TWO WEEKS OF PLEASURE

A Woman's Trip to the Volcano House.

A Fortnight's Outing Among Striking Scenes.

The Return Home via Kealakekua Bay, Cook's Monument and the Kona Drive.

Editor Advertiser: Perhaps some of your readers, especially teachers, who must necessarily have a very limited amount of time to spend on an outing of any kind may be interested in knowing how to get the maximum amount of enjoyment at the minimum cost of time and money. A party of sixteen teachers, tired in mind and body with the arduous work of the year in the school room, left Honolulu bound for a two weeks' journey to Hawaii and the Volcano House. The party was conducted by Mr. Antonio Marcellino who personally superintended every detail of the trip, so none of the party were subjected to any of the petty annoyances, such as looking after baggage, securing lodging and conveyances, which go to make up all the disagreeable incidents of travel. It is needless to say anything of the voyage until Lahaina was reached. Most of the passengers preferred the seclusion of their state rooms to a solitary promenade on deck.

At Lahaina the party was joined by the Kamehameha glee and base ball clubs, bound for Hilo. From Lahaina to Hilo they furnished most delightful music. At Kawaihae some of the party went ashore to visit and photograph the ruins of an old heiau built by Kamehameha I. and said to have been the last ever erected on the islands.

At Mahukona a stop of two hours was made to land and take on freight. Through the courtesy of Purser Beckley of the Kinau many of the party again went ashore. There they sent wireless messages to friends in Honolulu. I shall not attempt to describe the beautiful scenery, the many waterfalls, and the dearest little villages nestling so quietly at the foot of the tall cliff with Maunaloa and Maunakea standing grim and silent keeping watch and ward over all. Many things have been written and many pictures painted regarding the picturesque beauty of the Hawaiian coast, but I can say that no pen can describe, no brush can paint the enchantment of the scene: one must see it to appreciate it.

At five-thirty we landed at Hilo. There we were met by conveyances previously arranged for and conveyed to the Peacock where a most enjoyable evening and night was spent.

At seven-thirty the next morning the party took the Hilo Railway for Mountain View. The ride of seventeen miles lay for the greater part through the Oiaa Sugar plantation, one of the best in the world so we were told by the polite and gentlemanly conductor on the train. I was very much surprised at the comfortable homes provided for the laborers. I thought them far superior to the cottages of the colored laborer on Southern Plantations.

A ride of one and one-half hours brought us to Mountain View, though why it should be so called, not one of the party was able to determine, as neither mountains, nor any remarkable views were to be seen. Here the party was met by carriages and started on a fourteen mile drive for the Volcano House. The road over which we came was bordered on each side with the most magnificent tree ferns, and Ohia lehua trees in full blossom and over all climbed a most beautiful wild rose resembling the Pink Rambler. Talk of the roses of California! beautiful as they are. Even those grown in conservatories with the most lavish expenditure of time and money, can not begin to compare with those growing wild by the wayside in Hawaii. One species resembled the Bon Silence, another The Marchal Niel, still a third resembled the La France, only they grew much larger than any I had ever seen.

We reached the Volcano House at eleven-thirty. Here we were met and warmly welcomed by the proprietor, Mr. Bidgood, and his estimable wife who gave us the freedom of the house and all it contained. It is not necessary to state that advantage was taken of this liberal offer. For ten days the party walked, rode, drove, sang, danced, played games from early morn until late at night. The air here is so pure and bracing that a five mile walk before breakfast soon became the accustomed stroll from which the walker returned glowing and ravenously hungry. Soon that tired, jaded feeling of which every one complained when leaving Honolulu was gone. And what with climbing down Kilauea-iki, walking to Kilauea itself, riding to the Tree Ferns and Tree Moulds, picnicking at the Six Craters, dancing until late at night, having private concerts, playing the rubber, and enjoying the elegantly prepared and served meals three times a day, the time sped all too rapidly away. I must not forget to mention the Turkish baths so kindly prepared by Madame Pele nor the invigorating breezes from the summits of Mauna Loa.

One bright morning, the fifth, the party started on a thirty-five mile drive to Honoauo. If any wishes to see how the world was made they should take that drive. For about twenty miles Nature is busy forming the earth out of rock and lava. The party made the drive with only two stops. One for water at the Half-way House. The other at Pahala for lunch.

Honoauo was reached about two in the afternoon and we went on board the W. G. Hall homeward bound. The next morning at Kealakekua Bay the party, through the kindness of the captain and the purser, were enabled to visit the monument erected to Capt. Cook near the place where he was killed.

After spending about two hours in this historic spot, the party went on board the boat for breakfast. At Napoopoo cattle were being loaded, and it was a very interesting sight to witness the skillful way in which they were so deftly and quickly placed on the boat. After breakfast the party again went ashore at Napoopoo where they were met by carriages provided by Mr. Marcellino for a twenty-four mile drive through the coffee belt of North Kona to Kailua. This was one of the loveliest, if not the loveliest drive it was our good fortune to take. Never, not even in the renowned Mississippi valley, have I ever seen such fertility. I thought what a paradise that would be if there could only have been about five hundred German farmers scattered along the route. As we went through the Portuguese settlement the citizens came out laden with large baskets of fruit such as grapes, peaches, figs, mangoes, pineapples and papayas which they generously presented to the party. I hope I may be pardoned if I say here that I think with a number of small farmers upon it, Hawaii could furnish all the fruits and vegetables not only for these islands but for foreign consumption also. Coffee seems to have at one time been the staple product of that district but it appears now as if sugar were taking its place as so many of coffee fields were over-run with lantana, but wherever it could find a foothold sisal flourished like the proverbial green bay tree.

I trust no one, who has the opportunity to take that ride, will ever miss it. A ride through that district will do more to convince people that Hawaii is a good place to invest capital, than all the circulars, which could ever be printed.

At eleven a. m. we reached Kailua where we met the W. G. Hall, went on board and started for Honolulu which was reached about five a. m. on the morning of July 7.

Happy, unburned and enthusiastic the party were loud in their praises of the fourteen days' trip, the Volcano House, the rides, and drives and especially of Mr. Marcellino, to whose untiring energy and thoughtfulness so much of the pleasure of the trip was due.

Nothing but the most uniform kindness and unflinching generosity were met with from the beginning to end. And the unanimous verdict of all was a wish to repeat the same trip.

SHORT CHAT WITH KUNKEL

Our Interview With the Actor and His View of Us.

We went, with fear and trembling, to the "Kunkel Manor" last night to seek material for a story about stage life. As we approached the marble hall-way, which rises forbiddingly from a gorgeously tessellated floor, we felt a singular depression in the region of the thorax, and with strange forebodings we pressed the button. The door swung open and we were informed that the great man was on the seventh floor in his "den." We ascended the flights and thought of the long fall to the street below.

We knocked modestly upon the panel of the door behind which we were informed the great man was.

"Come in," melodiously fell upon our strained ears.

We entered and there, seated upon a plush dais, surrounded by rare Oriental silks and enveloped in a cloud of fragrant tobacco smoke, posed the object of our mission.

"Mr. Kunkel?" we asked sweetly.

"The same," was the rejoinder, "Sit down!"

We sat, or rather trembled, into a chair which happened to be behind us.

"Mr. Kunkel, —" we essayed, but we got no farther.

"Haven't changed a bit since you asked me a moment ago!" he informed us.

"Mr. Kunkel, —" we then exclaimed in desperation.

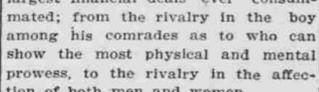

"Oh, have a smoke," he interrupted. "You'll feel better in a few minutes."

We took the proffered "two-for" as we didn't like to hurt any one's feelings by refusing a real live "OWL." As we are not accustomed to smoking cigars of some brands we began to cough. That settled it for us.

The fall to the ground was quickly accomplished, and though we did not calculate the time then, we feel at present that we made it in record time. Our "Ansonia" is ruined and we shall present a bill to the cause of our downfall when we meet it on level ground; or we may take it into our head to denounce Mr. Kunkel, publicly, during the performance of "In Sheep's Clothing" at the Orpheum next Saturday night.

GANO ANTRIM.

The Commercial and Official Record has come to stay. It is filling a long felt want.

A GREEN-EYED MONSTER,

Called jealousy, has always been the bane of the human family, from the smallest items of business to the largest financial deals ever consummated; from the rivalry in the boy among his comrades as to who can show the most physical and mental prowess, to the rivalry in the affection of both men and women.

It is indeed a happy condition to be able to put jealousy aside, and show rivalry but not jealousy.

This is one reason for the phenomenal success of the Phoenix Savings, Building & Loan Association. It attends to its own business and leaves other people's alone, unless it has to defend itself, and it has never made business matters of personal affairs.

Strange as it may seem, the extreme, rabid jealousy of some people will eat them up earlier or later; this has been true of the world since started and will be true as long as it lives.
