RED BANANA
NOW HERE

Variety Thrives in the Islands.

BROUGHT FROM MEXICO

S. M. Damon's Estate at Moanalua Shows Delicious Fruit From Slips.

The Advertiser advocated a few days ago the growing in these Islands of the Cuban, or red, banana, and as a result it has developed that at Moanalua, the beautiful country place of S. M. Damon, the cultivation of this variety of banana has already been begun, as well as at the Government nursery.

Eighteen months or more ago Prof.
Koebele, the Government naturalist, brought from Mexico several slips of the red banana, advising that their cultivation be begun at once, as they were a very palatable fruit and would thrive in these Islands. The slips were divided between the Government nursery and Mr.
Damon's place at Moanalua, and at both places they are doing well and are already large enough to bear.

"Mr. Damon called my attention to the Advertiser editorial the other day," said Donald MacIntyre, superintendent of Mr.
Damon's estate, yesterday, "and he said that he intended to take a bunch of the red bananas to your editorial rooms to show what has been done here at Mo-analua towards the cultivation of this variety of banana.

"Prof. Koebele sent us nine different varieties of banana from Mexico a year ago last December. They were all planted a year ago on Washington's birthday and have done splendidly. From some of the roots we have obtained several bunches, and others are coming rapidly.
We cut one large bunch from the red banana tree two weeks ago. The slips are growing up rapidly in place of the dead stalk and we ought to have a good crop of them next year. The tree seems strong and will undoubtedly thrive here, and I see no reason why in a few years the crop should not be large all over the Islands.

"At present our tree and one at the Government nursery are the only ones of the red variety, the Largo as it is called in Mexico, that are to be found in Hawaii. We expect to send a slip to H. F.
Baldwin's place on Maui shortly and Mr.
Damon's idea is to send slips all over the Islands to responsible planters who will take an interest in its growth and see that it is spread still further until it will be found everywhere in the Islands."

Mr. MacIntyre showed the Advertiser man all over the estate, calling attention particularly to many improvements that have been recently instituted by him under Mr. Damon's instructions. The banana orchard was of particular interest.
Besides the red banana tree—the Largo—there are eight large banana plants, all of which were sent from Mexico by Prof.
Koebele, and all of which are bearing.
They stand about fifteen feet high and bear a large banana, long and tapering to a decided point at either end and very sweet to the taste. The different varieties are known as the Marko, the Balsa, the Manana, the Manila, the Morado, the Thuna and the Gunia, besides the Largo, or red, banana. These names, Mr. MacIntyre said, were probably local names bestowed upon them by the Mexicans. There was also the "honey banana," a tiny little fellow, much similar to the Chinese variety which is exported, and commands a very high price on account of its sweetness and delicious flavor.

In addition to the imported varieties there were a number of large and husky plants of the common banana which grows so plentifully all about the Islands.
On these were huge bunches of ripe fruit ready to be cut from the tree.

Besides bananas Mr. MacIntyre has a fine-looking orchard of papayas, fig bushes by the score, which he is covering with a system of wire netting to keep off the all-devouring Japanese beetle, alligator pear trees, a field of pineapples, and almost every fruit known to the Islands, in quantities.

In one of the many conservatories, protected from the beetle by wire netting and other schemes there are muskmelon vines, rare enough now in the Islands although they were plentiful before the arrival of the beetle. The little green melons, worth their weight in silver almost, have each a little platform swung
