

IMPERFECT DRAINS

Care Should be Taken That the Impurities be Properly Carried Off.

Every one knows of the fatal results which follow the stoppage of the drains in a house.

Queen Victoria's husband, the prince consort, died from poisonous germs, which were generated in the palace by the stoppage of the drains.

The kidneys, among the many other functions, act as drains to the body. Through them the blood passes to be purified, leaving behind a mass of effete matter, which it is their duty to eject from the system.

When, however, the kidneys become clogged and all clogged up, the refuse matter accumulates and becomes an active poison, and in course of time, infects the whole man, and eventually, if the cause is not removed, it occasions sudden death, the patient drowning, as it were, in his own secretions.

The symptoms which Nature puts forth like danger signals to tell us that the kidneys no longer do their duty are too numerous to set forth.

Nearly always women's peculiar ailments in their more aggravated and protracted forms are traceable to this source, and rheumatism, in all its varied phases, while pneumonia and Bright's disease are but the culmination of an organic trouble, which, had it been treated organically and not symptomatically, could not possibly have had any such fatal termination.

Coughs and colds, strange as it may seem, are oftentimes symptoms of trouble in the kidneys.

What must be done, then, in these cases? It is surely unwise to treat symptoms when we can at once reach the organ from whence the symptoms rise.

Let us then at once go to the root of the trouble and heal the kidneys. There is a remedy, known all the world over, that will strengthen them, so that they can perform their functions; feeding them and cleansing them in such a marvelous manner that the patient immediately feels the good work that is going on, and in a few weeks is able to join the ranks of the many thousands who gratefully acknowledge that they owe health and strength, and sometimes life itself, to this unflinching remedy, Warner's Safe Cure.

STATE GRANGE OF IOWA

Annual Convention of the Patrons of Husbandry in Session in This City.

Attendance is Not Large But Considerable Business is Transacted.

Addresses Made by the National and State Masters—Present Officers, Etc.

The annual convention of the State Grange of Iowa, Patrons of Husbandry, is in session in this city, a preliminary meeting having been held Tuesday afternoon and business sessions today.

The present state officers are: Master—A. B. Judson, Silver City. Overseer—E. A. Hill, Green Mountain.

Lecturer—G. H. Van Houten, Lenox. Assistant Steward—H. G. Parker, Silver City.

Secretary—John Turner, Lenox. G. K.—George B. Flinders, Sutherland.

Bonoma—Mrs. Ida Judson, Silver City. Flora—Mrs. S. F. Brooks, Silver City. Ceres—Miss Florence Oaks, Gladbrook.

Lady A.—Mrs. Jennie Davis, Murphy. Executive Committee—A. B. Judson, W. H. Hollister, E. A. Hill, Tom Turner.

The sessions of the state grange have been held in the Germania hall. Tuesday afternoon addresses were made by Mr. Aaron Jones, of South Bend, Ind., master of the national grange, and by Mr. A. B. Judson, master of the Iowa branch.

The latter's address dealt principally with the work accomplished during the past year and with the transportation and taxation questions, and recommendations were made for the good of the farmers. Committees on credentials, resolutions, finance, division of labor, agriculture, transportation, co-operation and good of the order were selected.

The forenoon session today was devoted to addresses on various lines of work of the order and to hearing suggestions from National Master Jones as to building up the organization in this state.

At the afternoon session resolutions were adopted thanking Mr. Jones for his attendance and for his suggestions, and also thanking the officers of the past year for their work in behalf of the grange.

Officers to serve for the next two years were chosen as follows: Master—A. B. Judson, Silver City. Overseer—E. A. Hill, Green Mountain.

Lecturer—Hon. George H. Van Houten, Lenox. Chaplain—Mrs. C. W. Russell, Green Mountain.

Steward—W. Graham, Manchester. Assistant Steward—D. W. Murphy, Murphy. Treasurer—H. H. Hollister, Manchester.

Secretary—J. Turner, Lenox. Gate Keeper—J. P. Zink, Green Mountain. Pomona—Mrs. Ida Judson, Silver City. Flora—Mrs. E. A. Hill, Green Mountain. Ceres—Kate Richardson, Silver City. Lady Assistant Steward—Mrs. Jennie Davis, Murphy.

Another session will be held Thursday.

AMUSEMENTS. Colored Minstrels Give a Good Performance at the Odeon.

Before a good-sized audience at the Odeon Tuesday night Oliver P. Scott's colored minstrels were the attraction. Like all minstrels where the colored man tries to imitate himself and his antics the performance lacked the amusement that the white imitator affords. The Scott minstrels, however, have the reputation of being the best colored organization before the public today, and this is unquestionably the case. The company contains considerable merit, both in vocal and comedy way, and among the best are noticeably James White, Clarence Powell, "Charley" VerValen and Bob Pennell. The olio was by far the better of the two parts and many pleasing specialties were introduced. The features were Harry Craton's juggling and slack wire work; the trick bicycle riding of Arthur Maxwell; VerValen and Goodman, in musical specialties and "Kitchie," a Japanese hand-balancer and equilibrist. The company left this morning on its special car for Boone.

OBITUARY. Sundell. The 1-day-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sundell died this morning. The burial occurred this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at Riverside.

Card of Thanks. We desire to thank all the friends who rendered us such valuable aid and assistance during the illness and death of Mrs. James Clark, and to assure them that it was appreciated.

JAMES CLARK. The "Plow Boy Preacher," Rev. J. Kirkman, of Belle Rive, Ill., says: "After suffering from bronchial or lung trouble for ten years, I was cured by One Minute Cough Cure. It is all that is claimed for it and more." It cures coughs, colds, a gripe and all throat and lung troubles. For sale by F. B. Wiley, postoffice druggist, and George P. Powers.

Your Minister. Will furnish you a bottle of Beggs' Cherry Cough Syrup free if you have not the money to pay for it. It stops coughing in church. Cures coughs and colds. George P. Powers.

BURNHAM TOMORROW NIGHT.

Iowa's Phenomenal Pianist at the Odeon Tomorrow Night.

Those who have heard Mr. Burnham will be anxious to hear this marvelous player again and those who have not will be anxious to hear Iowa's famous musical genius. He played recently in Decatur and the following is copied from a paper there: "Burnham's piano playing is a delight and a revelation. Decatur is not generally a concert going place, but in some inexplicable manner the fame of this strikingly young man to play for us had reached every heart in our little city and long before the first number was presented the house was filled from pit to gallery. Then came Thiel Burnham, slender, delicate looking, and drew such tones and reverberations from his instrument as had never before been heard in these valleys and perchance never will be heard again unless Thiel Burnham will return." Don't miss this unusual chance. Seats now selling.

SHAW TONIGHT.

The Governor in Good Trim For His Meeting at the Odeon Tonight.

Rankin to Speak at State Center on the 24th—Cousins to Come Later.

Governor Leslie M. Shaw will arrive in the city at 5:20 this evening on the Iowa Central, and will address the people at the Odeon tonight at 8 o'clock.

Music for the occasion will be furnished by the K. O. T. M. band, and citizens, irrespective of party and sex, should make it a point to hear the political issues discussed by Iowa's chief executive. Governor Shaw passed through the city this morning en route to Eldora, where he spoke this afternoon. Although he has been speaking almost daily for the past week, the governor is in good health and spirits, and will give an entertaining and instructive address. Seats at the Odeon will be as free as the air, and it is probable that every one of them will be occupied.

Chairman Estabrook, of the county republican central committee, has received word from State Chairman Weaver to the effect that A. C. Rankin, the Pittsburg iron molder, will be at State Center on the 24th inst. Mr. Rankin is one of the best known laboring men and political speakers of the country, and his State Center meeting will be one of the big events of the campaign in Marshalltown.

Congressman Cousins' date has not yet been arranged, but as he is engaged until the 21st he will come here some time during the closing days of the campaign.

ASSAULTED HIS WIFE.

A Vanleue Citizen Was Having a Good Time and Will Have to Face Serious Charge.

Andrew Diener, a German who resides with his wife and six children on the Roberts farm near Vanleue, was brought to the city this morning by constable Renker, charged with assault with intent to do great bodily injury. Diener had made a vicious attack on his wife, and the woman was severely injured as a result. A gash was cut across the top of her head and she was otherwise injured. When the husband was brought to town he made no denial of the assault. He said he had intended to do this on Saturday, took home with him a gallon of whisky and proceeded to have a good time. Diener evidently believes having a good time in whipping his wife, and as an excuse he said she deserved it.

Diener was arraigned before Justice Allen, pleaded not guilty to the charge and his hearing was set for 9 o'clock Friday morning. He was released under bond of $200.

WORKS IN A FOG.

Wireless Telegraphy Experiment in Bad Weather.

New York, Oct. 11.—It was worth the effort it cost to take the magnificent steamer Grande Duchesse all the way down the harbor yesterday and out past Sandy Hook to learn that it would be impossible for the Shamrock and Columbia to go over the thirty-mile course within the time limit, and that in consequence the race was off for the day.

Among the 400 excursionists who made the trip on the Grande Duchesse there was satisfaction in knowing that from that ship Mr. Marconi had telegraphed back to the city that there would be no race, the New York Evening Telegram being able to bulletin the fact nearly forty minutes before it was known to any other newspapers.

Well down the harbor the Grande Duchesse met the flagship of the New York Yacht Club. On the handsome yacht were Commodore Morgan and his wife, and the opportunity of sending word to the city that there would be no attempt at a race. This was done for the benefit of those who might be persuaded to venture down on the late excursion steamers, hoping to see the yacht cross the finish line.

Almost before Commodore Morgan had dropped the microphone the cable ship, the Mackay-Bennett, was signaled, and through four miles of fog the message was flashed. From the Mackay-Bennett the bulletin was quickly forwarded to the city. The Evening Telegram was in the street with an edition less than two minutes after 11 o'clock, telling of the fourth failure to race. Nearly an hour later one of the afternoon newspapers in Park Row followed with an announcement that the race was off. This was dated 11:34 a. m., just thirty-four minutes later than the bulletin sent by Signor Marconi.

All of this means much in this age of hurry, when minutes are of greater importance than hours were two decades ago. Mr. Marconi again demonstrated that as great a departure has been effected as was made when steam supplanted the stage coach.

REV. G. R. GALE IN CUBA

Another Interesting Letter From the Former Marshalltown Pastor.

Says the Native Cubans Outside Of Havana Are Willing and Anxious to Work.

Pecculiarities of the Famous Capital of the Island—The Country's Future.

Havana, Cuba, Sept. 22, 1899.—It was on a Sunday evening that the good ship "Seneca," which had carried us safely more than 1,200 miles from New York, slowly steamed past grim old Morro Castle that has stood sentinel decade after decade guarding the entrance to the harbor and city of Havana. The castle or fort stands on a foundation of natural rock that rises thirty or forty feet above the sea. Above the frowning old fort flying pennants announced to the city the ship's arrival and above the pennants waved the stars and stripes, never looking more beautiful to us than they did that Sunday evening, illumined by the brilliant rays of the setting sun.

The native pilot who had come on board carefully guided our boat through the basin-shaped harbor until anchorage was made near the tangled ruins of the ill-fated Maine, still reaching a part of its bent side and fighting top above the water, as if unwilling to sink to give up the struggle and sink in its grave. If the bottom of the harbor is half as filthy as it is said to be the Maine's fighting top may have other good and sufficient reasons for wanting to keep above water.

Before giving ourselves over to the swarms of boatmen who gather about the steamer, waiting to gobble us up the moment we descended to their level, we stand and take in the picturesque scene the city presents. The buildings, as in most tropical countries, are low and rather disappointing to one familiar with the high massive structures seen in the large cities of the states. In what these buildings lack in height they make up in color, roofs and sides interlarding with blue, yellow, drab and intermediate shades. A friendly fellow passenger who knows the city and speaks English, points out some of the places of greatest interest, and afterwards when we have sufficiently not so much for its architectural beauty as for what it has stood for and for those who have lived in it. Here lived captain general after captain general, concocting schemes to make heavier and still heavier the burdens of the Cubans while lining his own pockets with his ill-gotten gains. Of course there have been exceptions to this systematic wholesale plunder of public funds in Cuba, but the exceptions have been few and far between. Here the notorious Weyler hatched out his infamous starvation scheme, the dire effects of which are still visible in near-by sections of the island. On the third floor of this same palace our Gen. Brooks has his private rooms, and just above his rooms, from the staff where the emblem of Spanish authority waved for nearly 400 years, now waves the flag that means the dawn, and high noon, too, of a new day for the island.

As I sit here, the unusual interest also is Uncle Sam's postoffice. The building, under Spanish rule, was one of the old custom houses, built with the fifth of centuries. But Uncle Sam had it washed and fumigated; then he had it fumigated and washed, and then washed and fumigated until finally it was ready for American occupancy. Now it presents a clean appearance, with modern conveniences for the public that would do credit to a city post-office in the states.

Havana has a dozen roomy, airy residential suburbs, and a few of the thoroughfares of the city itself are delightfully wide and open, noticeably the Prado, but most of the streets are wretchedly narrow—so narrow are some of the principal business streets that Gen. Ludlow had posted notices that on these streets vehicles must all go in the same direction, going one street and back another. The sidewalks are even more narrow, so narrow that two persons cannot pass with comfort without slowing up and turning edgewise or one stepping down into the ditch. Usually pedestrians keep to the right of the street. In this way a narrow street is able to accommodate in most parts of the city one is close up to the houses, for they come out plumb with the walks, with doors and windows reaching to the floors and protected by heavy Moorish bolts and bars, as is common in Spanish architecture. The yards, or rather the rear of the house is built around an open court. These courtyards in the crowded parts of the city are small, giving poor ventilation and breeding an unhealthy condition of things. Passing along many of these streets the untutored nostrils of a fresh American will be greeted with a pungent unsavory odor, as to wear him forever, if he is not already weaned, of ever wanting to stick his nose in other people's business. No doubt, as reported, much has been done to clean up the city. At 10 o'clock each night every household, restaurant and public place is obliged to put all garbage where it can easily be reached and carried off before morning. A system of sewerage is now being planned for the city, work on which will commence, it is said, by the last of the present year. Of course it is just what the city needs. But while it is being put in the city streets are being dug up and the germs and odors of the centuries are being unearthed, let me be among the men that will have been transported far beyond the northern seas.

Reaching Havana as we did on a Sunday evening, the greatest social sight in Cuba was in full swing, the promenade on the Prado. The center of attraction was in Parque Central, in

An elderly gentleman met on a recent ramble, acknowledged that he had one hobby, and that was the love of good English, with never a suggestion of slang. He was a purist of the most extreme type and in daily association with him for over a week not one word, unfound in Worcester or Webster, was heard to fall from his lips. In theory perhaps he is right, but when it comes to practice who can be sure? For first of all it must be borne in mind that as the small girl said of cake, "there is slang—and slang." A meaningless phrase, garbled in form and heard on every side is, to say the least, inane. It is not every one who can use slang and use it well. If one is not clever and at the same time original he had best use authentic words and phrases, but let him not wonder if some less careful speaker be noted for a more piquant tongue. It is said of Clay that a would-be orator once asked him how a certain thought could be expressed and he answered at once that there were four ways, and they would all mean exactly the same thing. We know now that there were five ways, and the last would be the expression of George Ade, who is the master of slang and to whose "Parables in Slang" and "Artie" no serious objection can be made, for though at times they may be inelegant they never fail to be expressive. There are few of us who have not lived long enough to know that "the slang of today is the language of tomorrow."

A 4-year-old boy we know convulsed his friends with laughter a few evenings ago when he told he shouldn't eat cream on speeded apples by saying, "Well, I was reading in the Bible that if a little boy wanted cream on speeded apples he could have it and it wouldn't hurt him a bit, and if he wanted a second help he could have that, too." Being requested to read that particular passage in the Bible, he said he couldn't, "but if our own Bible was here I could," he said,—dear little preacher, who had never been to school a day in his life and who if it were not for the picture would hold the book as Carleton's "Topsy" did, up-side-down. Yet again around the table made us think the little boy was not alone in finding strange things in the scriptures, for each one there stood for a different belief and could prove it by his Bible. Every one else knew that particular word was not there, but what mattered it if it seemed to be there for the purpose of the little boy's statement served his purpose, it is needless to say he had cream on his apples and a "second help," too.

It is the time of year when Mother Nature, as a recompense for the passing of summer, paints the woods and the skies with the warmest colors of her great laboratory, and when the children in the dark cool evenings build good bonfires to perpetuate into the night the reds and goldens of the day. There is something in the odor of the burning leaves and the long, dim shadows just beyond the purple glow that must always appeal to the one who has been most blessed of all things to remember a happy childhood. Laughing and shouting with joy while the flames leap higher and higher, as the child looks into the embers an older and more serious expression crosses his face as he looks through the warmish into a future. It is all over in a moment and it is only the smoke which has dimmed his eyes. He laughs and shouts again, but he does not tell his playmates what he saw. There is no need, for each one must see it for himself.
