the ideal primary law is that of Oregon, where all candidates are nominated in direct primaries and no convention is held at all."

"Who's going to be the Republican candidate for president in 1912?" Mr. Heney was asked.

"I don't know," he replied. "A great many things are going to happen between now and 1912."

STATE LEGISLATURE TO CONVENE OCT. 3

Extra Session Will Take Half Day to Correct Clerical Error in Bill

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 26.—The proclamation calling together the state legislature in extraordinary session will be issued tomorrow or next day from the governor's office and the date will be fixed as Monday, October 3.

Private Secretary to the Governor E. Forest Mitchell, Secretary of State Charles Curry, State Controller Nye and State Printer Shannon leave for San Francisco tomorrow, where they will hold a conference with Attorney General Webb, Chairman Alexander of the state board of equalization and two attorneys representing the merchant's exchange.

This conference will decide upon the language to be used in the call, and this will be confined strictly to the words necessary to remedy the defect in the constitutional amendment No. 1.

The proclamation will be so explicit that nothing besides the actual inserting of the needed words will be in the call, and this will be all that can be taken up at the extra session.

The fact that the secretary of state must get out the printing to county clerks and Governor Gillett must publish the call for the November election makes the time very short under the law, and for this reason the conference tomorrow will be along lines to shut off any debate upon anything excepting the actual insertion of words which have been left out. It is the purpose of the state officials in the conference to so arrange the necessary resolutions and bill that not more than half a day session will be needed to conclude the work of the extra session, Governor Gillett will not leave Eureka until next Thursday.

MILITARY TOURNAMENT OPENS IN DES MOINES

DES MOINES, Ia., Sept. 26.—Five thousand troops, representing every branch of the United States army, are participating in the military tournament which opened here today with a military parade.

Brigadier General Frederick A. Smith of Fort Omaha, commander of the department of the Missouri, rode at the head of the parade.

GRAPES BRING $12 TON

SANTA ROSA, Sept. 26.—Grape crushing is in full blast in the wineries of Sonoma county and the crop is an average one. The growers are a little disappointed over the price being paid by the big wineries and where possible sales have been made to independent wineries. The highest price is $12 a ton.

BROADWAY STORES RIOT IN COLORS

Chromatic Schemes Utilized by Promoters of Fashion Show Lure Artist's Eye

The man who invented the fable about a pot of gold lying at the foot of the rainbow might well have conceived this picturesque fancy after a stroll down Broadway, as it looks this week. Surely never did any rainbow show more illusive hues, more varying shades, nor more subtle blendings than do the windows in the big Broadway stores. The rainbow tints are all accompanied by the most remarkable effect in gold tinsel, embroidery, net and spangles, until the entire street resembles one vast area of softly glistening colors well over-spread with priceless metals and jewels.

Certainly the first Fashion show may be called a tremendous success, if the street display alone is to be considered. Never before have the fashions been so decorative, and the merchants along the rainbow path have spared neither time nor expense to make this show one which every observer may enjoy, and to which the visitors and residents may point with pride.

Beginning with Coulter's store, near Second street, and continuing to Ninth street, every block on Broadway contains marvels of the mediator's skill and the milliner's art, and both sides of the street, and shops of every kind, have taken the cue and are displaying their most attractive goods.

One window at Coulter's is devoted to novelties in materials, and perhaps one of the handsomest things is the crepe velvet which is shown here in a variety of shades. A delightful assortment of printed and embroidered chiffons and crepes help make this window one which is full of valuable suggestions, and the men's furnishings are set forth in attractive manner. Pajamas in soft silken hues; dressing gowns of heavy, handsome materials, and smoking jackets, rich and bold looking, are all shown here, with the ties, handkerchiefs and socks that are customarily expected in such an array.

One of the handsomest is of orchid gray satin, heavily embroidered and embossed, and another dainty evening gown shows black-headed net with a bold, jacket over a pink silk slip which is embroidered elaborately with gold and trimmed at the hem with a deep pink silk fringe.

An elaborate and useful treatment of an Indian shawl is also shown in this window.

The Boston store shows a dinner gown of pale gray satin, with its line overcast and embroidered net in which mother-of-pearl bands are used with remarkable effect. A sash of black panne velvet finishes the foot of the dress, and beneath which the satin foundation falls in a slight train.

A number of ravishingly beautiful scarfs are shown in this window, too, in particular, one of gold net having enormous roses in soft shades printed on the fabric and outlined with the gold thread.

A blue satin gown shows through black embroidered net, upon the hem of which, heavily worked, sunbursts gleam in their gold and jeweled beauty. A broad band of gold net having a fox adds its richness to the splendor of the toilette.

One window shows lavender shades, and one of hats and novelties is most attractive, with a tempting array of gauze ribbons, nets, gimp and jeweled fans, pearl collars and fringes.

A pattern garment of black jet beads over a gown of salmon pink satin is without doubt the most striking exhibit in the beautiful windows of the Ville de Paris, and in the same exhibit jeweled bodices, embroidered pieces forming bodice and skirt trimmings and bands, and passementerie of magnificent value. Cleopatra might envy the display which this store affords, and the buckles, rings, combs, handbags and coiffure adornments are as brilliant and novel as they are beautiful.

A piece of Paisley pattern chiffon over white is one of the loveliest of the materials to be seen in this window, although striped and dotted nets, embroidered velvets and satin-bordered crepes each add lustrous beauty to the scene. A fascinating bandbox looking temptingly adorned with its gold embroideries and pastel shadings, from which tumble scarfs, laces and evening bags for midday's adornment, is quite the piece of the window that draws the most attention. One fur set demands attention. It comprises muff and collar, and is made of fur, shirtings of gold tissue and frills of fine lace. She were surely a lucky maid or matron who may seek herself in these exquisite creations of millinery.

Soft greens of the woodland furnish the color scheme for the window decorations at the New York store, and here are shown some fifteen or twenty imported gowns, suits and costumes before which the most critical man or woman must pause to admire.

One of the simplest and most effective of these is a Doucet creation of black chiffon heavily embroidered to the depth of eighteen inches in oriental silk, with tiny buttons to harmonize, outlining the sides of the skirt, and similar embroidery at the throat and sleeves of the bodice. An enormous hat with long black plumes completes this costume.

Paquin is represented in a pale yellow velvet, the corsage and front panel heavily embroidered, and magnificent heavy lace forming the bodice and sleeves. Velvet shoulder straps with the gold embroidery outline the shoulders and a band of gold ribbon from which depends gold fringe ornaments the hair, over which is placed a large hat of cloth of gold.

A tunic made of crystal beads on black net surmounts a gown of soft pink messaline. Brillants worked through the beads make a beautiful outline for the décolletage and shoulder straps, and a sash of rose color ties with a big bow at the knees, from beneath which falls a short train of black chiffon over the pink satin. This frock is from Francis, and is without doubt one of the most beautiful of the entire display.

At the Broadway department store the windows are decorated in autumn leaves and palms, and a novelty shown here are the petticoats of accordion pleated chiffon. These are in plaid patterns as well as the more beautiful broche designs, and the tops are of softest messaline. Two stunning gowns shown here are of black velvet with bodice embroidered in semi-precious stones, and a creation in black doublet, and a creation in the same shades with old net in the bodice and yoke and a hat with drooping brim and overshadowing plumes to complete the color scheme.

A girlish frock of soft shirred chiffon over blue satin is gathered in at the waist with three rows of Persian ribbon and the lower part of the skirt is finished in the same way to simulate the hobble effect. One window shows a beautiful array of brown broadcloths, velvets, laces, gauges and ribbons. Linerie and corsets in novel design and attractive array are also shown in one of this store's windows.

Black and white seems to have been the favorite effect desired by the window dresser at the Fifth Street store. White frosted leaves and vines and soft, white, gauzy screens make a glittering background for the one tunic of black and white which are displayed. One of the handsomest of these is of embroidered black net over white chiffon. The bodice is embroidered with coral and a sash of the same hue outlines the waist. A scarf of black, heavily embroidered in jet, completes this gown, while a coat of similar texture and embroidery is near at hand. Another handsome frock carries out the same effect in a tunic of black satin falling over a double flounce of creamy, honiton lace. The bodice is of the honiton lace also, with trimmings of black satin and gold.

A hat in this same window is of panne satin with enormous rosettes of the material and white plumes and facing.

Bullock's windows carry out an autumn scheme, even in the colors of the gowns, and dresses and materials alike show all the shades of gold, russet, reddish brown and the more somber wood shades of the same color. Each window is embellished with a handsome oil painting which conveys the ideas attained by the decorator and the frames in bronze, bright or dull gold furnish further lighting to the effects in the windows.

Many particularly beautiful hats were shown in the windows of this store, and a noticeable fancy was for the crestone and tapestry effects in crown and brim.

A street suit of wide wale corduroy and a brown velvet and broadcloth visiting gown with big muff and collar of mink were two other particularly handsome and useful showings made by Bullock's.

Silverwood's store put forth a brave array, both in the Broadway and Sixth street windows, and royal blue velvet and bearskins alternate in emphasizing the decorative scheme. Smart winter suits for men show prevailing brown tones, and for the little men a tempting array of sweaters, leggins, tam-o-shanters and blouse suits may be seen.

One of the most attractive exhibits of fancy vests which is attractive both in coloring and materials, and man in his best array will become almost decorative in this winter.

PHONE GIRL REFUSES TO SEND ALARM; HOUSE RUINED

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—Refusal of a telephone girl to send in an alarm of fire, because the persons calling did not have a nickel to put in the telephone, endangered the lives of ten persons when a fire was raging in the apartment house of Mrs. L. A. Humes last night. Everything in the home was destroyed. The loss is about $5000. Mrs. Humes was so badly burned about the face that she was taken to a hospital.
