WALLACE R. FARRINGTON, - - EDITOR.
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1899.

THE Westminster Gazette denies that the Marquis of Salisbury has in his mind a scheme to enlist European powers in a joint refusal to accept the Monroe Doctrine. The Gazette says: "The Monroe Doctrine is a matter entirely between the old country and the United States, and if the time ever comes for Great Britain to take sides on the subject we shall stand with Americans, not against them."

Our correspondent's statement of the feeling existing on the island of Kauai concerning the inter-island service certainly demands more than passing attention from the business men of this island. The time is coming when the people of this country will be obliged to come to the system of "large sales and small profits" in order to compete successfully with the growing tendency of outside districts to deal directly with business houses of San Francisco. Our inter-island service is good, but our island friends are unmistakably convinced that it might be better, and they are inclined to turn their patronage in a direction to force the issue.

THE VENEZUELAN AFFAIR.

The Venezuelan dispute, which holds a steadily increasing prominence in the diplomatic circles of the American continents and England, continues to be clouded with a great many possibilities and newspaper conjectures that will be solved only when Lord Salisbury's latest communication to the Venezuelan authorities is made public. That this document is couched in forcible language and demands proper reparation for the arrest and detention of British police at Uruana there seems to be no question, but whether it goes farther, as is suggested by many European and American newspapers, and calls for a settlement of the boundary dispute on England's terms remains to be seen. While the press of London is united in poking fun at the Monroe Doctrine, it is recognized that the possible interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine by Secretary Olney is by far the most serious item of the whole affair. Should the British Government repeat the Corinto affair and endeavor to frighten the Venezuelans into submission by landing troops ostensibly to obtain indemnity money, the United States, following the precedent made by the present Administration, would undoubtedly keep out of the fight. If, however, an open fight for territory is to be made, the opposition of the United States will probably loom up in no indefinite form.

The London Times is prompt to come forward with the statement that the Americans have been too previous in their interpretation of Lord Salisbury's so-called ultimatum. It says that the tenor of the letter was not "such as to raise the question which a portion of the American press seems so anxious to discuss. The claim that the right bank of the Cuyani river belongs to them does not justify the Venezuelans in an attack upon the British police. Until the violent act is atoned for and an ample apology is made they are in a position of having suddenly removed the dispute from the sphere of diplomacy and challenged its settlement by force. Whether they count upon enjoying immunity on account of the distance to the scene of action from England, like other weak states, they presume upon their insignificance to do things no great power would attempt. It is time the Caracas politicians were taught a salutary lesson."

The Daily News (Liberal) handles the subject gingerly and remarks that Great Britain will have to "consider public sentiment in the United States," and set an example of "moderation and self-control." This conservative vein running through the usual national bluster indicates that even Joseph Chamberlain and Lord Salisbury will go around many diplomatic corners in order to avoid the possible results of a practical interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine. Meanwhile, Venezuela awaits developments and shows no signs of being frightened by bull-dozing.

A RECENT London dispatch to the New York Herald says that France is practically out of the sugar market, exporting little or no sugar—due, it is said, to a "corner" in beet sugar. The absence of the French product has had a sympathetic action on the markets, and was a factor in raising the price to 11s. per hundredweight, an advance of 1s. 6d. within a few weeks. A larger "corner" than that of the French syndicate was, it is supposed, recently attempted. A great insurance company of London was approached with a proposition that it insure sugar in different parts of the world to the value of £1,000,000. This company canvassed other companies with a view to getting them to cover part of the risk. Inquiries, however, rendered doubtful what quantities of sugar had been actually purchased, and a question arose as to whether speculators meant to operate on this insurance. The proposal, therefore, fell through, but it caused much talk in the sugar market. The large purchases of sugar for American account proceed in London and Greenock. Private advices support Giesicker's estimate of the deficit in the beet root crop. In addition to the shortness of the beet crop anxiety is caused by the crop in Cuba. Though it is reported to be large, it is doubtful if it will be reaped, owing to the disturbances on the island. American refiners will therefore be obliged to complete their purchases in Europe.

SAN FRANCISCO is making a hard fight to obtain the Republican National Convention, and political leaders of the West are inclined to harbor fond hopes of success, having practically obtained the support of Tom Reed's political manager, Joe Manley. The crafty politician from Maine evidently realizes that the popularity of his candidate increases in proportion to the distance from home. The people of this country will be pleased to see either of the conventions held in California, whoever the candidates may be. There are a great many politicians in the United States who can profit by a trip across their own country.

Timely Topics THE AERMOTOR AND Steel Tower.

As pumping is one of the most common uses to which wind motors are put, the method of communicating motion to the pump is very important and has received our closest attention, and the defect created in most wind mills of racking themselves to pieces in a severe wind has been obviated in the Aermotor by means of back gearing, so that the wheel makes about three turns to one stroke of the pump or enough so that the wheel may run at its natural speed, unrestrained in any moderate wind, without doing violence to the pump or its connections. This enables us to give the pump a long stroke instead of the quick, jerky, short strokes of ordinary wind mills. This means that the valves are not worked so harshly in opening and closing and that the wear and tear is greatly diminished, while the piston rod speed is increased, and consequently the pumping capacity is increased. The back gearing, together with the extra holes for crank pins in the crank wheel also makes it possible to use with the Aermotor any ordinary size of pump cylinder. If a wind motor is not sensitive to the direction of the wind much of its efficiency is lost.

The ease with which a wind mill faces up to the wind depends on weight of the mill—the kind and condition of the bearings on which it pivots and the comparative leverage of wheel and tail. In the matter of leverage, the advantage enjoyed by the Aermotor over common wind mills will be made apparent by the fact that the center of the wheel is only twelve inches from the mast or center on which it turns while that of the best known wheel is thirty inches, requiring as is easily seen two and one-half times as long or large a tail to balance the same sized wheel. The Aermotor presents one-half the surface to the wind; it is apparent that this other wheel must have five times the tail surface to make it face the wind equally well thereby greatly increasing the liability to wreck in a storm. The mere fact that we have placed 150 more Aermotors on the islands is sufficient guarantee of their superiority and desirability by those who want a motor that looks after itself.
