A junction was made between the new and the old water mains in Nuuanu Valley, near Judd street, yesterday afternoon about one o'clock. About four o'clock the old pipe bursted under the pressure, and a gang of men was at once set to work repairing the damage, which, it was learned at a late hour last night, was accomplished with considerable difficulty.

The East Maui Plantation Co.'s property was not sold yesterday. There was a large attendance at Messrs. E. P. Adams & Co.'s salesroom for the occasion, but nobody would bid a higher figure than the upset price of $50,000. According to the instructions of Messrs. C. Brewer & Co., the agents, the auctioneer could not accept a lower bid, and the sale was declared off.

TRADE POINTERS.

Mr. Levey holds his regular cash sale at ten this morning.

An opportunity to get kerosene oil at auction, perhaps below even warprices, will be given at Messrs. E. P. Adams & Co.'s salesroom on Monday next.

The Hawaiian Hotel Stables have horses, village carts and harness to sell, and why should anybody plod along through the rainy season on foot?

If you don't take the HERALD you won't know all the news.

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

The first business yesterday was the passage on second reading of Mr. Thurston's bill to authorize and regulate special partnerships, which Mr. Brown reported from a select committee. Mr. Hayselden presented a report of the Finance Committee on the expenses of the session, showing a balance of $188,23 out of the appropriation of $35,000. The electric light bills were made the order of the day for to-morrow. Mr. Thurston's bill for the relief of certain property owners at Makiki was referred to the Judiciary Committee, and Mr. Kaunamano's bill relating to the education of Hawaiian youths abroad went to the Education Committee. Mr. Keau presented a petition for a special grant of $3,600 to the Mamalahoa Guards. The bill to amend section 498, Civil Code, was referred to the Judiciary Committee. Mr. Gibson, Minister of the Interior, in answer to questions by Mr. Thurston, informed the house that no public lands had been sold without advertisement since 1874. He confessed he had been negligent in not obtaining the information asked for by Mr. Brown some time ago regarding duties on goods in the Japanese store on Fort street. Mr. Dole questioned the Minister of Finance: "Please state the quantity of spirituous liquors that have been removed from bond without the payment of duties thereon during the last biennial period, and the names of the parties to whom such liquors were delivered or on whose account they were withdrawn, and the quantity withdrawn by each individual respectively." Mr. Keau withdrew the bill he had introduced to grant a pension to Hon. John M. Kapena. The bill granting a pension to Hon. A. Formander passed, the amount being raised from $1,000 to $1,200. A motion to indefinitely postpone the bill was defeated by a vote of 13 to 17. The same clause as in the other bills was inserted, providing that the pension be not payable while the pensioner holds a salaried office under the Government. The bill granting a pension of $600 a year to the widow of the late John E. Barnard, Clerk of the Supreme Court, was passed. The bill amending the law relating to prisons, jails, and houses of correction, was referred back to select committee. The bill to amend section 247, Civil Code, relating to the branding of cattle, passed second reading. On the third reading of the bill relating to the property of married women, a discussion arose which occupied the greater part of the afternoon. It was strongly opposed by Messrs. Palohau, Kaunamano and Nahinu, and supported by Messrs. Thurston, the introducer, Kaubane, Kaulukou, Richardson and Dare. The argument of the opponents was mainly that the bill gave privileges to Hawaiian women which many of them would abuse. Mr. Thurston said that if the members understood the bill they would not oppose it. The measure prevented the husband from selling the wife's property to pay his debts. Mr. Kaulukou similarly threw light on the bill. Mr. Dare said the intention of the bill was to put Hawaiian women on the same footing as their sisters in other countries. Finally the bill passed. Mr. Kaulukou's bill relating to executions passed second reading; also the bill to naturalize the Messrs. Hoffnung, of London.

Stranger than Fiction.

A romance almost without parallel came to light in Chattanooga, Tenn., recently, and so intricately is the plot interwoven that it would make truth appear stranger than fiction. Thirty years ago there resided near this city, then a struggling village, James Starns, a sturdy young farmer, with a wife, and two little boys. In 1854 Starns concluded to try his fortune in the West, and went to California. A month later having found pleasant settlement, he sent his wife money with which to join him. Mrs. Starns wrote him, saying she would leave in two months, but at the end of that time she had received no reply. Starns wrote letter after letter to his wife and relatives and she wrote to him, but neither received a word of the other. Ten years afterward Starns sent his wife $500, but the money went back to him, as no one called for it. By this time both the husband and wife supposed each other dead. Mr. Starns went to Michigan and from there to Wisconsin, where, six years ago, he married the daughter of a wealthy farmer. By some fate he drifted to Chattanooga. Not even the oldest inhabitant remembered him, and he could find no trace of his folks. To-day he learned that a family named Starns resided near the city, and procuring a carriage took his wife to ascertain whether or not they were his relatives. Arriving at the house Starns was horrified to find the aged white-haired lady who received him was no other than his first wife. He realized the fact that he had two wives. An explanation followed and the two wives were introduced, exhibiting a marked coolness. The parties refused to talk, and it is not known what they will do.

It was a Massachusetts man who, at a railroad depot in Springfield, fought a bootblack who charged him ten cents for a shine.

Escaping from a Vessel.

Yesterday afternoon a colored man, himself claiming to be an East Indian, who had been article in the American Consulate as a sailor on the bark California, asked Captain Davis, of that vessel, for leave to go up town to get his washing. As the vessel was ready to sail for Port Townsend, the pilot being on board, the captain asked Policeman Hopkins to accompany the man and bring him back. The officer consented and entered a hack with the sailor. When passing the British Vice-Consul's office, Kaahumanu street, the sailor said he was a British subject and did not want to go back to the vessel. At the same time attempting to get out, he was seized by the wrist and held back. He began to struggle and make a great outcry, and someone from the Vice-Consul's office, the policeman says, cautioned the latter to be careful how he treated the man. The officer explained the case so far as he knew it, and took the sailor to the Police Station. Then he notified Captain Davis of what had occurred, informing him that to get the sailor back he must lay information against him for desertion. This was done, and Hopkins and another officer took the negro back to the vessel in a hack. When being removed from the Station, the man resisted violently and shrieked like a madman. The policemen had all they could do to hold him in the carriage, and his legs were kicking in the air over the side, as the hack was driven rapidly round the corner into Nuuanu street. He was put on board the ship, when he suddenly cooled down, telling the captain that he did not want to go away, as he had friends here, but it was all right now. The vessel was detained by the wind falling away, and last night our reporter was informed that the sailor had been allowed to leave, but under what arrangement or on what grounds could not be ascertained. It is said he came here as a stowaway on the bark California.
