

Old Planters

The Hawaiian Gazette Co. has, at considerable expense, succeeded in completing a limited number of sets of Planters' Monthlies from Vol. 1 of 1882 up to the first of the present year.

Of the earlier numbers, long since out of print, many issues were entirely exhausted, making it necessary to reset and reprint all such numbers, thus adding materially to the cost. This extra expense was more than justified, however, by the valuable nature of much of the matter contained in these old numbers, matter that cannot be found elsewhere than in these books and that is valuable really beyond price to the plantation interests.

These Planters are uniformly bound in full law sheep, giving them an attractive appearance in addition to their durability.

Anyone desiring a complete set, or any part of a set, would do well to communicate with the Gazette Co. at an early date, as there are but very few sets available at the present time, and in order to complete more sets it will be necessary to reset and print more back numbers, thus increasing the cost still more.

"Who king here now?" inquired the dapper Chinese steward of the Nevada as the vessel came into the harbor.

"George R. Carter," he was told. "Oh, him no king, I think him Governor; this island a territory now," was the shrewd steward's reply. "I see King Kalakaua many years ago when he come to San Francisco. I work that time in Palace Hotel. This my first time out in the ocean. You see I born in California, so I native son. Sure, I'm Merican citizen and vote."

HOW JAPAN SQUARED UP.

The magnitude of Japan's naval successes in the present war is vividly illustrated by the statement of the London Times that out of a total of eighty-three ships, with a total displacement of 410,224 tons, which Russia sent into the zone of hostilities, only ten, with a displacement of 63,636 tons, remain in her fighting line. Another striking fact is that the Japanese force of seventy-six vessels, with a displacement of 274,184 tons, has sunk or captured sixty-four ships, with a displacement of 289,778 tons. It is true that this includes the ships which the besiegers' guns at Port Arthur helped to disable, but, on the other hand, it was solely by the indefatigable exertions of the Japanese fleet that these ships were driven into Port Arthur and held prisoners there. Another important point is that, whereas the Japanese have lost twelve ships with a total displacement of 46,025 tons, they have captured and added to their navy seven vessels representing 44,486 tons. Nor is this all. Already at Port Arthur the battleship Peresviet (12,674 tons) and the armored cruiser Bayan (7,800 tons) have been raised, and at Chemulpo the protected cruiser Variag (6,500 tons). Other ships will also be raised, but even with the addition of these three the Japanese navy will emerge from the fight with a displacement 25,435 tons greater than it had when the war commenced, whereas the Russian navy has been virtually annihilated.

BOAT RUN DOWN.

The Hawaii Herald says: As the Kaulani was steaming out of the harbor at 4:20 Tuesday morning she ran into and cut in two a sampan, manned by a Japanese fisherman. Captain Dower says the morning was dark and that, judging from the torches, there must have been fifty sampans between the buoy and Paauka light. The one with which the Kaulani collided was directly in the channel between the two buoys and the fisherman displayed no lights. The captain zigzagged his steamer to avoid the boats, but failed to see the one he ran into and did not know of its presence until he heard the scream of the man and felt the jar on the bow. He immediately lowered a boat and had a crew look for the man but could not locate him until they had hailed two other boats when they learned that the man had been picked up by some Japanese and taken to Waiakoa. The captain picked up the man's oil skins and some ropes found floating in the vicinity of the place where the collision occurred. When Captain Dower returned to Hilo Tuesday evening he hunted up the injured man and questioned him as to why he was in that position without a light, and he replied that his light had gone out and that he was lying ill in the bottom of his boat unable to make a fresh light. He seems to be injured internally and has been taken to the hospital.

BREAKWATER FOR KAHULUI.

Final arrangements have just been completed whereby the Kahului Railroad Co. will commence improvements to Kahului harbor, which will involve something like the expenditure of $100,000, on a breakwater, thus making the Kahului harbor as safe as that of Honolulu. The harbor will have a uniform depth of thirty-three feet and with the breakwater will permit of steamers and vessels of the largest tonnage remaining at safe anchorage in the heaviest weather, instead of having to go outside, as is now the case. Twenty-eight additional cottages of spacious dimensions suitable for the housing of the laborers and their families will soon be in course of construction.—Maui News.

NEVADAN IN PORT.

The steamer Nevada, of the American-Hawaiian line, arrived in port at noon yesterday from San Francisco, with a general cargo for Honolulu and Kahului, and a deck load of 260 hogs. The Nevada left San Francisco three hours after the Mongolia and brought fourteen bags of mail. The vessel will probably get away for Kahului by Wednesday, completing her sugar cargo there.

THE CITY OF IT.

Nothing of a semi-social character has appeared more sad to me than the return of Mrs. James Brown Potter to her native land, broken in purse, spirits and prestige. I first saw Mrs. Potter at the house of Secretary Whitney, on I street, Washington, on the night she recited "Ostler Joe." The occasion was a charity benefit, and the charming hostess—the first Mrs. Whitney—had offered her house for the occasion. That was in the winter of 1886-87. I saw her again in Paris the following summer. Her daughter, Fifi, was with her. They returned to this city on La Champagne in September of that year. This lady was a victim to the ill advice of her friends. They told her she had in her the making of an actress. They assured her she could "recite," when she couldn't. Had she encountered an artist like Belasco, she might have attained success; but she fell in with a theatrical Raffles from whom she did not learn anything.

Mrs. James Brown Potter said hard things about the man whose name she insisted upon retaining—rather enigmatically. She did not "fancy" his uncle, the good bishop, and rarely omitted an opportunity to gibe the old gentleman. Now, after a wrestle with the world itself, Mrs. Potter virtually admits that it is better for a woman to have the protecting arm of a man near her—even if that man be a dude—than to walk alone.

She played for a high stake, and lost. Her former husband has remarried—the Richmond belle, Miss May Handy, is now mistress of the household.

Many of Mrs. "Jimmy" Potter's old friends are dead; but it will be interesting to watch her social progress when she returns and to note who give to her the cold shoulder. Truly, this is a censorious world!—Julius Chambers in the Brooklyn Eagle.

GREANY WAS BUNCOED.

The San Francisco Chronicle says of a former Honolulu who seems to have been buncoed:

It is alleged that Charles A. Rauhut practised frenzied finance on F. D. Greany, who gives his residence as the Russ House, and a warrant was issued by Police Judge Conlan yesterday charging Rauhut with the felony of obtaining money by false pretenses. He alleges that February 17, 1904, Rauhut represented that he owned $20,000 in the capital stock of the G. W. Reynolds Company, at Second and Mission streets, where Greany was bookkeeping, and that K. H. Vesper owned $5000 more; that these amounts had been paid in, and that, in addition to the working capital, the corporation had a surplus of $2000 over and above its indebtedness. He made many other flattering representations regarding the corporation, it is alleged, and wound up by obtaining $2000 from the complainant, who now claims that the representations, one and all, were false and made with intent to obtain the $2000 on no security whatever.
