That heavy Bourgainville vine which forms such a perfect shade on the sidewalk adjoining the Hon. C. R. Bishop's residence on King street, was neatly trimmed yesterday, and no longer overhangs the road. Similar actions around the city would be hailed with pleasure by the pedestrian public.

It has not yet been decided when the game of base ball, which should have been played last Saturday, between the Benedicts and Honolulu will be played; but most probably it will not be played now until after the last of the regular league series on the 19th inst., between the Honolulu and the Oceanics.

If the serenading party, that made a mistake and got under the window of Peter-familias' night before last will kindly return during the week, they can get the guitar and scraps of clothing left in the bushes while making their hasty exit. There is no danger now boys, for the "stern parent" has gone to the country for a week.

One of the customers of the Woodlawn Dairy takes us to task for saying in a description of Oahu College, that the spring back of the house, "has a large overflow and a part of the water goes to supply the Woodlawn Dairy," and adds that it should be distinctly understood "that milk ranches are not run by water power."

The Chinese are ever alive to business. The lessees of the new club house on King street propose selling the lease of the lower story of the building by auction to the highest bidder. The railway plant on the Kilauea Plantation, Kaula, is advertised for sale by the mortgagees, the Western and Hawaiian Investment Company, Limited, W. L. Green, Agent. About half past two o'clock yesterday afternoon a run away occurred on Nuuanu street, which threatened for a time to terminate fatally. A native hackman with three native women in his hack was driving into town along Nuuanu street when the horse became unmanageable and ran away. When the runaway approached the first bridge a general smash-up occurred and the front part of the hack was stove in. It was only a possible chance that no body was hurt. The women were badly frightened. A large crowd gathered and helped to repair the vehicle. During the excitement native was spoken in seven different languages.

There is a beautiful white rooster at a certain house on Beretania street. The said chancier has, for a long time been "cock of the walk." Recently, after being somewhat disguised by the molting process, which falleth to the lot of fowls, another and less favored one in the eyes of the fastidious female brood, attacked, and disfigured whity, and most unmercifully pecked and bruised his comb until the proud bird threw up the sponge, so to speak. The defeat has so preyed upon the mind of his cockship that he sings and cackles around the yard like a hen and even spends most of his time on the nests of the hens, vainly endeavoring to bring down the present price of eggs.

"Hello Jack! give us a local." "Well, what do you want, something on the spread-eagle style? Come onthendowntothemill 'n' I'll show you something finer than a wedding fack." "There was no chance to ask Jackey what it was for he talked all the time himself. "There she is," said Jackey proudly, pointing to a large spread-eagle five feet wide and two feet high, carved out of sugar-pine and standing upon a wooden hemisphere. "There she is—that's mine." "What the old Nick do you intend doing with that, Jackey?" "Well you see," said Jackey, "me 'n' Mr. Waterhouse are going to start a temperance hotel in the old Olympic building 'n' I'm going to put her up on the outside of the shebang for a sign."

A large and fashionable audience greeted Major Dane last night at the Y. M. C. A. Hall. Major Dane's subject was "Up the Rhine and Over the Alps with a Knacksack." The lecture was replete with wit, pathos and description which held the large audience for two hours. The description of the Rhine was especially fine and vivid. The moral lessons drawn from the overpowering effects of the building of nature in the Alps and the speaker's wonderful powers of description combined to make the lecture a thing never to be forgotten by those who heard it. The papers of the United States have not over-rated his fine abilities and the people of Honolulu have a treat in store in the remaining lectures. The next lecture will be on the Great Battles of the late Rebellion.

The new store of Charles J. Fishel was brightly illuminated last night on the occasion of his grand promenade concert, previous to the regular opening to-day for the sale of goods. By half past seven o'clock the awning of the store was hung with Chinese lanterns on both sides of the block the entire length of the building. The sidewalks opposite were filled long before the doors were opened by an expectant crowd of men, women and children. The band was in attendance and when the doors were thrown open at eight o'clock a fine and large exhibition of goods was displayed. The store was thronged until after ten o'clock with ladies and gentlemen, the polite clerks ushering them around the store both upstairs and down. The stock is probably the best selected ever brought to Honolulu and the ladies will doubtless have a good time during the next few weeks overhauling and selecting from it.

The property is bounded on the south side by Metcalf street and on the west by Beckwith street, and in addition to these approaches, there have been laid out two avenues and three roads, each 40 feet wide so that every lot commands two approaches.

The Woodlawn Dairy is adjacent, so that butter, cream and milk may be had fresh at all times, and all vegetables required for domestic use can be obtained from the Chinese growers.

Water is plentiful, and the property will be supplied from a Reservoir kept constantly supplied from an artesian well situated upon the most elevated portion of the Estate.

There is positively five degrees less temperature upon these lots than in the town of Honolulu, and when the town is hot and dry, there are always cooling and refreshing breezes, accompanied by occasional light showers from the Mauna Valley, which render it exceedingly admirable as a healthy resort.
