TAFT CAMPAIGN LETTER IS READY TO BE GIVEN OUT

are in favor of measures to promote the merchant marine engaged in foreign service, to vote for the Republican candidates for congress in order that their wish for all this progressive legislation may be gratified.

Conservation Speech Advances.

The President gave much of his time early last week to the completion of this letter and also to the completion of his St. Paul conservation speech. For three or four days he did not play golf but stuck to his desk, morning, afternoon and evening, grinding away at the dictation. Secretary Norton has been very insistent that the President's utterances for the autumn should be prepared as much in advance as possible that there might be time for getting copies out to the newspapers and into the hands of editors who desire to write editorial comment thereon.

Program Takes Time.

He tells how a legislative program like that set forth in the Republican platform of 1908 could not be carried out in full by one congress. "Certainly if all its promises are executed in the administration, it will be within a proper time. The present congress," the letter goes on to say, "has not only fulfilled many party pledges, but it has by its course set higher the standard of party responsibility for such pledges than ever before in the history of American parties. Hereafter those who would catch voters by declarations in favor of remedial legislation will not make them except with much more care as to the possibility of its enactment."

Goes to Heart of Question.

The President plunges right to the heart of the tariff controversy. He is aware that as the campaign progresses that promises to be the dominant issue and he proposes to meet it squarely. He quotes the memorandum, which he wrote when he signed the Aldrich-Payne tariff law and declares that it "fairly states the effect of the bill," adding that it "has been criticized for certain of its rates and schedules. Some of the criticisms are just and some are wide of the mark and most unjust."

Tariff Not Responsible.

After denying that the "present tariff is responsible for the increase in the prices of necessities," the President cites the tariff commission as the most important feature of the operative part of the law. He alludes to it several times as a "Tariff Commission" although it is legally known as a "Tariff Board." "The commission, already selected and at work is a commission of disinterested persons," the President declares, "who will ascertain the facts, not in a formal hearing by examination and cross-examination of witnesses, but by the kind of investigation that statisticians and investigators use. When the commission completes its work, either on the entire tariff or on any of its schedules in respect to which issue has arisen, and the work of the commission shows that the present tariff is wrong and should be changed, I expect to bring the matter to the attention of the congress with a view to its amendment of the tariff in that particular. Of course, this will be impracticable unless congress itself shall adopt the parliamentary rule, as I hope it will, that a bill to amend one schedule of the tariff may not be subject to a motion to amend by adding changes in other schedules."

One Schedule at a Time.

This is probably the most important passage in the letter, although it is virtually nothing more than the President has already stated. The only point strictly new is the endorsement to a rule, preventing motions by which other schedules can be amended. The rule was drawn by Asher C. Hinds, the house parliamentarian, last winter to be voted upon in the form of a concurrent resolution and the subject of revision a schedule at a time was urged by Ebenezer J. Hill, a Republican member of the ways and means committee from Connecticut.

A Tax on Success.

The President praises the corporation tax law for imposing a new kind of tax, "which has many of the merits of an income tax. It taxes success," he says, "not failure." He gives the passage of the amendments to the interstate commerce bill a high place in the records of work done by the present congress, and cites in detail what was accomplished. He says the amendments were in accordance with the text of the Republican platform. He alludes to the postal savings bank law as "one of the great congressional enactments. It creates an epoch," he declares. "It institutes a system which will work effectively to promote thrift among the poor, by providing a depository for their savings which they properly may consider absolutely safe, and will also turn into the channels of trade and commerce a large volume of money which otherwise would be hoarded."

Pledges Yet to Be Kept.

He mentions legislation for the navy, labor legislation and recites what has been done toward conservation. Then he mentions pledges yet to be kept "in view of what the present Republican congress has done in the fulfillment of its promises," the President writes, "and in view of the standard that it has set in respect to the sacredness of party pledges, I have no hesitation in urging all who are in favor of the performance of the remaining pledges, who are in favor of progress, in favor of economy in government, in favor of the just regulation of railways and of interstate commerce corporations, in favor of a bureau of health, in favor of a proper limitation of the power of equitable injunction, and who

First Campaign Speech.

When the cabinet meeting has adjourned the President goes over to New York to deliver an address on the evening of September 31 before the New York League of Republican Clubs. It is the one political speech he intends to deliver in the campaign. Then he hurries away to Beverly, where he plans to arrive by October 1 and, as matters stand now, will remain there indefinitely. In all probability, however, he will return to Washington about Oct. 15. Influential Republicans are urging him to stay at Washington as much as possible because it is more convenient to dispose of public business there. Men who want to see him can get to Washington more conveniently than to Beverly. The President probably will spend a couple of weeks at Washington before he starts on his long trip to Panama, which will keep him away the best part of November.

Western Outlook Good.

Some pretty definite reports about campaign conditions in the West have been brought to Beverly of late and, as far as the transmississippi country is concerned, these are on the whole encouraging. The insurgent country, it appears, is pretty safely Republican. The congressional campaign authorities tell the President there is no reason to worry about Kansas. While it has nominated insurgents in the main, there is every prospect that these insurgents will be elected and the insurgents are Republicans. There is some prospect of an improvement in conditions in Iowa, where the insurgents and regulars have been at it, sword in hand. Senator Dulliver has shown a disposition to bury the hatchet, so the Republican managers believe, and they think it will not be long before Iowa will have something like campaign harmony. The factions have fought fiercely through primary campaigns out there before this and then come together and joined in the fray against the Democrats. The congressional committee has reasons to believe that it will be so this year.

Sulky Jim.

The one fly in the ointment thus far is the sulking of the followers of ex-Secretary of the Interior James B. Garfield. They won only in part what they wanted in the State platform and they did not obtain the candidates they wanted on the State ticket. There have been many alarm statements that they might not vote the ticket in November. These stories have reached the President's ears. He is hopeful they will not prove true. Ex-Secretary Garfield has a personal grievance, because President Taft would not retain him in the cabinet and has been cooking up to Colonel Roosevelt ever since the latter returned from Africa. Probably Colonel Roosevelt could have said the word which would have brought the Ohio progressives into line, but he has not chosen yet to say it; neither has he chosen to endorse the Taft administration.

Want Special Session.

Quite a clamor has arisen in some quarters for the President to call an extra session of the senate in late September, when he goes to Washington for a meeting of the cabinet. Business interests, concerned in the decision of the big cases pending before the Supreme Court, urge this, that the President might make his nominations of justices and thus enable the court to start off promptly in early October with its work. He said very recently, however, that he would not call an extra session of the senate. There are many objections to it, one of which is that the court at best would save only three or four weeks time. The proposed extra session would come right in the midst of the campaign. It would be exceedingly difficult for many senators to get back to Washington at that time and it would also be exceedingly difficult to maintain a quorum.

Wants Time to Consider.

The President wants plenty of time to deliberate over the selection of an associate justice to succeed Mr. Moody and of a chief justice to succeed the late Chief Justice Fuller. He has begun his scrutiny of names and is understood to have conferred over the situation already with some friends in whose judgment he has confidence. It may have some significance that the President has met with Justices Holmes and White on the North Shore this summer and has had the opportunity to talk with them about conditions. While Presidents do not necessarily follow the judgment of members of the court in selecting new members it is not exceptional for him to talk things over with the justices with a view to obtaining their ideas.

The Indian Grants.

The President has approved of a plan for eliminating the law's delays and the payment of great fees in Indian cases which he hopes to put into operation before very long. The scandals in Oklahoma, now being investigated by a committee of congress, have impelled the President to do something to protect the Indians from the rapacity of attorneys. He believes that there are government officials in the interior department who can handle all these Indian cases satisfactorily and at a very small cost to the Indians themselves.

would be pleased to have the experiment entered upon hastily because there would then be additional opportunity for criticism and more prospect of obtaining a repeal of the law. A few banks will probably be put into operation along in October.

Holiday Weather Prevails.

President Taft continues to have glorious North Shore weather for his summer vacation. All the old residents along the North Shore say it is not within their recollections when there was such a stretch of splendid days. There has not been a rainstorm all summer long and yet there have been numerous showers—thunder storms the natives call them—and it has rained had several times over night but by early forenoon has always cleared away and there has not been a single day when it was not good golfing.

With the excellent prospects for a golden autumn, the President is looking forward to enjoyment of that splendid season on the North Shore. He will find pleasure in September and October golfing and in the automobile rides through the brown woods, a glorious feature of this section at that season of the year.
