THE NEW JUDGES.

It is not from any feeling of disfavor that the HERALD has omitted hitherto to tender congratulations to the new incumbents of the judicial robes. Both Judge Bickerton and Judge Fornander have had experience of judicial duties in very important lower Courts, and their elevation is gratifying, if for no other reason, as a recognition of the principle of filling vacancies where possible by promotion. It is reasonable to expect that Mr. Bickerton will do better relatively as a Supreme Court judge than in his late position of Police Justice of Honolulu. There is something anomalous in the office of a police magistrate in this as well as in some other countries, consisting in the blending of office with bench functions, which often compels the magistrate to give a hearing to only one side of the case before it comes before his tribunal. Thus the complaining party has all the advantage of first impressions made in his favor. In this connection amusing stories have been told "back east," of races through the streets between the different parties to a quarrel, each striving to be the first to swear out a summons against the other. Judge Bickerton will now also be relieved from the cares and responsibilities of a large practice as attorney and advocate in the higher Courts, which is sufficient to make up the difference, other things being equal, between the relative importance of the functions of an inferior and a superior Court judge. Being a man of acknowledged legal ability and information, and of uprightness and integrity in the private relations of life, it is not too much to expect that Judge Bickerton will prove an ornament to the Hawaiian judiciary. Judge Fornander, besides having large experience as Circuit Judge of Maui for many years, is a man of rare intellectual caliber, culture and attainments. What he may lack in not having had practice at the bar he may be counted on to supply in the grasp of a master mind. As an investigator and demonstrator in the intricate realm of Polynesian ethnology he has made himself and his adopted country famous in the world's scientific circles. There is little fear that such a mind will be unequal to grasping the law or the equity of causes duly presented to him on the bench. After the apprehension that was felt of unfit appointments being made, the community seems to breathe easier since the choice of the executive has been proclaimed.

Dangers Threatening San Francisco.

Mr. R. P. Hinton, the well-known attorney and speculator of San Francisco, arrived in this city yesterday morning, and left for Chicago last night. Speaking of the condition of affairs in San Francisco, he said it seemed to him most threatening, and that he would not be surprised if, before many months, rioting of the most serious character ever known in that city should break out. Business of all kinds had been in a very stagnant condition for a long time, and few people had the least conception of the destitution and sufferings of thousands in that city. For years the railroad and bonanza magnates had been regarded with most unfriendly eyes by the mass of the people, and during the sandlot excitement Kearney and his followers had more than once been on the verge of storming and sacking their palaces on Nob Hill. So conscious were these men of their danger that never for a moment were they without police protection, an officer being always in their houses, and detectives close at hand wherever they went. The recent mining deal, by which about $10,000,000 had been lost in San Francisco and vicinity, had, both justly and unjustly, been laid at the doors of Flood, Mackey, Crocker, and a few other great financial magnates, and the feeling against them was now far more bitter than ever before. Firms and individuals, employing thousands of men, had failed, and the employes thrown out of employment, with little or no hope of obtaining it elsewhere. Hunger and want had made these men desperate, and they were ready for any act of violence, especially if directed against those they saw living in oriental magnificence upon what they considered the spoils wrested from the poor, and whom they regarded as the authors of their present misery. Mr. Hinton went on to say that the San Francisco mob was incomparably the most dangerous in America, because it was not composed of ignorant men, as is generally the case in Eastern cities, but had a large element of men of good antecedents and excellent education, who had come to California during the mining excitement, had lost money, position and character, and were perfectly desperate, knowing that any change would probably better their position. These men were able to give direction to those more ignorant than themselves, and would supply the mob with that determined and intelligent leadership the lack of which usually made any illegal uprising abortive. It is believed, although not positively known, that Flood, Crocker, and the other railroad and mining princes have contributed $50,000 to the militia to enable them to be perfectly prepared to meet any trouble that may arise.

No Country Only a Spot.

Before Bismarck reconstructed the map of Europe, and made a united Germany, a dozen little principalities used to annoy travelers by stopping them at their frontiers, until they had satisfied the custom house demands. A Yankee once had his carriage stopped at the frontier of a petty prince's country. Herr Ober, controller at the custom house, came forward and, much to his indignation, was received in a nonchalant way. The Yankee was ungentlemanly enough not to get out of the carriage, or even to take off his hat. The Herr Ober sharply demanded the keys of the tourist's trunks, which his subordinate began handling roughly. "Here, hands off!" shouted the Yankee. "I didn't come from the United States of America, to be controlled by you. Put those trunks back. I'll not go through you at all. I'll turn back. I'm in no hurry, and don't care for losing a day. You're no country, you're only a spot. I'll go round you." And he did.

The thirteen New York aldermen, (thirteen being a majority of the Board) who formed the "combine" to work the thing on business principles and sell their votes to the highest bidders, must realize by this time that thirteen has been for them, at least, an unlucky number. At the last advices one of their number was in state prison, two were dead, one gone insane, one on trial, three on bail awaiting trial, two turned State's evidence and three fled to Canada.

The Best Tonic.

Mr. Henry Billings, Washington, D. C., writes: "I have used your Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky for medicinal purposes. As a tonic I consider it superior to the hundreds of concoctions which are now flooding the land as stimulant liquors."

Try Martinelli Cider. It is absolutely pure. Macfarlane & Co., agents.

"As a true tonic, effective invigorator and genuine appetizer, Duffy's Malt Whisky is unexcelled."
