THE MURDER OF KUKUMA

Police Handicapped and Robber is Aided by Miserable Telephone Service.

To the miserable telephone service may in part be laid the blame for the death of Kukuma, a South Sea Islander, employed as watchman at the Kaili poi factory of Judge Wilcox, who was brutally stabbed and beaten early Friday morning by persons yet unknown to the police. The unfortunate victim died at the Queen's Hospital Saturday afternoon.

The motive of the terrible assault is supposed to have been robbery, for the man was known to have a small sum about his body. Kukuma was so badly cut and beaten that he was unable to speak a word to the police or hospital attendants concerning those connected with the dastardly affair. Some time between 2 o'clock and 3 o'clock Saturday morning, some person or persons went to his room at the factory. He was set upon, and from the appearance of the room a desperate struggle must have taken place. Blood was spattered in every direction. The furniture was overturned, and it was evident that the old man sold his life dearly.

His money was carried in a small bag which he usually kept on his person. It is believed that in the attempt to get control of this bag, that knives were used, for the old man's hands were terribly hacked and cut.

From the appearance of his hands face. A thrust of the knife was made through them, almost severing the thumb and fingers. Above the wrists deep gashes were inflicted. One of the most terrible wounds was in his face. A thrust of the knife was made into his cheek from the right side, completely penetrating it and lacerating the flesh in a terrible manner. A very deep, was either made by a knife or some blunt instrument. The attack was one of the most fiendish in the annals of crime in Honolulu.

The wounded man was found by an employee named E. Montgomery. He rang up the central telephone office, but could get no answer. Time and again he made the effort to communicate with the police station, but in no case could he even obtain an answer from the central.

After the midnight hour, those who are compelled to use the telephone find that the greatest difficulty is met in making their signals heard in the central office. Montgomery finally despaired of communicating over the wires, and saddled a horse on which he galloped at breakneck speed into town. The patrol wagon was sent to the scene and removed him to the hospital.

Upon arrival the doctors were of the opinion that most of the blood in the man's body had left his veins. The gash on his head was stitched up and the hands and arms bandaged. The hole in the right cheek was bandaged and packed, and it was then found that the old man's jaw was broken.

Deputy Sheriff Chillingworth impaneled a jury composed of G. C. Griffiths, W. E. Burnette, A. P. Taylor, Charles Spencer, A. G. Nicholas and Mr. Jeffs, which viewed the body at the hospital. The jury was adjourned to meet when called by the deputy sheriff, who hopes to find some clue which will result in bringing the assassins to justice. During the last hours of the old man's life the surgeons were compelled to almost stand him on his head in order to keep up the action of the heart, which was well nigh drained of blood. The case ceased had been in Honolulu but a short time, and was a reliable employee of Judge Wilcox.

LITERARY FOLKS' ENTERTAINMENT

A large and fashionable audience assembled Saturday afternoon in the rooms of the Kiloheana Art League in the Model block for the third entertainment in the series of literary "At Homes" to be given by that club. The rooms were charmingly decorated with emblems of the Society and appropriate setting to the subject of the afternoon, which was the life and works of Sidney Lanier; lecturer, Mrs. W. B. Frear.

The lecture was prefaced by a selection from Beethoven for the violin, by Miss King, with piano accompaniment by Miss Castle. The number was a gem. A good accompaniment is rare. Miss Castle's charming and sympathetic accompaniment was a thing of beauty.

Mrs. Frear, in a simple and transparent manner, gave a lecture made up of a biographical sketch of Sidney Lanier with a review of his poems. Mention was also made of the essays and valuable criticisms which constitute his prose works. It is Max Muller who says "That a man's religious convictions and sentiments are the most delicate of human themes." Mr. Lanier's prose develops the cleverness of the intellectual, and his poetry breathes the higher atmosphere of "Love." To humanity and God.

Mrs. Frear was abetted by a warm admiration for the poetry of her author, and developed her convictions with grace, courage and evident sympathy. The review was interspersed with readings from the author, and verses of the poet set to music, sung by Mr. Walter F. Dillingham, and Mr. Isaac Dillingham. The songs were given in an altogether free and agreeable manner, marked by the charm in each case, of fresh, rich voices.

At the conclusion of the lecture, tea was served, and the works of the author informally discussed "Over the teacups." At a late hour the members dispersed, having enjoyed the refreshing of a delightful and profitable afternoon.

Miss Charlotte Hall had charge of the serving of the refreshments, and was ably assisted by Mrs. T. R. Walker, Mrs. George Davies, Mrs. James B. Castle, Mrs. Hedemaun, and Mrs. A. M. Smith. The rooms were decorated under the direction of Mrs. Rothwell. The general arrangements for the afternoon were in charge of Mrs. W. M. Graham.
