

VILLARD'S WONDERFUL PALACE.

One of the Most Beautiful Dwellings in New York—Details of Workmanship. [New York Cor. Newark Advertiser.] Mr. Villard, it is certain, had no intention until the last moment of the trouble that was to come upon him and ruin him. He laid his plans for the future with mathematical precision. He had an enormous income and he used it freely. One of his extravaganzas was a splendid mansion which he built on Madison Avenue. When the crash came and he had to meet his debts the house went out of his grasp with other assets. This was the hardest blow of all, for Villard had put his heart into this house. That is why, possibly, the Villard mansion is one of the most beautiful dwellings in New York. The simplicity of the impression made by its interior decoration is quite extraordinary. The building itself is copied from an Italian palace. It is a part of a group of buildings, six altogether. The Villard house is a right wing of the entire structure. One enters the vestibule by a court and finds himself in an Italian palace—of course, on a small scale. The color is that of Sienna marble and deeper brown. The halls run at right angles with the vestibule, opening at one end into a drawing-room suite and at the other into a music-room. The walls are paneled with Sienna marble of various tints. The vaults of the ceiling are inlaid with a Renaissance design. There is a splendid fireplace, and above this a relief figure by Augustus St. Gaudens. Throughout the halls and vestibules there are so many exquisite details of workmanship that it is hard to refer to them in a matter-of-fact way. The dining-room is divided by mahogany pillars into three divisions and is ornamented with gorgeous effect. The walls are hung with silk brought in the time of mahogany. The walls have a restful tint of unbroken cream. Slabs of Mexican onyx surround the fireplace. The dining-room is paneled in oak; it is divided by a screen of perforated carving. The music-room is a lofty apartment in white and gold, with soft pine wainscoting. On the second floor the library is in mahogany. Then there is an antique room with a well-studded ceiling. In fact, there are so many wonderful chambers in the house which Mr. Villard will never, it is thought, rest his head in that one can only sympathize with a man who could have built so noble a structure and then lost it.

A correspondent, after having tried "sulfur" coal, wood and sunflowers, has settled upon the last named as the cheapest and best fuel for treating Dakota. He says: "I grow one acre of them every year, and have plenty of fuel for one stove the whole year round, and use some in the other stove besides. I plant them in hills, the same as corn (only three seeds to the hill), and cultivate the same as corn. I cut them when the leader or top flower is ripe, let them lay on the ground two or three days. In that time I cut off all the seed heads, which are put into an open shed with a floor in it, the same as a corn-crib. The stalks are then hauled home and packed in a common shed with a good roof on it. "When cut did he say?" asked Estrella. "I had on my new haags, and just a little face powder, and my new silk dress fitted just as if I had been poured into it, and I said the never saw me look so well as I did." "What did Gus De Smith say?" asked Estrella, impatiently. "He whistled to me—Miss Birdie, you are fixed up so pretty to-night that I hardly recognized you." Wonders of the Seahorse. (Boston Gazette.) "How wonderful is the regularity with which the tides return to the shore?" he exclaimed to her, as they sat on the piazza watching the water and finding conversational topics scarce. But she was prosaic, and replied: "No more wonderful than the regularity with which they recede from the shore; and not half as wonderful as it would be if the shore were to recede from the tides." He silently admitted the logicalness of her remarks, and conversation languished again. It's English 'N' Know. (Chicago Times.) For a gentleman to carry a small parcel on the street is considered the proper thing now, because it's a "bit English you know." Not a great while ago the fashionable young gentlemen of America would go out without a dinner basket to be seen carrying a bundle on the street. Now the same young gentleman affects the custom of carrying small bundles; and it pleases him when his friends see him with one on the streets. Oakum-Spinning. (Chicago Times.) The only branch of spinning which is done without the aid of machinery in this country is oakum-spinning. When an attempt was made to introduce machines it failed on account of the opposition of the hand spinners, and to day the oakum-spinning is carried on in the old manner.

Buttermilk Cure for Dipsomania.

Demostri's Monthly. Among the many "cures" in Europe (one for consumption, in which buttermilk is not the only, is the main article of diet. These cures are located in hilly districts where walking is pleasant when the weather permits, and it is more than probable that the beneficial effects experienced after living in these resorts are due in a great measure to the open-air life, the exercise and the breathing of upland air in which there is plenty of oxygen to vitalize the blood. Then, undoubtedly, the buttermilk itself is a therapeutic agent if used judiciously. It has proved effective in Bright's disease, diabetes, as well as lung disorders, but its chief use is in the case of these buttermilk "cures" which may or may not have important consequences. It was noticed that persons addicted to the excessive use of wine and liquors had their unnatural thirst assuaged when living exclusively upon buttermilk. Indeed, there was no desire for any kind of liquid after having partaken of it copiously. To test this matter thoroughly, the buttermilk cure is being tried in intricate experiments. It is doubtful, of course, if anything will cure a confirmed drunkard of his passion for strong drink, but it may wean moderate drinkers from a taste which they are slowly acquiring. This is a matter of so much importance that physicians and others who have charge over partial or confirmed inebriates should test this buttermilk cure thoroughly; it may not do much good, but it can do no harm. There are some mineral waters which, for a time, at least, allay a craving for strong drink. This is true, it is claimed, of the hot springs of Carlsbad. Sunflowers for Fuel. (Dakota Farmer.)
