

A NEW SHAKESPEARE.

Chicago Is Proud of the Statue Recently Unveiled in Lincoln Park.

Chicago is very proud of her new statue of Shakespeare, which was unveiled in Lincoln park the other day, and Chicago's pride is justifiable, for she has far and away the best of the many statues erected to the man who has done more than all others combined to make the English language worthy of preservation and study. The statue is the work of William Ordway Partridge, the Boston sculptor. It comes to Chicago through a bequest of $10,000 left for the purpose by the late Samuel Johnston, a wealthy citizen, who established a claim to grateful remembrance in the Lake City by other substantial bequests, notably one of $50,000 to St. Luke's hospital and one of $25,000 to the half orphan asylum.

Mr. Partridge has represented the poet in an attitude of studious contemplation, as though he were musing in a garden, a thought which the position of the statue in Lincoln park renders peculiarly happy and appropriate. The figure is of heroic mold, about half again as large as life, and its attitude is the embodiment of easy grace. The poet sits carelessly in a richly carved chair, his right arm thrown over its back, a small book clasped lightly in his right hand. The right leg is extended, while the left foot is drawn in toward the chair. The left hand lies easily on the left knee. On the ground at the poet's left lie a few ponderous volumes, neglected for the moment. A large cloak hangs over the back of the chair and completes the graceful lines of the statue.

The sculptor devoted three years of hard work and study to the completion of the statue and made it a labor of love. He visited England and spent a great deal of time at Stratford and in London studying all the famous portraits of Shakespeare and leaving nothing undone that might contribute an idea of what the poet looked like and what manner of man he was. Of 137 pictures which he examined, he says he put faith in only three—the Stratford effigy, the death mask and the Dreshout picture. As a result he has given his Shakespeare a countenance of singular nobility and beauty such as any lover of the bard must be glad to believe he in reality possessed.

THE PORTABLE VILLAGE LIBRARY.

A Novel Institution That Is Very Popular in England.

A novel and unique educational propaganda has been started by the English National Liberal club in its village library system, the plan of which facilitates the circulation of good books throughout the kingdom in places where books are usually scarce and hard to get. What is called a village library is a select assortment of books packed securely on shelves in a stout canvas covered, iron bound, padlocked box. Each box contains a catalogue and a number of Liberal leaflets for free distribution.

The boxes are all packed in London and sent to the secretary of the local Liberal association or some other responsible person, who lends the books out for as long a time as may be necessary under such rules as he may see fit to impose. No charge is made by the National Liberal club for the loan of the library, but the village librarian may exact a fee from the borrowers of a halfpenny a volume to recompense him for his trouble.

THE VILLAGE LIBRARY.

The box may be kept three months at each village, and when the books are all returned they are put back in the box and reshipped.

The extent of circulation by this system is enormous. A thousand boxes do not supply the demand. The wear and tear are trifling. Great care is exercised in the selection of books. Only standard works of fact and imagination are admitted. History, criticism, biography, science, economics, social problems, the best fiction and travel make up the greater part of the list, which never descends to the merely sensational. It would not be a bad idea to establish some such system in the United States. It might not pay interest on the money invested perhaps, but public libraries are not expected to do that, and it seems as if this system of sending out books would do a great deal more good than stacking them up on shelves to wait for some one to come along and read them. There are probably 50,000 villages in the United States where the arrival of such a library would be hailed with delight.

Can Live Without Food or Drink.
Prince Constantine Wiasensky, the Russian traveler who has just returned home from a three years' exploration of Tibet, asserts that he discovered there the secret possessed by the Buddhist monks and by the higher class of Hindoo fakirs of being able to dispense with food and drink for months at a time.

National and Citizens' Guards.

Having now arranged for the insertion of the Process photos on the HISTORY OF THE REVOLUTION of nearly all the social and political bodies connected with the Revolution we feel that there is nobody that deserves to be placed more highly on record than those citizens that at great inconvenience banded themselves together to protect life and property during the stormy days of the formation of the Provisional Government, we have decided to devote a series of pages to the officers and privates of the National Guard and Citizens' Guard. Some thirty or forty names have already been sent in and we shall be grateful if any member desiring to appear will send word to Mr. Wellesley Parker care of this office when he will immediately call and furnish full particulars.

Early attention to this is requested as the pictorial pages to the History must positively be closed in a few weeks.

The Crisp photo process, by which "The History" will be illustrated, is acquiring a well-merited reputation for excellence, the productions being artistic triumphs.

An instantaneous success!!! The project received by the business men of Honolulu in a most enthusiastic manner.

Art connoisseurs warm in its praise. "An artistic gem of the purest ray serene." TO BE PUBLISHED IN 1894.

The historians have commenced with the frame-work of the construction, setting forth the remote causes of events and the motives of human action; and follow up their connection with other developments, and present the whole in a finished exterior of high literary worth. The foundation principles of government, the predominant sentiments swaying human minds at different epochs, the physical condition of different parts of the land, the nature of different influences brought to bear upon the people, have all been closely studied, and the effects philosophically traced. Accuracy of statement, soundness of reasoning, clear presentation, and high literary merit will be the commanding aspect of this ambitious effort. It will be published in an attractive form containing over 200 pages,—fully illustrated, supplied with many maps and plans, containing tables of useful information and a complete index, it comprises all the accompaniments necessary to complete a work of its character.
