LABOR DAY CELEBRATION

May Be a Tame Affair This Year.

EXODUS OF THE SKILLED WORKERS

Most Local Unions Are Mere Skeletons of Last Year's Organizations.

Labor Day which falls on Monday next will probably be a very tame day with the labor unions, or what is left of them. Thus far there seem to have been no definite plans made by the local unions for a celebration of Labor's one great day in the year, and even the balloon ascension man cannot find any one who can authoritatively say that it will be worth his while to get his airship in readiness for a skyward flight.

A year ago the various unions of plumbers, carpenters, painters, electrical workers, boiler-makers and masons were firmly organized, and turned out for parade in large numbers and had speeches galore, followed by a grand ball in the evening. Since last year's Labor Day there has been an exodus of the white members of the organizations and there is little more than a nucleus left this year. Work began to slack up toward the end of last year, and every steamer for the coast which could take passengers carried numbers of skilled workers away to other places where work was more plentiful. The Journeyman Plumbers' union was the first to feel the result of the exodus, then the carpenters, and finally the masons' organization. The painters' union is not materially weakened, as a large number of the brush-wielders are Hawaiians. The result has been that only a few of the mainland workers, who came here when Hawaii became a Territory and participated in the first great Labor Day celebration in September, 1900, have remained in the islands, leaving most of the field to Asiatics.

The plumbers have no regular headquarters and the hall that was formerly maintained by them, together with other trade organizations, in the basement of Murphy hall, is little used nowadays.

It was ascertained yesterday that although some effort had been made to get the various organizations together for a celebration on Labor Day, nothing had so far been accomplished. No one has been chosen to make the Labor Day address, and it is likely that beyond being a general holiday in Honolulu there will be little or no observance of the event.

WAS IN SIEGE OF KIMBERLY

Wealthy Lady on Australian Liner Tells Something About Rhodes.

Mrs. Grewer, an elderly lady, reputed to be worth millions, passed through Honolulu yesterday on the Aorangi. Mrs. Grewer lives in Kimberly, South Africa, and during the siege of that place by the Boers, was boxed up there. She had an interesting time of it, and says that her most pleasant recollection of the siege was the part that the late Cecil Rhodes played in affairs during its progress.

Rhodes, according to Mrs. Grewer, was the life of the town, not because of his joviality, but because of his grumbling. She gives a graphic description of the famous siege, but this contains nothing strikingly new aside from her stories of Rhodes. She says that the African empire maker's health commenced to get poor during the siege and that the fact that he went through that siege took off at least ten years of his life.

At the first report of war Rhodes was happy, but as soon as the diamond city was surrounded by Boer commandos Rhodes became uneasy. He thought that the Boers had things fixed in such a way that all his plans for a great future for South Africa had been spoiled. His work of years he considered to be in a fair way on the road to ruin. Then he started to drink himself to death.

The great man became stern and selfish. He supplied to the besieged anything that he could from the stores of the Kimberly mines, but at the same time declared that he would make the British government pay for every item.

Mrs. Grewer is reputed to have made a large amount of money through operations on the diamond fields. She is now well advanced in age but declares that she will return to South Africa again.

A COLD AT THIS SEASON is most annoying, and should not be neglected. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will relieve the lungs, make expectoration easy, effect a quick cure and leave the system in a healthy condition. It always cures and cures quickly. Benson, Smith & Co., Ltd., wholesale agents, sell it.
