

COSTLY UNDERGARMENTS.

Suits that Knock the Spots Out of a Hundred Dollar Note.

In a gentlemen's furnishing store up town, near the Fifth Avenue hotel, many wealthy and stylish men buy their linen and ties. The clerks there wear the latest collars, the latest ties, and the latest everything. They look like brokers and are very stylish.

"This winter," the most stylish of them said, "we have more novelties than ever before, and there is really no reason why a gentleman of refined tastes and with plenty of money should not be very comfortable. Here's an Arctic sleeper. You see it's made after the fashion of the socks that men sleep in at the north pole, only it's made of the finest lamb's wool, and tied around the neck with silken strings. Some of our young gentlemen are so delicately nurtured that a slight cold might be disastrous. They slide into this, and are protected utterly, no possible danger of slipping their feet out from under the covers. The wool has a slightly irritating effect on the skin, that produces a healthy circulation on the surface and induces sound slumber."

"What are these?" the reporter asked, pointing to what looked like ragged fur from the back of a kitten.

"These are the very latest driving gloves; very ugly, I'll admit, but nothing like them in the world for warmth. They surpass sealskin, buckskin, and everything of the kind. They consist of a background of knitted silk, covered inside and out with the fine silky hair taken from the belly of a raccoon, not the coarse, outer hair, but the fine fur that grows beneath. Eleven dollars a pair we sell them for, and 200 pairs are out already. There are those tobogganing gloves, made in London and shipped to Canada. They're just out, tight at the wrist, you see, and running way up over your overcoat to your shoulders. You could slide down from the top of Mount Blanc, head first, with a pair of those on, and you'd never get any snow up your sleeve. Now step back this way and I'll show you the most beautiful thing that you ever saw in undergarments."

"Shirts and drawers?" inquired the reporter.

"Yes, but don't call them that in this store, you'd hurt our more refined customers. Call them undergarments. Now look at this."

He drew out of a fancy box a heavy mass of knitted silk of the most beautiful blue tint.

"Now," he said as he stretched the garments out into human form, "isn't that the most lovely aesthetic thing you ever saw? Would you think that the man could have the heart to put such a work of art on his legs? But many have, and they go like wildfire. We sell them at $100 a suit, and the high price takes the fancy of the young men who have nothing to do but spend money. We have old millionaires for customers, and distinguished statesmen as well; among the latter President Arthur. Well, not one of those buys much fancy stock. They got rich buying merino undergarments at $6 or $8 a suit, and they keep right on that way. It's the rich young men who are always having fortunes left to them that keep up the trade. We had one young gentleman who inherited in one year no less than three fortunes, running from $50,000 to $300,000. The way he bought things that he didn't want would have done your heart good to see. Here's a lot of plain linen handkerchiefs. They're very fine, just like cobwebs, and sell for $80 a dozen. The young man I spoke of bought four dozen of these, and a dozen of these camel's hair socks, with silk heels and toes. They are only $6 a pair, and very comfortable, but why he wanted so many I can't understand. We do good business when young men are to be married. They get trousseaus as well as anybody, and they have to pay for it. Five hundred dollars is a small price for a good outfit. If you ever jump off, come around."

Education in Turkey.

The demand for higher education is spreading apace all over the globe, and even the indolent Turks are awaking to the fact which their neighbors, the Russians, long ago put into a proverb—"Knowledge is light, ignorance darkness." The government objects naturally, for when the light comes the darkness flies away, and if there be darkness embodied anywhere it is in the sublime porte.

But in spite of the government 102 students have been instructed during the year 1884-5 at the Central Turkey college at Aintab—a kind of Robert college for Asia minor. They were gathered from all the principal towns of European and central Asia, and belonged to all classes of society, most of them of course being Christians and Armenians. Of these, thirty-four students have paid a portion of their expenses by working as servants or teaching in the preparatory department. Surely, western students might take a leaf out of the book of their Oriental brethren.

Another sign of the advancement of civilization in Turkey is the fact that a leading press has recently been introduced into Aintab, which town of 45,000 inhabitants had hitherto found existence pleasant enough without such an apparatus. The specimens of Turkish and English print which were received show that the pressmen have made a fair beginning.

How Books Are Asked For.

"I want—a something historic." She wanted Berthe's "Prehistoric World."

"I want a nice book." "Please send Dr. B. two of Dumas's novels that he has never read."

"I want a commentary by a bishop; I do not remember his name."

"A book I saw here nine years ago."

"I don't recollect the title of the book I want; but there was a remarkable passage in the last part which I should remember if I saw it."

An American in Quebec.

In the citadel is shown a small cannon which was taken at Bunker's Hill. A party of Americans were looking at the gun the other day, while a sergeant recited its history. "Yes," said a lady, "you've got the cannon, but I guess we've got the hill." As a patriotic epigram, this is worth a place in history.

Not Found.

A mendicant approached a West Chester man on the cars the other day and said: "Dear sir, I have lost my leg," to which the West Chester man replied as he hurried away: "My friend, I have not seen anything of it."

ROYAL HAWAIIAN HOTEL.

The Royal Hawaiian Hotel is one of the leading architectural structures of Honolulu. The grounds upon which it stands comprise an entire square of about four acres, fronting on Hotel Street. This large area affords ample room for a lawn and beautiful walks, which are laid out most artistically with flowering plants and tropical trees. There are twelve pretty cottages within this charming enclosure, all under the Hotel management. The Hotel and cottages afford accommodations for 200 guests. The basement of the Hotel contains the finest billiard hall in the city; also, a first-class bar, well stocked with fine wines and liquors.

The main entrance is on the second floor, to the right of which are the elegantly furnished parlors. A broad passage-way leads from the main hall to the dining-room. These apartments open on to broad verandas, where a magnificent view of the Nuuanu Mountains may be seen through the wealth of tropical foliage that surrounds the balconies.

The fare dispensed is the best the market affords, and is first-class in all respects. Hotel and cottages are supplied with pure water from an artesian well on the premises. The Clerk's office is furnished with the Telephone, by which communication is had with the leading business firms of the city.
