LUAU WAS A SUCCESS

Gross Receipts in Neighborhood of $3000.

GORGEOUS AFFAIR AT THE DRILL SHED

Luau and Lunch Were Enjoyed by Hundreds—Booths and Fair Saleswomen.

That the Catholic Convent fair and luau on Saturday at the Drill Shed was a financial success is amply confirmed by the sum of money which Mrs. Bowler, the treasurer, had received in cash up to last evening, $3,000 in all. The great undertaking which has occupied the undivided attention of ladies, not only of the Catholic church, but a large number of those attending other churches but who received their education under the supervision of the Sisters of the Convent, was a huge success in every way. From noon until midnight the outer lanal of palm branches and the interior of the Drill Shed were crowded with visitors and the booths took in money for the wares on sale almost as fast as change could be made. The throngs who attended the fair were not disappointed in any of its features and the hundreds who partook of the foreign lunch and the luau were surprised at the variety and quantity of edibles placed before them. Selam during the afternoon and evening was there a lapse in the gaiety of the occasion and the jingle of money could be heard on all sides. The large sum of money realized was only what the promoters of the bazaar expected. The preparations were made on a large scale and certainly all who attended had their money's worth.

Behind the booths in the Drill Shed was an array of pretty women who had the knack of attracting visitors to the displays of fancy work, art pieces, candies, Hawaiian curios and handiwork, Japanese and Chinese brie-a-brac, and the "real live dolls," represented by little tots, were a source of revenue which far exceeded all expectations. There were eight little ones, attired in the daintiest of gowns, and to see them one had to pay the nominal sum of ten cents and put in a vote for the prettiest. This booth alone realized the sum of $100, while the Hawaiian booth presided over by Princess Kalaniana'ole, turned in about $350.

The fair was a scene of gaiety by day and one of splendor at night under the glare of scores of lights which revealed the kaleidoscopic arrangements of colors at their best.

At 12 o'clock the crowds grouped about the lanal entrance were admitted and a rush was made for the seats at the Hawaiian luau and foreign lunch tables in the lanal. The Hawaiian band, which occupied a portion of the large tent leased by Mr. Glimra, set just outside the lanal, played as the visitors sat down to the feast and continued doing so until evening. At the first luau table Prince and Princess Kalaniana'ole and Father Valentin, the latter representing the Bishop of Panoia, were seated, and opposite them, at the first foreign table were Mons. Viazavona, the French Consul, Hon. W. O. Smith and a large and merry party of haoles. The tables on the Hawaiian side were loaded with the appetizing edibles so well known to a luau. Every table was covered with ti leaves and upon these the dishes of succulent pig, fish, relishes and calabashes of poi were placed. The foreign lunch consisted mainly of chicken pot-pie, turkey, potato salad and coffee. For nearly two hours the tables were occupied and it is estimated that at least 1,000 people were served at them.

To the right of the entrance within the drillshed was a stand, where Mrs. Chas. Crane sold cigars and cigarettes, and for her neighbor she had a nolsy but persuasive spiel in Guy Livingstone, who told of the wonders of the Punch, and the younger element was most demonstrative over the puppets handled by Mr. Knight. Mrs. McVeigh and Miss Herrick, at the grab box, took in $84. The lemonade stand, where cooling glasses of poi were dispensed by the Misses of the liquid, was very popular, especially amongst the masculine visitors.

The Hawaiian booth was the largest in the armory, and was filled with the handiwork of the Hawaiians. It was handsomely decorated, and a throng was constantly at the booth for assistants in the booth Mrs. W. M. Giffard, Miss Pierre Jones, Mrs. E. M. Robinson, Miss Lucy Oki, Miss Pinao Brickwood, Miss Mary Barber and Miss Nalani Jones. Many Oriental pieces of handiwork and art were on sale at the Chinese booth, presided over by Mrs. Wong Leong, assisted by Misses Cecelia and Mary Chuck Nong. The raffling and selling of lanal and parlor pillows was delegated to Mrs. Larnach, Mrs. Sinclair, Miss Lizzie Gurney and Miss Perry, who occupied a pretty booth next to the stage.

Upon the stage was a pretty booth, decked in yellow, wherein were displayed bits of fancy work which were sold by Mrs. Sullivan and Mrs. Jack Lucas. One was supplying more than half the stage was the "live doll exhibit," in charge of Mrs. J. S. Walker and Mrs. Mary Gunn, one of the prettiest features of the bazaar. To little Elsie Wilkinson is due the credit of a pretty exhibition of dancing, sustaining a difficult role and otherwise making the booth an attractive and popular one. Miss Bertha Lanz, who had the honor of carrying off the most votes, wore a wattleau gown; Miss Eva Focke and Miss Helen Wilder made pretty pictures in their dainty empire styles; another pretty doll was Miss Madeline Burnette in her quaint Bo-Peep costume, a graceful little dancer. Lillian McChesney and Dorothy Ashley, as two French dolls, one in pink and the other in white, attracted much attention and did their share in the gathering in of dimes. Little Miss Lanz's good fortune in polling the most votes was due to the interest which her large circle of friends took in her success.

In a cosy corner below the live doll exhibit was a booth which was a popular attraction for the gentlemen who cared for flowers and leis. Pretty favors of boutonniere and innumerable strings of Hima leis were sold by Miss M. Damon, Miss Giffard and Miss Mary Widdifield, who were as attractive as their pretty blossoms.

Japanese decorative objects were displayed and sold by Mrs. Imanishi and Mrs. Podmore, and nearly $200 was taken in by the ladies. Their booth was attractively decorated, the Japanese colors predominating.

Mrs. Charles B. Cooper and Mrs. Mary Mott-Smith Bird were in charge of the art booth, and added not a little to the receipts, as their table was rendered barren before evening came.

The evening was devoted to a promenade concert, at which the Amateur Orchestra played under the leadership of Wray Taylor. An additional admission fee was charged for this feature. Mrs. N. Ahpai and Miss I. Keilua of the government band sang several selections during the evening.

An auction sale was conducted toward the close of the fair by Col. Will E. Fisher, who sold at random sofa pillows, fancy work, Oriental art pieces and Hawaiian curios.

The executive committee is congratulating itself upon the general success which attended the fair, and to them is largely due the praise. The committee is: Mrs. S. C. Allen, president; Mrs. C. Macfarlane, vice president; Mrs. J. F. Bowler, treasurer; Mrs. A. E. Murphy, secretary. Mrs. Murphy stood guard at the door and took in tickets and cash. The complete list of persons assisting at the fair is as follows:
