HARD THING IS TO "RETURN"

Many Will Understand the Trials of Congressman in Taking Up His Old Profession.

In the American Magazine is an interview with a member of the United States house of representatives, who tells of the almost impossible barriers between him and his old profession, the law.

"After I had been in congress a couple of terms I decided that I would be happier and that my family would be vastly better off if I were back home practicing my profession," he said. "So after the adjournment of congress I set out to rebuild my neglected law business.

"I was astonished at what a job it was. My practice was not merely run down or temporarily absent. It was gone! Now, I had not yet become a topnotcher in my profession before going to congress. In order to make a comfortable income I had not been able to depend alone on the better grade of legal business, but was still obliged to do some of the more trivial work such as every young lawyer is glad to get. This class of business had gone from me in my absence, along with the rest. And it did not come back, because of a reason that I had not thought of. During my term in congress I had come to be looked upon as an important figure in the community and everybody regarded me as above such things as performing legal services of a trivial or minor character. Thus I did not get the small business and the big business was being taken care of by other lawyers who had been constantly on the job."

NAME NATION UPON MOUNTAIN

Tiny Montenegro Has For Centuries Nestled in the Shadow of Their Loved Lovcen.

The Black mountain has been taken and the central powers are knocking at the doors of the tiniest royal capital in the world. From Lovcen, the culminating peak of Montenegro proper, the realm of King Nicholas takes its name, and at its eastern base nestles Cetinje, a town of 3,000 souls and one broad street, but boasting a palace and a row of "legations"—whitewashed cottages sandwiched between the offices of the ministers of state. Because its northern and eastern declivities are in shadow the greater part of the day, the ancient Slavs called Lovcen "the Black mountain" and the hill becoming in time also "the Sacred mountain," the whole country to the north and east known as the "Country of the Black Mountain," or Montenegro. On its pedestal-like summit today stands a little chapel containing the body of Peter II, the last Vladika, or prince-bishop of Montenegro, who desired that he might be buried "so his spirit might survey his beloved land."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Earliest Coal Mining in Alabama.

The earliest known record of the existence of coal in Alabama was made in 1834, but the first statement of production in the state is contained in the United States census report for 1840, in which the amount mined is given as 946 tons. The mines of Alabama were probably worked to a considerable extent during the Civil war, but there are no specific records until 1870, for which the United States census reports a production of 11,000 tons. The development of the present great industry really began in 1881 and 1882, when attention was directed to the large iron deposits near the city of Birmingham. By 1885 the coal production of the state had increased to nearly 2,500,000 tons. In 1914, according to the United States Geological survey, the production was 15,593,422 tons.

Eel Caught in Chimney.

While fishing in Klamesna lake W. J. Groom caught a big eel incased in a lamp chimney, from which it could not free itself.

Two years ago Mr. Groom had caught the eel in a net at night, and when taken on shore it knocked over a table lamp, ran through the chimney and escaped into the lake, the glass inclosing the head and several inches of the eel. Although the lake is wide, deep and stony, the glass was not even chipped. The chimney had worn a deep groove in the body of the eel, which measured nearly five feet.—Port Jervis (N. Y.) Dispatch Philadelphia Record.

Mrs. Frank E. Walter, wife of a local cement contractor, has presented to her husband twins, both boys, and there are now six twin boys in the family. Two, Paul and Joseph, are three years old and the next two, Leon and Carl, eighteen months old.

That twins should be born into a family three times consecutively in such a brief space of time is considered remarkable. The family now consists of twelve children.
