WILL WITHOUT WAY.

Editor Advertiser: In your paper, January 13, I notice the following:

"SITUATION WANTED — By a young man who is willing to do anything and not afraid to work. Address L. P. at 1085 Alakea st."

"Willing to do anything and not afraid of work" has the honest American tone that catches the ear of every good citizen, but I dare say the sugar interests did not answer the advertisement, saying: "Come on, we want you," or words to that effect. I will remember having placed such an advertisement in a Honolulu paper some years ago, and having tramped that town from door to door looking and asking for any kind of employment in vain.

In ten years I have only once seen an advertisement by a planter asking for a white man to work on a plantation, and I watch these things pretty closely, because "straws indicate which way the wind blows."

I am sure the planter and the sugar interests generally could not see the above ad., if it occupied an entire page of your paper, printed with the largest kind of type manufactured. These interests can not see that "the system is on trial for its life." There will be some sadder, but wiser, people in Hawaii as time rolls along.

T. J. RYAN, Mountain View, Hawaii, Feb. 4, 1905.

NEGLECT ALWAYS DANGEROUS.

To the average man it seems childish to doctor a cold, and unless it becomes particularly annoying to him, little or no attention is given it. Often a cold contracted in the winter is allowed to run until the opening of spring. This is a grave mistake, as even though the warm weather may bring relief, the system is thereby weakened and rendered susceptible to disease. A cold should never be neglected, whether it be a child or an adult who is afflicted, as health and often life is risked. A bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, costing but a small amount will bring speedy relief and by its use all dangerous consequences will be avoided. For sale by all dealers, Benson, Smith & Co., Ltd., Agents for Hawaii.

THE JOB DOES NOT EXIST.

An Ohio man wrote to Elmer Dover, secretary of the Republican national committee, claiming to have done great work for Roosevelt in the campaign, and asking for a job. He said he would like to be "chief cuspidorian" of the treasury department. Mr. Dover wrote in reply: "I regret to inform you that there is no such position as chief cuspidorian of the treasury department, although I think there might very well be. Unfortunately, however, while you have coined a word I can not coin the job."

SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATES FOR THE TWO CADETSHIPS

Supt. Atkinson Cables Names to Delegate Kuhio. Tucker Wins Choice and Takes Army. High School Leads.

West Point—William Kirkby Tucker, first; Albert B. Lyman and Alsoberry Kaumu Hanchett, alternates. Annapolis—Samuel Wilder King, first; Fred Ohrt and Stanley Ashford, alternates.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Alatau Atkinson yesterday morning cabled to Delegate Kuhio at Washington the results of the examinations for candidates for the West Point Military Academy and the Annapolis Naval Academy.

To young Tucker go the honors for having passed first in the examinations for both West Point and Annapolis. As the young man had previously expressed a preference to go to West Point and become a soldier rather than a sailor, Superintendent Atkinson sent for him yesterday and asked him to select which place he desired to go. The young fellow promptly said, "West Point!"

Samuel Wilder King got second place in both examinations for West Point and Annapolis and therefore, on Tucker's decision to go to West Point, he was given first place for Annapolis. There was a difference of only four marks between Tucker and King for Annapolis, the figures standing 619 and 615.

Following is the order in which the several candidates passed their examinations:

West Point—Tucker (1), King (2), Lyman (3), Hanchett (4), Ohrt (5).

Annapolis—Tucker (1), King (2), Ohrt (3), Ashford (4), Desha (5), McDougall (6), Judd (7).

The High School comes out victorious in that the successful candidates for first place for both West Point and Annapolis come from the Honolulu High School. The successful candidates and the schools they have been attending are as follows:

West Point—William Kirkby Tucker, High School, 17 years of age; Albert Lyman, Oahu College; Alsoberry Hanchett, Oahu College.

Annapolis—Samuel Wilder King, High School, 18 years; Fred Ohrt, St. Louis College, 17 years; Stanley Ashford, Oahu College, 16 years.

"I don't believe a harder examination was ever given in Honolulu than the present ones," said Mr. Atkinson last night. "The percentages are extremely creditable to the young men of the Territory who have been studying for them."

An answer is expected from Delegate Kuhio today or tomorrow, wherein his selection of candidates for both national institutions will be expressed.

THE GIANT STINGRAY LIVES BUT A DAY

It Cannot Stand the Company of a Big Shark That is too Foolish to Eat.

"I think that shark look more better now. Maybe he live one more month." A small brown boy stood on one bare brown foot at the door of the aquarium, slowly rubbing his other foot up and down the calf of his bare, brown leg, and looked up wistfully into the face of Manager Fred Potter. And Potter agreed with him. The shark has now lived for more than six weeks without food, and seemed a bit livelier yesterday than for a week or two past. The small brown boy was the son of the Jap who catches sharks for the aquarium, and he had a vivid interest in the life of the fish. He didn't care whether the shark ate. He wanted the fish to die. Indeed, if it does not die pretty soon, there will be a chance that the boy will not eat. And, if you have ever been a boy yourself, of any color, you will understand what that means.

Wherefore the boy goes out to the Aquarium and watches the big fish with hungry eyes than the shark itself has. As for the shark, it really seemed to have been stimulated by the placing in its tank of the big stingray Saturday night. Maybe the scare that it got, for it was in mortal fear of the intruder, served to revive its waning vitality.

The stingray, on its part could not stand the association at all. It was placed in the tank with the shark, swam around for a few hours, flapping its broad fins like a kind of gigantic hat, inspecting the place, and then came to the surface, turned over on its back and died. It was stretched out on the wall in the sun yesterday afternoon, and in a few hours began to smell as badly as it looked. And that was pretty bad.

The fish was, in many important particulars, radically different from the stingray that is so common along the California coast. It had two long, curved protuberances, looking like a cow's horns but stretching around laterally in front of a mouth that was as wide as the body of the fish. The eyes were at the sides of the head, not on the top as in the most common California variety, and the body was much wider in proportion to its length—the great fins reaching out like membranous wings. The fish had the long stingray tail, like an old-fashioned blacksmith whip, and this had had a barbed sting set a few inches away from the body, although the Japs cut off the sting before delivering the fish to the aquarium. It is said by old timers here, however, that no one is ever known to have been struck by one of these fishes here. It is different along the California beaches, where the rays lie in the sand at the bottom and often strike bathers who step on them inadvertently. The wound inflicted is excruciatingly painful, but never fatal, the barb carrying no venom and the fish having no poison sack. However, the California rays do not run nearly so large as the one at the aquarium, fish of four feet in width being rare. One seven feet wide might kill a man, just from the shock of the wound. And it is said that much larger ones have been seen in these waters. These fish, in fact, are related to the giant ray, or manta, common to the Indian Ocean and the Gulf of California and probably to other tropical seas as well. The manta sometimes grows to a width of 20 feet, and the weight of a ton. It has the playful habit of hovering in the water above the divers who go down after pearls along the oyster banks, and then suddenly closing down upon its man and enveloping him, like an umbrella. Must be a stuffy kind of experience, but no man has ever come up afterwards to tell how it feels. It was a beautiful day at the beach yesterday, clear and bright, with just enough breeze to make the water sparkle and cool the shady places under the trees. The band played, the surf was full of bathers and coasters all day long, and a couple of ball nines at the old race track broke the Sunday law into small pieces to the enthusiastic delight of a large crowd of spectators. And at that they did not do a great deal of harm that anybody could see. It was merely harmless amusement, and at the same time enjoyable. And it all fitted in with the day.
