GOULDS PLAN SHORT ROUTE TO PACIFIC

Special to Daily News. Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 22.—Tentative plans have been made recently by which the Gould interests are planning on a new, shorter route between Denver and the Pacific coast. According to a tentative traffic arrangement between the Denver & Rio Grande and the Moffat road, a connection is to be made between these two properties, affording the Goulds a direct route west from Denver and doing away with the long haul south to Pueblo and north again to the north via Tennessee Pass.

The arrangement provides for the building of a cutoff from a point on the Moffat road to Dotsero on the Rio Grande's main line through Colorado.

According to reports in railroad circles, the success of this arrangement depends upon the ability of W. G. Evans, president of the Moffat road, to carry out negotiations for financing the projects which are now on in the East.

If the desired financial assistance is secured it probably will mean that the Gould interests will complete the arrangements which have been under consideration for some time relative to through service from St. Louis to the Pacific coast. The Missouri Pacific route would be followed to Pueblo, the Rio Grande to Denver, the Moffat line to Dotsero, the Rio Grande to Salt Lake City and the Western Pacific the remainder of the way.

This would give the Rio Grande and the Western Pacific a much shorter route between Denver and the coast than any of its rivals. Probably much of the business which now moves west over the Union Pacific would be diverted to the Gould lines. With the proposed twenty-two-mile cutoff Dotsero would be 174 miles from Denver, where, under the present Rio Grande routing, it is 245 miles. The saving of 171 miles in the transcontinental haul would be regarded a great advantage even considering the heavier grades of the Moffat line.

It is reported that aid has been promised Mr. Evans if he can show that the proposed traffic agreement would yield a revenue sufficient to take care of the required bonds. It is believed the line can be proved profitable and that it can be constructed at a comparatively low figure, despite the difficult grades.

COST OF LIVING IS HIGHER IN EUROPE

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 22.—Several months ago J. F. Holden, vice-president of the Kansas City Southern, issued a bulletin to employees giving some of his personal observations showing that the earnings of railroad employes in England and continental countries were lower than those in the United States. Mr. Holden has just issued another bulletin to the employes of the Southern, comparing the cost of living in the United States with that in other countries. The bulletin is of an educational nature which Mr. Holden is preparing from time to time for distribution over the system.

"I have been frequently asked if it was not much cheaper to live in foreign countries than in the United States," Mr. Holden says. "In reply I would say that the board of trade of Great Britain recently made a very exhaustive inquiry into the wages and cost of living in Germany, France, Belgium, Great Britain and the United States, selecting certain occupations such as the building, machinist and printing trades. The report of the board of trade as submitted to parliament consisted of several hundred pages."

From this Mr. Holden selects the carpenter. Carpenters in America average 47 hours a week, in England 52, Germany 59, France 64 and Belgium 67 1/2. In the United States carpenters receive on an average $19.97 a week, in England $9.02, in Germany $6.90, in France $6.51 and in Belgium $5.47. The total average rent and food cost per week in the United States is $8.78, in England $6.28, in Germany $4.98, in France $4.58, and in Belgium $4.03. Carpenters have left over from their week's wages in the United States $9.29, in England $2.77, in Germany $1.92, in France $1.93, and in Belgium $1.44. The fitter, who is a typical indoor mechanic, fares about like the carpenter.

These figures indicate, Mr. Holden says, that the mechanic in the United States earns more than twice as much as the mechanic in England, nearly three times as much as the mechanic in Germany or France and three and one-half times as much as the mechanic in Belgium. The American mechanic also works from six to twenty hours less than the mechanic in foreign countries per week.

It also is shown Mr. Holden declares, that the mechanic in the United States has more left after paying rent and board bills than the total earnings of a mechanic in other countries. Without question, Mr. Holden says the wage earners in the United States earn more money, have more luxuries and live in greater comfort than does any other wage earner in the world over.

WIFE'S PETS FIGURE IN DIVORCE SUIT

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 22.—Naming as co-respondent, not another man, but thirty-five pet cats and two dogs, and alleging that they had superseded him in his wife's affections and ranked higher than he in the household, Samuel W. O'Dell of Bethel, Kas., a Civil war veteran, 74 years old, has sued Sarah L. O'Dell for divorce in the Wyandotte county district court.

His experiences in Andersonville prison during the Civil war were pleasant, he told Henry Mende, his attorney, compared with the life which his wife's pets lead him during the six weeks of their married life, which began last April.

"We met at church," he said, "and when we were married I wanted her to go to my home at Pomeroy, Kas. She refused and insisted that I go to live at her home at Bethel. I didn't know anything about the menagerie until I got there. Then I found why she wouldn't leave. She had thirty-five cats and two dogs. She allowed them to eat, sleep, drink or do anything they wanted to in the house. She let the cats sleep in the beds and raise their kittens there. I couldn't move without stepping on one or sit down without moving one or two off a chair.

Pets Were Well Fed.

"She always cooked three times as much as would have been required for the two of us alone. During the six weeks that I stayed there, she used 150 pounds of flour and 40 pounds of corn meal. Most of the food that was prepared was used to feed the cats. When I brought home fresh meat or when a meal was cooked, the cats had to be provided for first. I ate afterward if I could, but as a rule I couldn't. There were usually two or three cats on top of the table. They got to drink out of the slipper and were allowed to put their noses and feet into practically everything that had been cooked or was to be cooked.

"When I complained of the excessive number of pets and wanted to get rid of part of them, she said they had been there before I came and were there to remain and if I didn't like it I could get out. Then she became cross, said she was sorry that she had married me, wouldn't cook and refused to sweep for weeks at a time.

"I couldn't sleep any better than I could eat. From three to five of the cats were usually sick and had to be tended at night. Once she took the pillow out from under her own head and put it under a sick cat. The rest 'meowed' and fought all night. As soon as daylight came I would get up and go out for a walk. Andersonville wasn't any worse. When it became unbearable I left."

In his petition for divorce, O'Dell made affidavit to the substance of the statements made in conversation with his attorney. Mrs. O'Dell is 44 years old. In addition to her home she owns three other lots, but her husband said that he would make no claim to any part of the property. He has returned to Pomeroy to live with one of his three daughters.
