EARLY CLOSING AS SEEN BY WORKERS

EDITOR ADVERTISER: I have read with interest several articles and opinions on early closing in this city in the columns of your valuable paper. Some of these opinions, objections and so forth are really amusing. Why does "Workingman," as he or she styles himself or herself, object so strongly to the closing of the stores at, say, 1 o'clock on Saturdays? The idea of the workingman being able to do his buying of stores, etc., on Saturday only, is absolutely ridiculous on the face of it. The purchases of the workingman, from noon till 9 o'clock on Saturdays do not amount to a hill of beans. In some of the stores it does not pay clerk-hire, storekeepers say. "Well, if we close, people will patronize the Chinese and Japanese stores and we will lose trade." What a babyish and silly idea! Surely the storekeepers of Honolulu have more faith in their patrons than to think they would resort to such methods. No, sir; no store in this city is going to lose any trade through the closing movement. Intending buyers will do their shopping earlier in the day. No doubt there will be many grumblers, who don't care a straw for any but themselves, who will never think of such a thing, and go out to buy and find he can't do so because all the stores are closed and clerks and employers are enjoying life for a time. The public want to be educated in the matter, same as a child in school. I have seen this question fought out in my own country, and also the eight-hour movement; and in that country one sees more happiness and contentment than in a country where every hour of the week is taken up in work. Men do not feel like slaves then, and one man is not afraid that another is going to make more money than he, because he is going to keep his store open for a few hours longer a week. There the stores open at eight and close promptly at five, and at noon on Saturdays. While business houses are open from nine till five, it is compulsory to give employees at least one-half day per week. There one can indulge in sport of every kind and look forward to various contests every Saturday afternoon. There one sees many a man working in his home for the benefit of his dear ones during the hours he doesn't have to go out to work. His work there is a pleasure to him and the sight of the many beautiful little flower beds and promising vegetable gardens are proof of what a boon and a blessing a few hours spent in a home will do. But where a man works from seven till six he don't have the heart to work for himself and family. In a climate like this it is almost too much for any man to work the hours he is compelled to. If the hours were shorter the health of the community would be better. Small wonder that so many people are run down like they have lost all vitality. Sir, the Saturday closing people are doing a noble work, no matter what cranks may say, and they will have the heartfelt thanks of many a clerk in this town. The man or woman who works all the week from seven to five and from seven till nine on Saturdays, is not fit for much on Sundays. I don't profess to know, and surely the one who signs "Workingman" to his letter is not so selfish and narrow as to begrudge a few more hours a week to those who would fully appreciate the luxury.

I am only a clerk, or a "poor, tired clerk," as we are often called, and would enjoy the half-day as well as any but at the same time I am fairly contented with my lot, but for the sake of others who are not so fortunate as myself I would like to see the early closing in Honolulu, and the Y. W. C. A. have my best wishes in the work they have taken in hand.

American are prone to boast of their liberty, but if we all take a good look at ourselves—well, we are all slaves to the Big D. God never intended man to work day after day and never take any pleasure, and no man ought to be expected to do nothing but work every hour of his life that it is possible to crowd in. Trusting some abler pen than mine will enlighten us in this proposition, I am, etc.

AKE AKE AKE.

FROM WORKINGMAN.

EDITOR ADVERTISER: Kindly allow me space to reply to Miss Working Girl, also to Mr. Brown. In reply to Miss Working Girl I can assure her that I am not jealous of any concessions she or her fellow-clerks may obtain. What I do object to is closing the stores against the majority of the working-people. She asks how are they going to buy hardware, groceries, etc. How do you get them now, and how will you get them when the stores are all closed. I fail to see any argument in that line. Now I will point out a few facts that may be new to you. You acknowledge that you go to work at 8 o'clock. According to your own statement you work forty-eight hours per week. Now the average workingman works at least fifty-three hours per week. So you are ahead of them by five hours, and you still want four hours more, which will put you are whole day ahead. Now would you be willing to take a half-day off at any time during the week and change about? For instance, if there are six clerks in the store where you are employed, each one takes a half-day off for the six days; then on Saturday allow your employer to keep his store open until 8 o'clock p. m. In that way you would get your half-holiday and at the same time give the workingman an opportunity to do all the shopping that is necessary. At that rate you would gain two hours besides your half-day off.

In reply to Mr. Brown I would say that it also causes me to smile to have a man sit in an office down town dressed in good clothes and a standing collar, dealing out doses of advice to workingmen. Now, Mr. Brown, we will assume that you are a workingman and a bachelor at that. Now you must go down to the store some day at noon-time. You quit at twelve, wash up, change your clothes, eat your lunch and proceed to the store to get what you want, and I will wager you that the whistles would be blowing before you got out of that store, or if you don't want to take time to wash up and change your clothes, go just as you are, with black face and hands and your clothes all grease, maybe, what kind of a reception would you get? Would Mr. or Miss Clerk come forward and greet you with a smile? I guess not, and they would breathe a sigh of relief when they saw you vanish out the doorway. You say some women are more judicious buyers than men. Granted that they are, what would you do in case you were a bachelor. Who would do your shopping? On the other hand your being at the head of a family, would you prefer to have your wife pick out your different articles of wearing apparel, or if you were a mechanic, would you send her to buy tools for you? In regard to the plantation people, I would respectfully inform you that there is a train leaving Ewa mill at 6:30 every Saturday night and returning leaves Honolulu at 11:30, and there are a good many people who make use of that train, too. Not only that but a good many people come in on what is known as the 1:40 train and do their shopping and return on the 5 o'clock train, or wait until the 11:30 train. In regard to closing through a certain season, they might as well be closed all the time. I would also say that there are a good many people buying their goods direct from San Francisco and Chicago, too. Now, Mr. Brown, be consistent. Remember that the light of Christianity should shine throughout the whole world and not in spots.

WORKINGMAN.

SANDOW ROUTS THE ROBBERS.

A good story is told of how Sandow's strength stood him in good stead among the bullies who have lately been infesting the Bois de Boulogne, in Paris. Their method of action is to have one of the gang follow the proposed victim. At a given signal several others approach and close in on him, rob him, sometimes seriously injuring him. An additional 300 police now ride about the Bois on bicycles and keep a sharp lookout. But, despite this extra vigilance, the outrages continue. One day Sandow, walking in a rather remote avenue of the Bois, suddenly realized that he was being followed. He grasped the situation and apparently took no notice. As he had expected, a signal called two or three fellows from the shrubbery. As they first approached Sandow stooped down as if to tie his bootlace, grasped the robber by the ankle, and used him as a sort of cat-o-nine-tails, lashing his astonished confederates, first one and then the other, before they had a chance even to think of escaping, staying in the ribs of one, smashing the arm of another, and leaving the whole gang maimed and strewn on the ground. Then Sandow leisurely went on and remarked to the next policeman he met: "You'll find two or three men up there, more dead than alive. You'd better go and have a look at them."
