KAUMAKAPILI CHURCH SITE WILL BE TRANSFERRED TO A NEW PALAMA BLOCK

KAUMAKAPILI CHURCH will not be rebuilt upon the site which for more than sixty years was that of the home of the second missionary parish of Honolulu. Instead, as soon as there is some decision reached in the matter of the claims which have been made before the Fire Claims Commission for the loss of the church there will be erected upon the block at the Waikiki side of the junction of the Asylum road and King street, opposite the Reform School, a new structure. The new site has been secured by an exchange with the Bishop Estate. The old site of the church will be opened as the extension of Smith street, which will then continue on to Kukui street, thus opening up for building purposes a large number of building lots which would be otherwise idle as rent producers. The street will be continued on the lines followed so far, the width being fifty feet. The intention of the Bishop Estate is to improve these lots in the same manner as the surrounding property has been built up. There will be something like two blocks of property opened, the estate dedicating the land to the Territory.

By the exchange of its old lands, which contained something like 24,000 square feet, fronting upon Beretania street, the church receives three times the amount in area, close to 72,000 feet. This land lies in two bodies. One piece takes up the entire block bounded by King, Kukui extension, Asylum road, and a new street which cuts up the seventeen acres which the estate has just subdivided at this point. This piece has 220 feet front upon King street, and the same upon the new street running at right angles, the Asylum road side being the longer, owing to the irregular shape of the tract. There are about 51,000 square feet in this piece of land. Immediately mauka of this tract mentioned is the second piece with something like 21,000 feet in it. This piece has the entire block frontage on Kukui street.

The intention of the trustees of the church is to build upon the main site a new church, and to erect upon the rear lot a parsonage and perhaps other cottages, which will be a source of revenue to the church. There is now a claim before the Fire Commissioners for a sum above $50,000 for the loss of the church and its fittings, and the belief of the trustees is that there will be no delay in the settlement of this claim, owing to its peculiar features. The trustees have called to the notice of the court that at the time of the fire the church was practically out of the control of their representatives, as it was used as a storehouse for goods which were to be fumigated. This fact is pressed to show that the loss should fall upon the Territory, as the edifice was being put to a use other than that for which it was built, and that the Board of Health had it under its entire charge. The speedy reimbursement of the church is expected, so that the building of the church may go forward.

The wiping out of the Kaumakapili site for a church will destroy one of the old landmarks. The Kaumakapili church was organized in 1837 by the Rev. Lowell Smith, who came to the islands in May, 1833, and spent the first year of his service at Kalaupapa. He then went to Ewa, and after two years of hard work there, came to this city as superintendent of Kawaiahaeo Schools. It was while at this duty that he organized the second parish. The church site was chosen in the midst of a large body of native population, taking its name from the local title of the lands. The construction of the first church was begun very soon after the organization of the congregation. The building was an adobe, surrounded by wide porches on all sides, so that the driving rains might not destroy the walls and render it impossible to keep the building standing. The first roof of the church was a thatch, this being replaced later with a roof of shingles. The floor space of the church was very large, it being possible for a thousand people to find seats within the walls. This church was finished and dedicated about 1838, the ceremonies being remarkable for that day. For thirty years, or until his retirement from active work, the Rev. Lowell Smith was the pastor, and saw the work prosper until the congregation was one of the largest that worshipped in the islands. It was not long before the close of his pastorate that it was decided that a new brick edifice should take the place of the old adobe. The old structure was torn down, and the new one begun, the congregation using the basement for assembly for some time before the building was finally completed. The late King Kalakaua was one of the earnest attendants and workers at that time, and to him was due much of the success of the building. He, during the discussions about the building, once made a speech setting forth that as man had two hands and two feet, two eyes and two ears, so the new church should have two towers. His suggestion carried, and as it stood upon an elevation, the church was remarkable as one of the first landmarks for the visitor. The church was finally dedicated for public worship in 1888, in the presence of one of the largest church assemblies that ever had been met in the islands, the late Dr. Smith making on that occasion the historical address, celebrating the dedication of a structure seemingly indestructible, upon the site where he first built an adobe church. There was installed in the church that year the finest organ in the islands, built in London by Bevington & Sons, from specifications made by Wray Taylor. This church was for years the special scene of the best concerts and recitals, and many singers renowned in the islands, made their local debut there.

In the Waikiki tower was a chime of eight bells, which were brought from Troy, New York, by E. O. Hall & Son, but which never proved to be in perfect tune. Everything in the church was in perfect form, the seats being folding opera chairs, and the fittings in the rarest native woods. The property has been in charge of the Hawaiian Board, and the negotiations for its transfer have been conducted on the side of the church by Rev. O. P. Emerson, Mr. W. W. Hall and Mr. Theodore Richards. The pastor of the church at the present time is the Rev. Mr. Lono, an Hawaiian, who for many years has been a missionary in the Gilbert Islands.

BABY'S BUSINESS

A healthy baby is comfortable; and that is enough for a baby. His business in life is to grow.

Aside from acute diseases, his food is the cause of most of his troubles. But Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil delivers him from it.

He isn't sick; only a little hitch, somewhere, in his machine for turning food into growth.

It is a great thing to do, for a baby, to help him over a hitch with mere food—the emulsion is food that has the tact to get there.

The tact to get there is medicine.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like. SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street, New York.
