THIRTY-FOUR CONFEDS REUNION

JACKSONVILLE PLANNING TO OBSERVE ALL OTHER REUNIONS TO THE GRAY.

Special to The News.
JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 6.—The 34th annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans, Sons of Confederate Veterans, and all allied organizations, will be held in Jacksonville, Fla., May 6, 7 and 8. Already the progressive, public spirited citizens of Jacksonville are making preparations to receive and entertain the veterans and all visitors at the reunion. It is Jacksonville's ambition to break all reunion records in point of attendance and entertainment, and to this end every energy of this thriving, modern city will be directed. Jacksonville is happy over the prospect of doing honor to the veterans of the Confederate armies, their descendants and their friends. Every effort will be put forth to make them feel at home and to enjoy their stay in the "Gateway City" of Florida. Hotels, boarding houses, and private homes will be open to the reunion delegates and visitors. All who come will be cared for. Jacksonville's hospitality and cordiality will be felt by the veterans and their friends who visit. Her people will meet them at the depot, explain how the town of Jacksonville, show them to their temporary homes, and look after their comfort and pleasure while guests of the city. The best of Jacksonville can do will not be too good for the thousands of veterans who will attend this reunion. Jacksonville will impress the veterans with all the force of Andrew Jackson, for whom the city was named. In return for the valuable services rendered the state in its infancy, Jacksonville, the city was named in his honor. From a village of 4,500 population a year after the close of the war, Jacksonville has grown into a modern city of 40,000. There is no more progressive city in the south. It is thoroughly abreast of the times, a thriving and thriving center of trade and commerce. By reason of its location, its railway facilities, its resources and its enterprise, Jacksonville has become the Gateway of Florida and commands the trade of a vast and constantly expanding territory. Thousands of tourists from the northern sections of the country pass through Jacksonville every day to seek warmth and pleasure along the famed East Coast. All of them stop in Jacksonville, spending a part of their vacation time enjoying the many attractions that the city and community affords. This constant stream of travel has made Jacksonville better and more favorably known than any city on the Atlantic coast. Recognizing the opportunities for profitable business and investments, many citizens are acquiring every year—active, progressive young men, with brain and capital, who join in the work of making Jacksonville a worthy product of the South country. Jacksonville is a new city, yet it is old. If one reads the Antiquities of Florida, he finds that the territory now covered by this marvelous city was fought over nearly four hundred years ago by the sturdy adventurers of the 16th century. The early settlements of the Florida peninsula had their genesis and origin in the religious troubles experienced by the Huguenots, under Charles IX, king of France. Jean Ribault headed the first expedition to the new world in 1562 for the purpose of founding a colony on what is now the East Coast of Florida. These adventurers first landed at the mouth of the St. Johns river, west of Jacksonville. Here they created a settlement, but afterwards sailed up the coast to establish a settlement at Port Royal, South Carolina. This settlement was abandoned, after a stormy year with the Indians. Another expedition came to the East Coast from France in 1564. This adventure was headed by Laudonniere. His first landing was at the present site of St. Augustine, but in a short time he sailed up the coast and entered the St. Johns river. About half way between the mouth of the St. Johns and the present city of Jacksonville the expedition erected a fort and named it Fort Caroline. King Philip II, of Spain, through agents of the religious faith of the Huguenots, sent an expedition to Florida to drive out the French. Fort Caroline fell before an attack by this expedition. The site of this old fort is but a few miles below Jacksonville. It is full of evidences that both the French and Spanish brought their warships as far up the St. Johns river as Jacksonville. They were the first white men to set foot on East Florida. The territory now covered by the city of Jacksonville was also fought over by the whites and Indians in the early years of the eighteenth century. A garrison was garrisoned by the Indians at a point in the city where a business block now stands. During the civil war, Jacksonville was occupied three times by Federal troops. The purpose of this occupation was to keep the St. Johns river open and to recruit the negroes for service in the Federal army. While no pitched battle was fought at Jacksonville, there was much skirmishing, and this was attended to some loss to both the Federals and Confederates. During the Confederate reunion, delegates and visitors to these points of historic interest on the beautiful St. Johns river, which bounds the city of Jacksonville on the south. A boat ride on this river is worth coming miles to enjoy. In many respects it is the most wonderful body of water in America. It is a river of sensations, for by never failing springs at points above Jacksonville it reaches a width of five or six miles, and it is doubtful if at any point between Jacksonville and Palatka it is less than a mile wide. The fact is, as the old Welsh saying is, in their tongue, "chain of lakes." The St. Johns is navigable for about 200 miles, and palatial steamers make regular trips from Jacksonville to the head of navigation. The largest ocean-going vessels come to Jacksonville with passengers and freight from all parts of the world. The traffic on this river brings to Jacksonville an important factor in its business, and the river itself is a wonderful and delightful revelation to the tourist. A visit to the seashore will be another delightful trip for visitors during the reunion. A splendid atway has been built by Duval county to Atlantic Beach, a distance of some twenty miles from Jacksonville. This is one of the finest ocean beaches on the South Atlantic coast. In deed, it is pronounced by many tourists as the finest beach on the coast. Surf bathing, fishing and all the other seashore attractions delight the visitors. The beach is also connected with Jacksonville by rail, and is a popular resort in every sense. Four miles northeast of Jacksonville, and reached by electric cars, the visitor will find an attraction that he can see in but two other places in the United States. All this is made to the ostrich farm. This farm has in it 150 fine specimens of the ostrich, some of them trained to drive a harness; and they make horse speed. There are but three ostrich farms in the United States—one at Jackson, one at Little Rock, Ark., and another in California. Adjoining the ostrich farm is the celebrated Florida alligator farm, where all sizes and conditions of the alligator tribe may be seen—several thousand of them ranging in weight from 5 ounces to 300 pounds. The visitor sees in one pen several hundred many alligators, while in the patriarch of the flock, 250 years old, slumbers in sub-tropical indolence. Spring Blood and System Cleanser. INSTINCT GUIDE BIRDS DEPEND ON FEATHERED CREATURES AC-CUSED OF LACK OF WISDOM IN SELECTING SITES.

London.—The wisdom of the "little people" is a subject of never failing charm to those who love them, and it is with a certain degree of hesitation that I draw your attention to one or two curious instances of what may be termed "unwisdom," says a writer in the London Weekly Telegraph. They are worth studying, because they throw some light on the vexed question of instinct versus reason. No subject is better worth attention, none more frequently misunderstood, for many an action which we carelessly assign to intelligence is really the result of instinct. A bird does not learn to build a nest nor does it reason out the best way of setting to work. It simply follows its instinct and acts as countless generations of its kind have done in the past. Remember such a busy worker cannot be said to be following the example of its parents since it never saw them at work. Even better instances of this may be found among the teeming members of the insect world, for they are usually orphaned at the time of their birth, yet they contrive to carry out the most complicated work with no one to guide them, and no pattern before them. Wisdom, then, is clearly a word which must not be too lightly used and, perhaps, I ought not to accuse the little workers of lack of it, but rather of occasional blunders. Exact terms are always dangerous things to deal with, for they tempt one to wander into the maze of definition, and once there it is difficult to get away again. The man who knows more of the ways of spiders than, perhaps, any one else in the world—of course, I mean M. Faber—for a long time studied the habits of that maternal spider which carries a sort of egg basket about with her, instead of depositing her eggs in a suitable spot and leaving them alone. The spider in question has come in for much praise, the tender solicitude she betrays for her future brood being beautiful. Alas, when she is made the victim of a sort of practical joke, and has a little round of cork given her instead of her precious treasure, she carries it just as carefully, and never finds out the difference. Ants, in spite of their reputed "wisdom," may be tricked in much the same way, being made to carry such lumber as beads under the impression that they are harvesting. Their mistake, however, is not as sad in its results as that of the fly, which lays its eggs on the evil smelling carrion plant under the impression that it has found a particularly nutritious and therefore desirable piece of meat. Birds occasionally, though only occasionally, make sad blunders in their choice of a nesting site, some of the water fowl laying in a spot which is pretty sure to be under water before the eggs are hatched. Again, in some instances, two cuckoo eggs have been discovered in the same nest, and the bird has been blamed for making such a mistake as to imagine that two children of hers could possibly occupy such cramped quarters. I am not satisfied that this criticism is fair, because it is possible that the eggs are those of two rivals, though even then it might be argued that the second bird ought to know better than to choose a nest already engaged. That she should fall to do so is, perhaps, yet another example of this most unmotherly bird's brutal indifference to her offspring's future. She really is shocking. But, perhaps, the strangest blunder of all is that made by the Lemming, which marches in its thousands down to the sea, and, to all intents and purposes, commits the crime of foetus-acy. It really means to end his days then we cannot fairly describe the action as a blunder. The general opinion is, however, that the deed is the result of a mistake—surely the most gigantic ever made. The lemming, however, is too interesting a creature to be dismissed lightly. He must have a paragraph to himself some day. He is the strangest and most persistent suicide that ever died.

TO HONOR MEMORY OF EARLY ADMIRAL

dition he was recommended as one of the most competent men in the country to take a place of power in the infantry navy. He consequently received a commission to command the brig Lexington, of sixteen guns. The ship left Philadelphia in 1776 and was the first vessel to fly the Continental flag, from which fact Barry has been called the "Father of the American Navy." To this distinction the commander quickly added the glory of capturing the first vessel ever taken by an American warship in an engagement. His prize was the Edward, an armed British vessel. The action lasted about an hour and four of Barry's crew of seventy men were killed. This is said to have been the first blood shed in the naval service of the United States. While in command of the Alliance, near the close of the Revolution, Barry fought the great battle of his career with the British ships Atlanta and Trepassy. At the beginning of the battle the Alliance lay in a dead calm and could not bring her broadside to bear. The two British ships poured a galling fire into her and early in the engagement Captain Barry was carried below wounded in the shoulder by a shot from the flag of the Alliance was shot away and the crew of the enemy began cheering at the prospect of a certain victory. Barry, being wounded in the cockpit, declined to listen to any proposition to surrender. "If the ship can't be fought without it," he said, "I'll be carried on deck." His bravery stirred his crew. They covered wildly as their wounded commander was carried on deck. A new flag was hoisted and the American shot was sent into the enemy with deadly effect. A breeze sprang up and gave the Alliance a chance to shift and use her guns. The Americans then fought with such valor that the two British ships were forced to surrender and the captain were brought prisoners to Barry's stateroom. For the signal victory he had achieved and the personal bravery he had displayed in the action Captain Barry was given a vote of thanks by Congress.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

TAKE SALTS AT FIRST SIGN OF BLADDER IRRITATION OR BACKACHE. The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health. When your kidneys feel like the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or lumps of lead; your back hurts or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders. Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and nobody can make a mistake by having good kidney flushing any time. MRS. WINN'S ADVICE TO WOMEN

Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and be Restored to Health. Kansas City, Mo.—"The doctors told me I would never be a mother. Every month the pains were so bad that I could not bear my weight on one foot. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and had not finished the first bottle when I felt greatly relieved and I took it until it made me sound and well, and I now have two fine baby girls. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly for what it has done for me. I always speak a word in favor of your medicine to other women who suffer when I have an opportunity."—Mrs. H. T. WINN, 1225 Fremont Ave., Kansas City, Mo. Read What Another Woman Says: Cumming, Ga.—"I tell some suffering women every day of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it has done for me. I could not eat or sleep, had a bad stomach and was in misery all the time. I could not do my housework or walk any distance without suffering great pain. I tried doctors' medicines and different patent medicines but failed to get relief. My husband brought home your Vegetable Compound and in two weeks I could eat anything, could sleep like a healthy baby, and walk a long distance without feeling tired. I can highly recommend your Vegetable Compound to women who suffer as I did, and you are at liberty to use this letter."—Mrs. CHARLIE BAGLEY, R. 3, Cumming, Ga.
