

NOT MOVING TO STOP TRANSPORTS

Anti Saloon League Denies That Petitions Have Gone to Washington.

Whatever the rumors, the president of the Anti-Saloon league is not cognizant of any kind of an attempt to affect the transport service, either on the part of the League proper or any member of it.

The Rev. W. D. Westervelt heard of the rumor that the League had sent to Washington a petition that the transports be not longer stopped here because of the drunkenness which marks some of the soldiers. He said in respect to the report:

"The anti-saloon league has had nothing whatever to do with a petition of any kind to Washington, opposing the present transport system. As far as I am able to learn not a single member of the League has opposed the system of transports, or endorsed a petition of that character.

"When transports are in port, as individual workers the members of the Anti-Saloon League have taken advantage of the fact to work among the soldiers and meetings have been held aboard the ships for the benefit of the men. I have distributed between three and four thousand copies of monthly magazines. I have found a number of excellent young men in the ranks and the entire list of men on board the ships must not be judged by the few who drink to excess."

Patents Relating to Sugar.

The current issue of the Patent Office Gazette illustrates a veritable engine for cutting sugar-cane albeit a small and portable affair, carried and manually operated against individual stalks by the laborer. The conception is a reciprocating blade, carried at the end of a piston rod, and operating against or in conjunction with a hook which is placed behind the stalk to be severed. The driving mechanism, a miniature double-acting engine operated by compressed air, is contained within the handle of the tool, and is most ingeniously constructed as regards its valves, inlet and exhaust and moving parts, to secure the utmost lightness and compactness of construction. The implement is connected by a rubber tube to a source of compressed air, presumably not carried by the laborer; and air is admitted to the cylinder by a valve opened by depressing a spring lever which in operation lies beneath the palm of the operator. A cylindrical rotatable valve governs both inlet and exhaust, and at the end of the stroke is moved again to the admission position by the impingement of the exhaust upon its curved partition walls, thus permitting an automatic and very rapid reciprocation of the blade. All question of cost and practicability aside, the ingenuity of the construction cannot fail to excite admiration. The patentee is John H. N. Wilson, of Honolulu.—Louisiana Planter.
