MINORS CAN BUY POISON

Startling Evidence at a Coroner's Inquest.

A SUBTLE DRUG UNDER NEW NAME

"Corrosive Sublimat" Regarded as Deadly, But as "Ant Poison," Harmless.

We, the jury, find that Mrs. K. Yamashita came to her death from corrosive sublimate administered by her own hand with suicidal intent.
We strongly recommend that more care be exercised in the sale of poisons or concoctions thereof to minors.
Coroner's Jury verdict and recommendation at the inquest over the body of Mrs. K. Yamashita.

A startling phase in the sale of drugs in Honolulu was elicited from a druggist yesterday afternoon during the inquest over Mrs. K. Yamashita, the Japanese woman who killed herself by taking ant poison on Tuesday, because of a domestic quarrel. The druggist, who compounds prescriptions in one of the largest drug stores in the city, states that "Ant Poison," as sold under that name, is not restricted in sale according to the regulations of the Board of Health, and no sale of it is even recorded on the firm's books.

Ant poison is composed of ingredients, the larger portion of which is corrosive sublimate, a subtle poison, and in small quantities will kill human beings. Corrosive sublimate is known to the druggists as a poison, and on no account would they sell the plain drug to any one except upon a prescription from a physician. "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," yet bottles labelled "Ant Poison," are sold indiscriminately out of the drug stores, regardless of consequences.

In a regulation passed by the Board of Health on June 1, 1899, the restriction on the sale of drugs reads as follows: "The following drugs and chemicals shall be held to constitute a poison or poisons within the meaning of Chapter 88 of the Penal Laws. (Schedule A contains a list of poisons, "which are not to be sold except upon the prescription or order of a duly licensed practitioner of medicine.")

"Schedule B, Drugs and Medicines, which are only to be sold to responsible parties, and when properly labelled 'Poison,' and of the sale of which an entry has been made of the quantity sold, name of the purchaser, purpose for which to be used, and by whom, in a book regularly kept for that purpose. (In this list appears corrosive sublimate.) Prof. E. C. Shorey, chemist of the Board of Health, who made an analysis of the contents of the stomach and liver of Mrs. Yamashita, says that the bottle which contained the 'Ant Poison' had enough corrosive sublimate to have killed half a dozen or more persons. In one-sixth of the liver of Mrs. Yamashita he found one and a half grains of corrosive sublimate, enough to have caused her death.

The so-called "Ant Poison" and labeled as such, is in reality nothing more nor less than the most deadly of poisons with a solution of oil of cloves to precipitate it. The mere fact that it is labelled ant poison does not take away the man-killing nature of the drug. Druggist Myers, who is a prescriptionist at Benson, Smith's drug store, stated yesterday that he considered ant poison deadly to human beings, but being labelled "Ant Poison," he thought it could be sold indiscriminately.

He also stated that he was not in the habit of making entries of sales of "ant poison," or of making himself acquainted with the identity of the purchaser. He states that so many sales are made of the "ant poison" that he does not even remember to whom he sold it. The inquest was held by Deputy Sheriff Chillingworth before the following jury: Wm. Nott, Fred Weed, E. Paris, E. E. Mossman, H. C. Vida and B. Bowers.

Dr. Shorey testified to the analysis made of the contents of the stomach and liver of the deceased woman. Dr. Pratt testified to having performed the autopsy. Druggist Myers in reply to a question as to the sale of the ant poison said it was simply sold as "ant poison" and not as corrosive sublimate.

"We do not keep any records of sales of the 'ant poison,'" said he. "I don't know why. Personally I have never made a record of it. "Are you not aware that it is a poison, and according to the statute must be recorded and the names of purchasers placed on record?" inquired the Coroner. "There is a rule to that effect," replied the druggist. "For instance, if anybody would buy corrosive sublimate, it would be recorded."

"If arsenic was sold as 'Sure-To-Kill,' it would not be recorded?" "We don't regard 'rat poison' or 'ant poison' as such." "You are aware that it is corrosive sublimate sold practically as ant poison?" "Yes."

The Japanese boy to whom was sold the "ant poison" was brought before the jury. He identified Mr. Myers as the one who had sold him the poison. "Do you recollect this boy as the one to whom you sold the poison—last Tuesday?" "I do not." "Are the employees of Benson, Smith & Co., in the habit of selling any poison or other drugs in which corrosive sublimate is used, to minors?" "Well, I can't speak for the other employees. For myself if a boy called for any poison other than 'ant poison,' he would not get it."

"Why is it you would sell him 'ant poison' and not another poison?" "Well, 'ant poison' is put up in such a way that it is distinctive, and is marked and labelled 'ant poison,' and I do not therefore record it." "Suppose the label 'ant poison' should be torn off this compound and an analysis made, what would be the chief ingredient found in it?"

"Corrosive sublimate."

"Would this kill a person as well as ants?"
"Yes, sir, I think it would."
Dr. Kobayashi, one of the attending physicians, stated he was called and saw the woman on July 9 for the first time. He attended her for several hours and came again the next day when she died. He made no report to the police or Board of Health because he was only the consulting physician.
Dr. Hyado said he was not aware of the methods to be pursued in such cases, but promised in future he would promptly notify the proper authorities.
The jury, taking into consideration the circumstances under which the woman obtained the poison, recommended that the druggists be warned that more care in the sale of "Ant Poison" to minors should be taken. They found that Mrs. Yamashita came to her death by taking ant poison with suicidal intent.

ROWING AND TENNIS.

Cornell won the intercollegiate boat race over the Hudson river course. Columbia was second, Wisconsin third and Georgetown fourth. The time was 18:53 1-5. The best previous record for "varsity eights" was 19:44 3-5. Syracuse and Pennsylvania finished many lengths behind. Pennsylvania won the freshman race with Cornell second.
At Henley, in their first heat for the Grand Challenge cup, Pennsylvania defeated London easily by three lengths. In their second heat Pennsylvania defeated the Thames Rowing Club by three lengths. In the final heat Leander defeated Pennsylvania after a fierce struggle by a length.
In the final heat for the Diamond challenge sculls, V. Fox defeated G. Ashe.
In the contest for the all-comers doubles at Wimbledon, England, Davis and Ward, the American players, and the Dohertys tied. The Americans took the first set and the Englishmen the second. The third set was 9 even when rain interfered. In the final play the Dohertys defeated Davis and Ward and retained the championship.
Mrs. Sterry of Surbiton beat Mrs. Hilliard, holder of the English ladies' singles championship.
