The Eye Glass Brigade.

In this brigade are the big brainy bodied, men and women who THINK, who reason, who act and act wisely. "I don't want to wear glasses," is the whine of the puny in intellect, if not in physique. More nerve-force—the real elixir of life—is wasted through defective eyes than any other one source—a constant insidious drain which nothing but glasses can or will stop.

COUCH OF A PRINCESS

Elaborate Carving on a Kauila Bed.

NATIVE FRUITS AND FLOWERS

Crowns, Taro, Bananas and Pine-apples, With Leis and Ferns Are in Evidence.

WHEN carver and polisher have finished with the bedstead which is being made for Princess Kawansakoa, the bride of the young son-in-law of Col. Sam Parker will repose in a couch which may lay claim to being the most elaborate thing of the kind here. The woods employed are kauila and kou and the carvings are representative of all the various characteristic fruits of the islands.

The wood from which the tall posts of the bed are made was secured from an old building and are thoroughly cured, in many places being so well done that they have cracked and split from age. The posts measure eight feet in height and from the base to the top, which represents the crown of Hawaii, they will be, when complete, a mass of carving. This is indeed a task as the hardness of the wood makes it almost impossible to do fast work. In many instances the wood is so hard that the fine edges of the tools which have to be employed have been turned by the knots.

The head of the bed is in itself a piece of art, though there will be little carving there. The kou wood which is used in the head board is pierced for nine panels, all of which are of kauila, polished to the highest degree. Surmounting this board, which will be placed between the high posts will be a great crown, supported on either side by sheaves of fern leaves.

The four posts will be the works of real art. The crown will surmount each of them and there will be employed in the decorations various fruits and flowers of the islands. The smaller relief circles all the way down the posts, which will divide the highly ornate sections, will be done in shells interspersed with leaves. The capitals upon which will rest the crowns are in shells and immediately beneath there is a section which will be done in various flowers and foliage. Immediately beneath these sections there is a twining of leis and leaves. This section is in high relief, the wood which will be carved having been glued in sections upon the main shaft of the post. The lei will be carried all around the post twice, and will be in representation of the ilima and lauhala, the male being represented in the broader expanse, which also twines about the shaft.

Beneath a circle of small flowers there will appear a representation of bananas, ten on each post encircling it. Below and reaching down to the section which receives the rails of the bed, are two sections which are given over to the taro and its leaves. Upon the faces of the square rail section there are represented crossed spears and beneath on the lower sections will be carved pineapples and leaves.

The foot of the bed will be completed by a grill work with spindles between two round poles, which will connect the foot posts. The woods are to be polished to the very brightest and the rails themselves are of oak with a veneering of kou, which will be relieved by a beading, above and below. Altogether there will be the very highest workmanship in the woodwork. The carving is being done by Oremba, and the plain woodwork by Lucas.

A HOT TIME FOR HUMELTENBERG

The Man Who Married Hattie Voeller Wanted for Bigamy.

(Special to the Advertiser.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 15.—There is a hot time awaiting a present resident of Honolulu when he comes here. William P. Humeltenberg is accused of bigamy by his wife, who lives in San Francisco. She says that in October, 1901, he married Miss Hattie Voeller, of Honolulu, and that he had never gotten a divorce from her, whom he married ten years ago. The matter is now in the hands of attorneys, and the police authorities may take it up. The Chronicle, which publishes the story exclusively this morning, says:

It was through an advertisement of a local fortune teller that Mrs. Grace Humeltenberg, who, with her two children, lives at 418 Golden Gate avenue, learned that her husband had married another woman in Honolulu without the formality of obtaining a divorce from his wife in this city, with whom he continued to correspond after having married the second one in Honolulu. William P. Humeltenberg, who is accused of having deserted his wife and two children and married another woman in Honolulu, is a native of San Francisco, where he is very well known. His father, Melndrad Humeltenberg, is the superintendent of the Golden State and Miners' Iron Works and reputed to be wealthy. Will Humeltenberg, as he is generally known, was employed as machinist and engineer, at times in the laundry of which his father is superintendent and at other foundries, and was also for a time salesman for Miller, Sloss & Scott, and for the George W. Gibbs Company. About ten years ago he married Grace Cummings, a very handsome and well educated woman. Two children were born to them—Harold, nine years of age, and Dorothy, who is about eight.

In last April the husband and father advised her that the Islands offered a better field for him. He found work readily, and wrote to his wife quite often and very affectionately, though, in response to her urgent pleas, he only sent her $30 for her support and that of their children during the entire time of his absence. He referred to the hardship of being separated from wife and children, and in one letter he intimated that he would have the family join him at the Islands. Since then the wife has received no positive proof that her husband has married a Miss Hattie Voeller at Honolulu.

Miss Hattie Voeller, a young woman of Honolulu, while visiting in San Francisco in the spring of 1901, patronized one of the local fortune tellers, who predicted that her visitor would marry in October. Miss Voeller returned to her Island home, met Humeltenberg, who posed as a bachelor, and he made love to the young woman. Miss Voeller remembered the prediction of the fortune teller, and she decided to give the fortune teller the seal had discerned in the dim future, accepted him, and on October 1st the couple were married. The young wife was so delighted over the event, and evident of having faith in the predictions of the fortune teller, wrote to the latter informing her of the happy marriage, and inclosed in her letter the announcement of the marriage, cut from one of the Honolulu papers. The fortune teller made extensive use of the information, and advertised the whole affair liberally, reproducing the letter and notice of marriage in the daily papers of San Francisco. That attracted the attention of Mrs. Humeltenberg, who at first regarded the whole affair as a joke. At last she was persuaded to call on the fortune teller and inquire whether the letter and announcement from Honolulu were genuine or merely myths gotten up for advertising purposes. She was shown the letter signed by the new Mrs. Humeltenberg, formerly Miss Voeller.

She then consulted Attorney Joseph Rothschild, who made a thorough investigation and obtained all the facts as to Humeltenberg's marriage. He then advised her to sue for a divorce from his San Francisco wife. Among the papers he received is a duplicate of the marriage license issued to Humeltenberg, the names of the officiating minister, Rev. W. M. Kincaid, to the Registrar, and a letter from Florence B. Yarrow, assistant of the Central Union Church at Honolulu, in which she says that Rev. Kincaid performed the marriage ceremony of W. P. Humeltenberg and Miss Hattie Voeller at his home on October 1, 1901, and that Miss Voeller is a member of the Christian Endeavor Society.

In the last letter which Mrs. Humeltenberg received from her husband, dated December 19, 1901, he wishes his wife and children a merry Christmas, and expresses the hope to be reunited with his family very soon, and then continues as follows: "I have charge of the machine shop at the mill. The manager told me that if I was married I could bring my family to the plantation and have a cottage and a cook furnished free."
