John Addison Porter III. PUTNAM, Conn., Oct. 25.—John Addison Porter, former secretary to President McKinley, lies dangerously ill at his country residence in Pomfret, four miles from here. It is understood that he underwent, on Wednesday, a delicate and successful surgical operation.

MONARCHY OR REPUBLIC.

Is Hawaii a Monarchy or a Republic? By law Hawaii is American soil. By grace of William McKinley and the American Congress, a free ballot has been placed in the hands of all citizens of Hawaii, and they have been given powers and privileges never before accorded an American Territory.

Without probation or limit, every Hawaiian has had extended to him the full rights of an American citizen. This has been done under the supposition that Hawaiians were worthy of the gift; that they would appreciate and live up to American standards; that they were ready for self government; that they would in good faith take part in the upbuilding and establishment of Republican government.

How are these expectations being fulfilled? The local Republican organization has met the United States more than half way. It is making its fight on the issues of the day and the hope of the future, ignoring the past and welcoming to its ranks men of all races and previous political sentiments. The other two parties have gone off on a totally different tangent. The Independents began by hoisting the race issue to the most head and proclaiming that "no white man need apply." To take the edge off this proposition they have added two or three white skins on a ticket of forty-five, who are proving their worthlessness by outdoing even Wilcox in their reckless denunciation of "the white robbers," their eulogies of monarchy and the stirring up of race hatred between the natives and the whites.

The Democrats began the campaign on legitimate party lines and issues, denouncing "Wilcoxism" unsparingly; but they have drifted over to the independent standpoint, until the only practical difference between the literature, the speeches and the practical campaign principles of the two parties, is the name with which they are labelled.

For the past week, practically all other grounds upon which the Democratic and Independent candidates were seeking for votes have been abandoned, and both are now seeking support because they were royalists; tried to restore the monarchy; opposed annexation; still favor the restoration of the monarchy; and will continue to work for that result. Every man who favored annexation or who is now loyal to the union with the United States is denounced as an enemy of the Hawaiian, a robber of the country, a despoiler of an innocent queen.

Their whole campaign has in fact degenerated into glorification of the monarchy, half veiled promises that it will be restored, and denunciation of the United States and its officials who favored annexation, while the only Americans who receive a word of commendation at their hands are Grover Cleveland and Commissioner Blount, and they are praised for the sole reason that they tried to restore the monarchy.

As matters now stand, there is only one American party in the field—the Republican. No more un-American sentiments could be expressed than are daily and nightly poured forth by both Independent and Democratic speakers.

The two parties have become a Siamese twin combination, bound together by a mutual hostility for a Republican, and admiration for a monarchical form of government.

There are a number of men who have joined the local Democratic party, or who have intended to vote its ticket, either because they were Democrats before they came here, or because they approved of the principles of the national party.

To these men we appeal to be Americans before they are Democrats. The local Democratic leaders despairing of success on their own merits, are trying to fish from the Independents their one issue. We hear day after day, with monotonous continuity, from Macfarlane, Carter, McClanahan, Bush, and the lesser lights, such preposterous adulation of those who tried to restore the monarchy, and denunciation of those who sought to establish Americanism and representative institutions as never before masqueraded under the name of Democracy.

When such a plea is made in an American territory to American citizens, it is time that believers in representative government sunk party differences, and joined hands to scotch the spirit of retrogression that if successful will perpetuate the wretched race issues which it was hoped and believed would end forever with the introduction of American parties and national issues.

Let us prove that we are Americans; that we believe in representative government; that there is no longer room in Hawaii for a monarchy; that we have buried the dead issues of the past; that we are looking forward and not backward; that we believe in race equality and co-operation, not the stimulation of class hatred; that we look forward to a glorious future for this beautiful land, and have no time for walling over what might have been.

The only way to give practical expression to these sentiments—expression which will be understood at home and abroad—is to vote the Republican ticket, and vote it as a whole.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE DELEGATE.

The latest news is that McKinley's election is practically certain, probably carrying with him a majority in Congress. This again points to the wisdom of sending to Washington a man of the same party as the one in power.

This is not a question that is open to argument; it is a patent fact. It is not only appropriations that are involved; there will be innumerable questions affecting our land system, our commerce, rules, regulations, and extension of Federal agriculture, forestry and fishing stations to the Islands. Many of these matters are under the direct control of the executive. They are not matters of law; but of executive discretion.

A delegate of the same party as the President and Cabinet officers will be a welcome caller, and his requests will be complied with if possible. A friendly word from a high official removes obstacles otherwise insurmountable.

Does any one doubt that Sam Parker, with his genial nature and manner, will be cordially received by all Washington officialdom from the President to messenger boy? Does any one believe that either Wilcox or Prince David would stand in the same favorable relation to the powers that be?

To Wilcox every Republican—every white man for that matter—is a "cockroach," a "snake," a "robber." While he will be treated politely, does any one imagine that the "Republican snakes" in Washington are going out of their way to do him favors, or to assist him?

And David? Frenzied appeals are being made by his leading supporters to vote for him "because he represents the monarchical idea;" "because his election will be a stinging rebuke to the damnable, the hellish outrage perpetrated by McKinley in annexing Hawaii." McKinley is not a monarchist. He is President of a free Republic. Why send a monarchist to get favors from him?

If "the stinging rebuke" is elected, does any one believe that the Republican officials in Washington, who trust and honor William McKinley, will take kindly to a man who is a walking certificate of condemnation of the man they love and respect?

Regardless of previous or present party affiliations, as a question of plain, practical, business common sense, Prince David and Robert Wilcox are hopelessly handicapped as officials who would be useful to Hawaii at Washington, while the logical candidate, the man of all others available, who can be of the most practical benefit to the Islands, is Samuel Parker.

JOHN EMMELUTH.

The most impudent man now before the public is John Emmeluth. A leader in the revolutionary movement of 1897, he now denounces it as one to deprive the Hawaiians of their rights.

A public denouncer of the queen in 1893; a member of the committee which dethroned her; an advocate of deporting the queen and hanging Wilcox in 1895, and a continuous worker for annexation until it was secured, he now with brazen impudence tells the natives that the "robber whites" stole their country and robbed them of their queen and their rights; while he travels cheek by jowl with Wilcox and proclaims him a Moses to save his people.

A denouncer of trusts, he is himself one of the organizers and is now a leading member of the meanest trust that ever ground the face of the poor. A denouncer of the sugar planters, he is straining his resources in an attempt to become a planter himself. How can such a man be described? The charitable explanation is that he

THE JAPANESE EMPEROR.

The Japanese Emperor again celebrates his birthday to-day, and his fellow countrymen at home and abroad are to be congratulated that such is the fact. He is the one Asiatic monarch possessed of absolute authority, who has voluntarily laid down such power and peacefully granted to his subjects by a stroke of the pen rights and privileges which Europeans and Englishmen fought for hundreds of years to secure.

The soundness of his judgment in making this move is evidenced by the fact that in the brief decade since it was done, Japan and the Japanese have progressed at a more rapid rate proportionately than any other nation in the world.

In wishing His Imperial Majesty many happy returns of the day, we not only do so as an act of politeness to our nearest neighbor, but in the sincere belief that his continuance in the high office which he so ably fills is highly conducive to the advancement of his nation and of enlightened civilization.

"Want of Watchfulness"

Makes the Thief."

Many cases of poor health come from want of watchfulness. But if you keep your blood pure no thief can steal your health. The one effective, natural blood purifier is Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Disordered Blood—"My father has long been troubled with disordered blood and weak back. Hood's Sarsaparilla made him strong and healthy; he works every day." A. S. Wykes, S. Easton, Pa.

Humor—"When I need a blood purifier I take Hood's Sarsaparilla. It cured my humor and is excellent as a nerve tonic." Josie Eaton, Stafford Springs, Ct.

Truss Advice

We advise a celluloid truss because it wears longer than the other kind and is more comfortable to wear than a leather covered one. It may seem odd that we advise you to buy a long wearing truss, thinking we like to sell as many as possible. We do. The only trouble is that people have an uncomfortable habit of blaming a Druggist for the short comings of a leather covered truss. Then they buy the next truss somewhere else. If you buy a celluloid truss of us it will give you such good service that you'll come to us when you need another.
