STUDENTS LEAGUE.

Meet in Y. M. C. A. the Big World Over.

A. B. WOOD SPEAKS OF FEDERATION

Wonderful Growth of a Christian Body Which Cares for the Youths in Colleges.

ALL OVER the world yesterday the Young Men's Christian Associations met in the afternoon and prayed for the success of the Students' Christian Federation. The meeting in Honolulu was held in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association at 4 o'clock, led by Secretary Coleman and Assistant Secretary Coats. The objects of the Federation were explained in a short and interesting address by A. B. Wood, the corresponding secretary of the organization. Secretary Coleman prefaced his remarks upon the subject of the Federation by speaking upon the influences of the Young Men's Christian Association upon young men attending college. The subject, he said, brought up the picture of a young man by James Lane Allen in his recent book, "The Reign of Law," which portrayed the life of a Christian young man from the hemp fields of Tennessee. The young man had saved enough of his earnings to attend college there to complete his education with the ultimate object of becoming a minister. While attending the college he was assailed by doubts and began reading doubtful literature. He was finally led away from his early Christian life and training. Secretary Coleman said that in the past many colleges were without the home influence which the Young Men's Christian Association exerted. At the present day the Young Men's Christian Association numbers among the collegians thousands of its members, and the work among them is carried on from the home, through college and into the world when they enter upon their life's duties. Such was the object of the Students' Christian Federation. It was intended to uplift and uphold the young men not only as collegians but as men of the world.

A. B. Wood spoke interestingly of the Federation. He said it was organized about five years ago although the greatest amount of work has been accomplished by it in the past two years. It plished by it in the past two years. The idea of the organization came through the conversation principally of men in the United States, Canada and England. Subsequently organizations were added in Germany, Sweden and Norway, Denmark, France, in Spain and Italy the work is in its initial stages and is now extending to Egypt, India, China, Japan, and has therefore practically circled the world. General Secretary Mott was in Honolulu three or four years ago, and spent several weeks organizing a branch of the Federation. His organizations here were effected in Oahu College and Kamehameha School. His trip around the world lasted two years and had a very strong influence in Christian work. In 1896 there were 900 organizations that came into the Federation. At the last world's convention, held in Versailles, France, last year, there were over 1,400 reported. The Young Women's Christian Association organizations of the world have also become affiliated with the Federation, it not being intended entirely to be a men's organization.

The principal work of the Federation is in Bible study and the offering of prayers and the leaders of the movement feel assured that their labors have not been in vain, for there seems to be an appreciable revival of Christian spirit in all the schools and colleges, especially in the United States. That the Federation is international is evidenced by the nationality of the officers. The president is Swedish, the vice president a Japanese, the treasurer is an Englishman, while the general secretary, Mr. Mott, is an American. One day in the year has always been set apart for the consideration of the Federation by all the Young Men's Christian Associations. It is the purpose of the Federation that its young men and women who leave the colleges shall be fitted both morally and intellectually with the education necessary to make them valuable factors in shaping the laws of the land, and that they shall see that pure laws are made. "The work of the Federation is not theoretical, but is real and practical," concluded Mr. Wood. "The results of the work of the past five years has shown it is practical because it has gotten hold of young men. Some of the greatest religious movements of the year in the different universities were under the guidance of members of the Young Men's Christian Association. The controlling idea of the organization is that the lives of men and women shall be purified, not alone without, but within."

CHAMBERLAIN ARRIVES.

He is not going to Make any Sweeping Changes.

Roy H. Chamberlain, the newly appointed Collector of Internal Revenue, arrived on the China, together with his wife and two children. Mr. Chamberlain will take official charge of the local department on the 16th inst., when it will be transferred to him by Acting Collector Hasson, who has held the office temporarily since the resignation of William Haywood. The transfer will be attended to by George H. Fletcher, special agent of the Treasury Department, who came on the same steamer for that purpose.

Mr. Chamberlain says it is not his intention to make any sweeping changes in the personnel of the office and no changes will be made except for incompetence. Mr. Chamberlain says the offices have been well conducted and there will probably be no changes on this account.

The new collector comes from Iowa and is a son-in-law of Representative Hobson of that state. For two years past he has been in the customs service in Cuba and he has also served the Government in the postal service.

THEY LIKED THE PAPER

Mainland Press Comments on Advertiser's New Year Edition.

During the last two weeks the Advertiser has received pleasant notices from the Mainland press of its New Year edition, but many of them, written by personal friends of the management, cannot be reproduced without immodesty. Five more or less impartial clippings will serve, as here produced, to show how the paper struck the newspaper profession:

The twentieth century number of the Pacific Commercial Advertiser, published in Honolulu, has just reached this country. The Commercial Advertiser is edited by Walter G. Smith, a former Brooklynite. The typographical features of the paper are excellent. It is printed upon a high grade of smooth finished paper, the type is clear and distinct and numerous half-tone cuts evidence the efficiency of its art department. Among a variety of interesting illustrations are cuts showing the editorial staff, members of the art department, the composers, the officers and clerks of the business department and employees of the jobbing, binding and press departments. This particular issue has several readable articles on the past and future of Honolulu.—Brooklyn Eagle, Jan. 20.

The Honolulu Commercial Advertiser issued a thirty-two page special New Year's edition on January 1st. The number is finely printed on book paper and very rich in illustration. The cover design is a tinted half-tone of the statue of Kamehameha I.

A history of the paper since its establishment in 1856 is given, with portraits of all the people connected with the publication today in all departments, from the editor-in-chief to the printer's devil. A considerable portion of the space is devoted to a review of the progress of the various industries of Hawaii and a summary of their present conditions, with pictures of many of the chief business places of the Islands. A very large amount of data showing general prosperity throughout Hawaii is collected and presented in an attractive manner. There are also several descriptive articles concerning the life and scenery of the Islands. Considerable space is devoted to the educational facilities offered, and there are portraits of the chief officers of the local government.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Mr. Walter Gifford Smith, editor-in-chief of the Pacific Commercial Advertiser of Honolulu, has our thanks for the thirty-two page handsomely illustrated New Year's number of that enterprising journal. Not only is the interesting story of that paper told with illustrations of its early and its present home with photo representation of its full corps of editors and reporters and artists, its employees, including printers and pressmen and carriers, and the officers of the association, showing an extensive, enterprising and well-equipped newspaper establishment, but the pages of the paper are replete with information concerning the varied interests of that far-away land, but a few decades ago the abode of cannibals, now thoroughly Americanized and transformed into an Eden of beauty and fruitfulness—all illustrated in the highest style of the art and glowing with the inspiration of the new-born century. And the personality of the editor-in-chief gives it to us an added interest. We are sure that he has not yet quite forgotten his visit to Tarrytown and the Argus office in the early summer of 1876, while yet a youth, and which he has been kind enough to say gave some bent and direction to his after life. Our hearty congratulations and best wishes to Editor Smith and the Pacific Commercial Advertiser of Honolulu, U. S. A.—Tarrytown (N. Y.) Argus.

Among the noteworthy special New Year's editions called to our attention is the Pacific Commercial Advertiser of Honolulu, H. I. It is a daily morning paper, and this number contains thirty-two pages, printed on excellent book paper with colored cover. The paper contains several dozen excellent cuts of buildings and places of interest besides all of the photographs of its large staff.—Pasadena Daily News.

Through the kindness of a friend in Hawaii we have received a copy of the New Year edition of the Honolulu Commercial Advertiser, which is one of the finest illustrated editions we ever saw. It contains a write-up of Honolulu and cuts of the principal buildings of that city as well as a history of the paper, which was started in 1856.—Pocahontas (Ia.) Herald.

Smoking Goes On.

"Smoking Strictly Prohibited" placards in the tram-cars are observed in about the same proportion as "Keep Off the Grass" signs elsewhere, and with little effort on the part of the drivers to have them obeyed. Of ten men riding yesterday in one of the King street cars shortly after 6 o'clock in the evening, six were smoking. Three native boys puffed great clouds of cigarette smoke with the zeal of a locomotive on an up-grade; two were white men enjoying fragrant 5-cent Smelladoros, and a Chinese competed with them in a vigorous manner. The driver of the car was cognizant of the violation of the company's recently promulgated rule, for he had difficulty in observing the occupied standing room on the back platform by reason of the pungent clouds of rank tobacco.

Spruance, Stanley & Co., San Francisco, are the proprietors of the celebrated "Kentucky Favorite" whiskey.

George E. Fletcher, special agent of the Treasury Department, is in the City, and is engaged in checking up the Internal Revenue office.
