

KOREAN PATRIOT SLASHES A TRAITOR

Man Marked for Death by His Fellow Countrymen Attacked by Cool Fanatic.

RESISTANCE TO ARREST

Victim Partially Disemboweled, Lies Near Death Which Knifer Hopes Will Come.

Loss of Korea's national independence impelled Lee Song In to attempt the murder of Choy Yong Jo yesterday afternoon, the effort to disembowel the victim being planned with a finesse so deliberate that the case rivals a plot. The would-be murderer is held at the police station awaiting the outcome of the terrific abdominal wound of the victim, who lies in a critical condition at the Queen's Hospital. The assailant is a delegate from Eula, Kauai, to the Korean National Society meeting which is to be held here the latter part of this week, when a protest may be formulated against Japan's action in annexing Korea. Lee Song In has confessed his guilt and takes pride in the fact that he felt called upon to kill Choy Yong Jo, who Koreans generally charge with being a spy in their midst to betray them and their secrets into the hands of the Japanese.

Choy Yong Jo is a Korean who, according to Koreans and Japanese, is the man who has been furnishing the Japanese press, and particularly the Nippon Jiji, with information as to the deliberations of the Koreans with reference to the proposed protest against Japan's action with reference to Korea, and they claim that as a spy Choy Yong Jo has sold them to their enemies and placed them in the power of the Japanese should any of them decide to return to Korea.

Lee Song In is known to the police as a man who offered recently to give information as to where gambling games could be found and raided by the police. Chief McDuffie assented to such a plan, but he failed to return to the station. On Tuesday afternoon the proprietor of the perfumery company in the Delmonico building complained to the police that a Korean, whom he had recently hired to clean out the store had disappeared, and so had the key to his trunk. A search was made and Lee Song In was brought before McDuffie. He said he had decided to leave his employment, and on leaving he noticed the key in the trunk and decided it was a risky thing for the proprietor and so put it in his pocket. With this plausible excuse he stole the key to the chief. An examination of the trunk showed its contents to be intact.

Asked for Protection. On Tuesday evening Choy appeared at the station and asked Special Officer W. A. Korean, to give him police protection, saying that the Koreans, generally, wanted to take his life. He was asked why they wanted to and he replied that he was charged with holding Korean secrets among the Japanese newspapers. The chief asked him to swear to a warrant if he knew of any one man, or several of them, who had threatened him. His answer was that the Koreans in general were threatening in their attitude and he was afraid. The chief advised him to stay in the station all night, but he compromised by sleeping in the bike shed adjoining the station.

LIQUOR MEN ARE SQUARELY OUT OF POLITICS

Sign Declaration in Favor of the Present Law and Pledge Themselves for It.

ASK PLATFORM ENDORSEMENT

Anti-Saloon League Has Refused to Declare Along Any Similar Lines.

Voluntarily and practically unannouncedly the representatives of the liquor interests in Honolulu, which means the representatives of the liquor interests of the Territory, have placed themselves clearly out of politics as a body and have gone on unqualified record as in favor of the retention of the present liquor law.

Yesterday seven wholesalers and the proprietors of twenty retail establishments in the city, the great majority, signed a statement declaring themselves out of politics as a body and ready to support the retention of the liquor law as it stands without amendment.

They call upon the various political organizations to endorse the law and include among their platform pledges one to the effect that the law must be left upon the statute book as it stands today.

The declaration, handed to The Advertiser for publication, is:

To Whom It May Concern: In order that no mistaken impression exist as to the political attitude of those engaged in the liquor business in Honolulu, we, the undersigned, subscribe to the following statement:

We emphatically deny any attempt on our part, either individually or collectively, to seek to influence either directly or indirectly any political party or faction.

We believe that the people of Hawaii by the last territorial legislature and the plebiscite have signified their approval of the present liquor law. And we sincerely and unreservedly pledge our support to the preservation of that law.

Whatever activity has been shown in local politics by individuals immediately or remotely connected with the liquor business is simply the ordinary interest of the private citizen in the general party welfare.

And we earnestly request that all organized political parties in Hawaii at their next regular convention

REGISTRATION WORK HAS COMMENCED

Oahu Board Lists Names of Three Hundred and Fifty Voters on First Day.

About three hundred and fifty voters registered yesterday with the board of registration which began its labor for the coming election in November, in the early morning, holding three sessions. These sessions will be continued until September 17. On September 19 the board, comprising S. F. Chillingworth, chairman; A. K. Vierra and John D. Holt, will start on a tour of this island, returning here on the 26th and will continue registrations from that date until October 9. October 9 falls on Sunday and the registration will probably close on the night of the 8th.

The registration law gives the right to all male persons to vote who are citizens or naturalized, of and above the age of twenty-one years, who have resided in the Territory of Hawaii for one year immediately preceding registration and three months in the representative district in which they will be permitted to cast their ballot in November.

The board of registration gives notice that naturalized citizens must either bring their naturalization papers or be in a position to make affidavit as to the date and date of their registration. The day's registration was without incident.

will be serenaded by the Hawaiian band under the leadership of Captain Berger. From eleven in the forenoon to one o'clock the Queen will receive the general public. In the afternoon she will go to her Waikiki residence where she will reside at a luau.

To Liliuokalani

By WILL SABIN. Still queen in heart, though scepter sways no more, Still monarch of a mind that bows to what must be; She loves her island people all the more For that they swift embrace a splendid destiny.

Out of the isles where once she reigned serene Hath come a glorious nation's love-liest gem, And though no longer may they call her queen, She rules her people's hearts, and guideth them.

Woman, beloved by all a noble race, Around the world hath sounded oft thy name; Thy kindly council and thy royal grace Hath added glory to thy people's fame.

Hawaii, sprung to greatness in a little while, Perching with peace on midpacific peaks, Gives Occident and Orient each a smile And lives the life of love the whole world seeks.

What wrong hath been, (and who knows wrong from right?) Shall fade to fancy, and new days shall save The grandeur of Hawaii's yesternight While truth prevails and Stars and Stripes do wave.

social activities during the reign of King Kalakaua. Since her dethronement the Queen has lived quietly at Washington Place, occasionally staying at her beach home. Of late the Queen is often seen in public in her carriage, drawn by two horses, and her passage through the city is somewhat reminiscent of the monarchical days.

The serenade by the Hawaiian band is almost an annual event, and always Captain Berger is the leader. He was the leader when the Kalakaua dynasty came into power when Liliuokalani was the Princess Liliuokalani, and later, the Regent, and still later as the Queen, but there has been no difference to the band since her dethronement, and always her favorite selections are played.

OLD MAN PREYS UPON LITTLE CHILDREN

Ex-Jailbird Must Face Charge of Victimiting Two Portuguese Girls.

Two little Portuguese girls, one eleven and the other fifteen, yesterday told the police authorities a shocking and pitiful story of how they had been led into immoral conduct by Francis Oliveira, who ought to know better than commit such a crime if age has anything to do with discretion, for he is sixty-eight.

As a consequence of their meeting Oliveira the girls have been in the streets for several months. Only yesterday was the fact made known to the police. The widowed mother of one of the girls informed Chief of Detectives McDuffie, and when the officer questioned the two children closely they confessed their intimacy with the old man.

While one of the girls has a mother living, the other is motherless and has a father. More than a half-dozen children who have been victimized in the same way during the past six or eight months have been either motherless or fatherless.

Oliveira was arrested and locked up at police headquarters. When informed as to the accusation he confessed the crime, and the likelihood is he will plead guilty when his case is called.
