UNIONS ON MARCH, 15,000 IN COLUMN

Demonstration of City Streets is Said to Have Been Greatest in the State

What Stanley B. Wilson, editor of the Citizen, declared to be the greatest labor demonstration ever held in California occurred last evening, when approximately 15,000 union men and women paraded through the streets of Los Angeles, from the Labor temple to Fiesta park, where a mass meeting was held.

Marching four abreast, the parade stretched over nearly thirty blocks, the head of the procession having arrived at the park at Grand avenue and Pico street before the final columns had formed at Fifth street and Maple avenue.

All street traffic was tied up during the parade, hardly a car moving from 7:30 o'clock, when the start was made, until 9:30 o'clock, when the last section arrived at the park.

During the entire evening there was no trouble of any kind. Along the line of march crowds thronged the sidewalks, and occasionally a little scattered applause was given as a body of men actually on strike passed, but that was all.

At Fiesta park cheering and applauding were indulged in. When the big arena was filled to overflowing and the late comers were being forced to stand down in the interior field, J. Stitt Wilson, principal speaker of the evening and Socialist nominee for governor, arrived and was given an ovation.

As Mr. Wilson appeared at the edge of the bleachers, the crowd arose to a man and cheered wildly. Although escorted by several policemen, it was impossible for the speaker to make his way through the crowd until he was hoisted on the shoulders of several friends and carried to the speakers' stand in the center of the field.

As he stepped upon the platform wild cheers again broke out which lasted for several minutes. The parade started at 7:30 o'clock from the Labor temple at Fifth street and Maple avenue. Led by a brass band the line of march was west to Main street, up Main street to the Temple block, thence south on Spring street to Ninth, west on Ninth to Grand avenue and south on Grand avenue to Fiesta park.

Each one in the parade carried a copy of the American flag and wore the emblem of the particular organization of which he or she was a member. Each union was headed by its officers and the members fell in behind. There were seventy-six organizations represented.

At Fiesta park Stanley B. Wilson was chairman of the evening. When he was introduced to the crowd Secretary Grow of the Labor temple spoke of him as the next mayor of Los Angeles and the crowd broke into cheers. Mr. Wilson made a short address, going over several recent happenings and denying the connection of organized labor with any of them. He then introduced J. Stitt Wilson, who was given another ovation. Mr. Wilson turned the mass meeting into a Socialist political meeting, taking up some of the questions which arose before the laboring public and bespeaking the vote of those present for the Socialist ticket on November 8.

Owing to the lateness of the hour when the speaking began, the crowd dwindled rapidly and before the meeting was over half had gone home.

BELL CAPTIVATES OAKLAND VOTERS

Theater Packed with Enthusiastic Persons Who Noisily Cheer Candidate

(Special to The Herald) SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 3.—Theodore Bell was given one of the most remarkable ovations of his present campaign by an audience of more than 2000 persons which jammed the Idora Park theater in Oakland tonight.

When Bell, turning to former Mayor Taylor, who presented him, made a solemn personal pledge that he had made none of the machine affiliations into which he has been accused of entering, the audience rose to its feet as one man, men embracing each other, throwing their hats into the air and crawling toward the platform to grasp the speaker's hand.

As the result of the demonstration, the Democratic leaders are claiming aameda county, always considered a stronghold of Republicanism by a big majority.

In his address Bell answered a question put to him this morning by a morning newspaper. The newspaper questioned him concerning the H. H. Brown bank failure in Calistoga, imputing dishonorable conduct on Bell's part in serving as Brown's attorney. Bell replied that he had served as Brown's attorney, but showed that his client had been dismissed for lack of evidence and made a telling point of the fact that he had not received stolen money for his fee, emphasizing the personal pronoun.

Bell dealt directly with the issues of the campaign, and declared for the freedom of the school system from politics and the freedom of the state government from machine domination. "I have devoted nearly twenty years of my life to this fight, and I am not through yet," he said.

"When but a mere boy I took up the cudgel against the influence of the Republic in the community affairs of my native state, and that same battle is where I stand today.

"My opponents, conducting a campaign of vilification, are tearing at the honorable career that I have built up during that time. They ask me slurring questions concerning it when they find it absolutely impossible to answer the questions that I have put to them regarding Hiram Johnson and his connection with certain matters.

Dramatically he took the extended hand of Dr. Edward Robeson Taylor, dean of the Hastings Law college and reform mayor under the anti-graft regime in San Francisco, who acted as chairman of the meeting. The scene brought the crowd to its feet applauding.

Timothy Spellacy, nominee for lieutenant governor, addressed a crowd under the trees in the park. The night meeting concluded a day of terrific campaigning where Egan, Spellacy spoke of Contra Costa, Pinole, Benicia, Martinez, Crockett, Antioch, Cromwell and Richmond. Enthusiastic crowds greeted them everywhere.

JOHNSON LAYS BLAME ON RAILWAY COMPANY

Republican Candidate Denies the Charges Made Against Him at San Francisco Meeting

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 3.—Hiram W. Johnson, Republican candidate for governor, addressed a crowded house tonight at Dreamland rink. The through had been drawn by the candidate's promise to answer the questions bearing upon the campaign matters propounded by his Democratic opponent, Theodore Bell, and the Democratic orator, Frank Hering.

Charles F. Curry, secretary of state, and one of Johnson's opponents at the primary, introduced the party nominee. Johnson directed his remarks to those who had criticized his private and public life, and gave his analysis of the alignment of the forces that are antagonistic to his candidacy.

He was bitter in his denunciation of his enemies and charged the stories that are being circulated about him to the Southern Pacific railroad and the "Intelligencer." His counter attack included certain newspapers and their editors.

Johnson again made a general denial of all of the charges brought against him by Hering relative to a fee for attorney's services in the case of J. Dalzell Brown, the manager of the defunct California Safe Deposit and Trust company.

"I didn't get $55,000 for my services nor one-tenth that amount," declared Johnson. "I never owned any Western Pacific stocks or bonds in my life. I did not engage in the case of J. Dalzell Brown until two months after I had publicly announced that I had retired from the graft prosecution cases and that I would engage in the campaign of William Langdon for the office of district attorney."

Request Made to Protect Men Testifying in Case Concerning California Holdings

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 3.—While detectives stood guard to protect witnesses whose lives were said to have been threatened because of their disclosures in the recusal of water company No. 5, four miles from Holtville, yesterday morning on daylight.

The chief witnesses were Thomas H. Forrester and George O. Henderson, vice president of the After Thought company, in selling stock for the Great Western company, collected commissions of 50 per cent that his agents were paid in debentils containing promises of stock, which he declared he would not honor without lawsuit, and that 300,000 shares of Great Western stock were fraudulently sold.

LANDS IN PRISON FOR EVADING DUTY ON HARP

Loeb Begins to Stamp Out Smuggling by Prosecution of Professional Musician

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Smuggling by passengers of incoming liners is becoming increasingly dangerous. The days when detection meant only a heavy cash penalty have passed, and hereafter the customs authorities will ask the courts to inflict imprisonment in all cases where there are no "extenuating circumstances."

Collector Loeb holds that all travelers must have heard by this time of the zealous enforcement of customs laws which has been the rule since he took office, and he has no intention of being easy on those who violate the laws with their eyes open.

One of the first cases to be dealt with in accordance with the new ruling has just resulted in a conviction here. As a result Philip Zeveter, a professional musician, must serve nine months in the penitentiary for importing a harp from London without paying any duty on it. Zeveter purchased the harp ostensibly for his own use, in which case it would have been entered duty free. He offered the instrument to one of his pupils, however.

FATHER FINDS DAUGHTER AFTER FIVE YEARS' SEARCH

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 3.—After meeting with disappointment time after time during the last five years for his daughter, now 8 years old, who was abducted in this city in 1905 by his divorced wife, W. E. McKenny, formerly of this city, now living at Camino, Eldorado county, a few days ago accidentally received information of the whereabouts of the child, and arrived in this city with her last night, having recovered possession of her after a legal fight in the courts of Seattle. A short time after a divorce had been awarded to McKenny, with possession of the two children, in 1905, the eldest child, a girl 2 years old, was stolen by the mother. The woman dropped out of sight, and McKenny has never seen her since. For nearly five years, however, he has persisted in efforts to find the little girl.
