NOTHING BUT FACTS.

No Deception Used in Talking About Morrow's Kid-ne-oids.

The Arguments in Their Favor Come from People Who Have Tested Their Merits.

There is no deception in anything we publish about Morrow's Kid-ne-oids. All our statements are facts and are from people right here in Iowa. People in all walks of life are using and recommending Kid-ne-oids, because they cure backache, nervousness, sleeplessness and general debility in cases where other remedies have failed.

Mrs. J. A. Bond, 611 East Fourth street, Muscatine, Ia., says: "I suffered from backache and nervousness for more than a year previous to using Morrow's Kid-ne-oids. I tried different kinds of kidney remedies before taking Kid-ne-oids, but they did not relieve me. I suffered on with backache, nervousness and restlessness. Kid-ne-oids soon relieved me of my troubles, and I will continue to use them as occasion requires."

Morrow's Kid-ne-oids are not pills, but yellow tablets, and sell at 50 cents a box at all drug stores and at McBride & Will Drug Company's store.

Iowans, who do not know the pleasures of boating upon billowy waves or the exhilaration of sailing over choppy seas, are chiefly interested in the result of the yacht race in New York bay because the American boat won over her English competitor.

The Columbia clearly demonstrated that she was a better sailor for Americans better sailors than the Shamrock, a boat of the latest model with greater spread of canvas, of which great things were expected by certain experts. Now that the trial of speed is over and our people have won new laurels on the briny deep, it first of all relieves the American people of their anxiety over the retention of the American cup, and, next, it adds another of similar victories won by American boats. It is noteworthy that this is the eleventh attempt made to capture the cup in the last fifty years, and the tenth failure to take it out of Yankee hands.

American pride in seamanship has been vindicated and American superiority demonstrated while the national spirit has been stimulated by this latest test in the international arena. THE WEIGHT OF PAST GREATNESS. In times of war, when the nation's government is defied and its forces attacked by a foreign foe, the spirit of American patriotism rises in men regardless of parties and creeds. It is as natural for a citizen of the United States to defend his country as it is for him to consider himself the political equal of every other man; both are in-born traits. So well are these American traits known that it is pitiable to think that the leaders of a once great political party should blunder into choosing a political issue so at variance with the native instincts of their people as is the present policy of anti-war outcries.

The question of whether or not we should have taken possession of the Philippine islands might at one time have been debatable. A man might have then spoken out against such action and still have been a patriot, but now that the islands have been taken and the sovereignty over them transferred to this government by solemn process of treaty, the question ceases to be a question. It has been decided. When insurrections arise and United States authority is defied in a land over which sovereignty had thus been legally acquired there is left but one thing to do, to compel respect and obedience to the government of the United States. This is one of those questions to which there can be but one side.

When such men as Carl Shurz and Burk Cockran rise up in all their power and influence, to condemn the war and the administration which is charged with the duty of waging it, their offense is all the greater because of the high intelligence with which they are endowed. They may be patriots. We will not call them traitors. They doubtless think they are serving their country's good. To be charitable with them we will say that they think they are attacking the men and party that got the country into an undesirable situation while down in their hearts they love their country and their country's institutions as well as any man, but alas! such patriotism. When these men knew that two-thirds of both branches of congress had ratified a treaty placing upon the United States the responsibilities of sovereignty over certain lands they knew that the executive department was thus charged with the duty of administering laws and government in those lands. The duty had to be performed by executive heads regardless of their individual preferences. If United States authority was rebelled against the rebellion must be put down; the laws must be administered.

Judge accordingly is to acknowledge very superior talents, but it forces upon us the conviction of an insincere and treacherous course. Let us hope that they have only erred or have been mistaken, misunderstood, while we can thank the stalwart Americanism of our people for the almost unanimous manner in which the public has been led to its patriotic solution of the problem. "Down with the war! Down with America's enemies! Discuss the disposition of the of the Philippines afterwards," is the verdict of the people, and the people are generally right. Can lifelong democrats, populists, et al, in all parts of the land be blamed for renouncing their party allegiance under such conditions?

TRAMP BREEDERS. Many people wonder where the tramps come from, those members of the wandering fraternity who refuse to work, while they continue to eat. There is an undefined impression that our foreign born citizens furnish the great number of them, and this is fortified by stories of "Meandering Mike," et al, of foreign brogue; yet this is disputed. Joseph Flynn, whose writings on tramp life have made his name familiar to a large circle of readers, declares his belief that our foreign population does not contribute to the criminal classes any larger share per capita than our native population. Recently, he became tramp, acquired the tramp nickname of "Cigarette," and acquainted himself with the habits and views of vagabondage without his companions discovering his identity or his purpose. He therefore deduces his conclusions upon practical observation and experience. He also strongly combats the popular idea that the United States is the victim of European criminals. "We are inclined," he says, "to excuse the increase of crime in this country on the ground that we have neglected to regulate immigration, but the facts are that we have ourselves evolved as cruel and cunning criminals as any that Europe may have foisted upon us, and that the foreigners' offenses are generally of a minor character and in a number of instances the result of the misunderstanding of the requirements of law in this country, rather than of willful evading."

While there ought not to be any letting down of the bars against foreign criminal and pauper classes, this statement of Flynn deserves attention as a lesson against breeding tramps at home. A cursory examination will show that foreigners who come among us are generally better trained to industrial habits than many of our own population. It is a dangerous practice that permits children to grow up without careful training in work of some kind, either about the home, the shop or the farm. When thus raised and suddenly thrown upon their own resources, as they are likely to be, they are as helpless as babes and more than one has become a "Wandering Willie," because of lack of proper industrial training. It is not to be understood that it is here urged that a boy should be thus constantly engaged, but work should have as important a part of a youth's training as study and play. In this way he is better fitted for active labor when the time comes for industrial effort.

THE GLOUCESTER DECISION. Until the full text of the Illinois court's decision in the glucose case is made known there is little information to which to base any calculations as to its ultimate effect. Enough is known, however, to suggest the most far-reaching possibilities and already trust capitalists in Illinois are scared. Glucose trust stock took a further tumble because of it and the public has begun to hear the threats of capitalists that they will leave the state with their investments if the court's decision is allowed to involve the disruption of all corporations organized in the restraint of trade. The decision is an all-important subject of conversation in financial circles today.

While the litigation was in the form of an action by a shareholder to prevent the sale of the American Glucose Company to the Glucose Sugar Refining Company, commonly known as the glucose trust, the decision is so sweeping that it greatly endangers the security now enjoyed by hundreds of great combinations. The successful minority stockholder claims that the decision does involve all trusts, that the sale of the Peoria company was declared illegal because the Glucose Sugar Refining Company was an illegal combination, organized for the purpose of controlling prices and limiting production. The court in its decision seemed to lean to this view, for it took occasion to remark that the allegations in the bill regarding the purposes of the organization seemed to be sustained by the evidence and that the state had always been opposed to combinations whose effect upon trade is similar to that of the Glucose Sugar Refining Company.

The particulars of the case are clearly explained in the following statement of George F. Harding, Jr., speaking for his father, who is the minority stockholder behind the litigation: "The decision gives us all the relief we asked for, and in effect tells the court below to look for more relief. The proof that the company was a trust was overwhelming, and the blow is aimed at every large combination of capital of recent date. My father held $200,000 worth of stock in the American Glucose Company, for which he paid cash at par value and on which 5 per cent dividends had been regularly declared. We received notice that the stock had been sold to the trust and that our share was $28,000 placed on deposit at a certain bank for us. We refused to accept the tender, and in the litigation presented evidence to prove that the combination was a trust and that fraud had been committed. When it came to a point where President Matthews was compelled to produce the trust books the answer was withdrawn and a demurrer filed to the trust allegation which we had proved. The decision will make it difficult to form other combinations, because it sustains the right of a minority stockholder to attack the combination. There can be no more freezing out of small stockholders who can not afford to fight, and it will lay all the big combinations doing business in this state open to successful attack by the state authorities or by minority stockholders. The decision could not have been more far-reaching."

The decision certainly smells of a decidedly anti-trust odor and may be considered a response to the demand for the strictest construction of anti-trust legislation. It is the answer of the supreme court of Illinois to the recent popular agitation against trusts. It would seem that where corporations are formed, no matter what the extent of capitalization and other properties are sold to them, that they are clearly without the pale of anti-trust legislation, but from the language used by this court very serious doubts are raised and it may yet transpire that any corporation may be declared a trust when evidence is produced to show that its objects and purposes are to restrain trade, limit production and control prices. The full text of the decision will be awaited with intense interest. The trust problem is just beginning to unfold itself.

IOWA PRESS COMMENT. "It may have been due to the chilly atmosphere," explains the Ida Grove Era in stating that "During the whole of Mr. Bryan's stay last Saturday we did not hear him receive one rousing cheer. Nor did he get a single applause while making his speech that was worthy of being called by that name." "So far the campaign has been a very quiet one. It means well for the people when they are so well content that they do not think they have to change governments," remarks the Eagle Grove Times-Gazette. The Keokuk Gate City declares "It is a poor farmer that raises a crop and does not then preserve it. It would be equal folly to grow a big crop of prosperity in this country and then not go to the polls and preserve it." "We once said that the 'spirit of war' was abroad in the land and that there would follow a series of wars. And we haven't changed our mind," says the Tama Free Press. The Toledo Chronicle avers that "The Hawkeye people are not slow in showing their appreciation of the present administration," as indicated by the crowds that listened to President McKinley.

The Audubon Republican notices that "The candidates on the democratic county ticket decline to talk politics to republicans, but they continue to solicit very hard for republican votes. They insist to republicans that there is no politics involved in the county race. They don't acknowledge that they stand for the Bryan democratic party with all its dangerous heresies, and that they always do everything possible to defeat the republican party."

Dysentery Quickly Cured. "Last summer I had an attack of dysentery," says Mr. J. A. Kelly, the well-known merchant of Henderson, N. C. "I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which I used according to directions and with entirely satisfactory results. The trouble was controlled much quicker than former attacks when I used other remedies." This is the most successful medicine in the world for bowel complaints and is pleasant and safe to take. The director of posts at Manila declares that there has ever been censorship of the mails there since the Americans came into power. Bourke Cockran, in his speech at the anti-expansion convention in Chicago, was broader and more liberal in his views than his fellow workers in that gathering. He declared that "nobody should question the right of the president to hold the Philippines until a stable government can be established. On the contrary, I think every one should aid him to fix a satisfactory

TOPICS OF THE TIMES. The blackest cloud on winter's horizon is the coal problem. The first serious battle between the Boers and British has resulted in the discomfiture of the Boers and is significant of what must be the inevitable outcome, because of the superior numbers England will send to the field. The Omaha Bee recalls that when Bryan took the reins of party control in Nebraska the populist party numbered nearly 80,000 voters and the democratic party about 65,000. By means of Bryan's scheme of fusion the democrats have been slowly masticating their reform allies. Now they confidently predict the complete absorption of the populists and the unquestioned supremacy of the democrats in Nebraska in 1900. The Bee declares that "It is a case of Jonah swallowing the whale."

The school authorities of Riverside, Cal., are much disturbed by the discovery that a man who has been teaching in one of the public schools for several years has done so under a certificate obtained, as they say, by the use of a fraudulent diploma. Near English, Ind., Jerry L. Sudarth, while hunting, killed a bird of a species unknown to those who have seen it. The bird has snow white feathers on its body, those on the back having a slight golden tinge. The beak is 7 inches long and almost as sharp as a needle. The beak is of a golden color, except toward the tip, where it is a steel gray. The eyes are yellow and the legs, which are as black as ink, are 2 1/2 inches long. When standing the total height of the bird is 68 inches, or nearly six feet.

test of their capacity to govern themselves and to maintain order in the meantime." While he favored treating them with justice and kindness, rather than by arms, he really gave away the whole contention of others who are criticizing the administration. All that the president is attempting to do is embodied in the leeway conceded by Cockran. The president tried the Cockran method of pacification through the peace commission and it failed through no fault of his, and now to "maintain order" he will compel the insurgents to yield.

General Miles will leave Washington on Saturday night on a transcontinental trip. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Miles, Miss Miles, and his aid, Lieutenant Colonel Michler. The trip will be one of inspection of army posts and property and will embrace visits to Chicago, Omaha, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Antonio, and New Orleans. Gen. Miles will remain a few days at Red Lodge, Mont., for some hunting. The party will reach Washington again about November 15.

A New York item indicates that bicycle manufacturers who are not in the $40,000,000 trust are forming an organization to protect themselves from the expected attacks of the combine. The trust members have said that they control many patents relating to the construction of bicycles and those makers not in the trust fear that an effort will be made to force them to pay royalties. The Cycle Trade Mutual Protective Association is the title under which the outside concerns will unite. The present plan is to establish a defensive fund of $100,000 with which to engage in legal warfare when the time comes. A meeting of representatives of the various manufacturers will take place in Buffalo on November 1.

There is a boom in Georgia convict labor. "Jim" Smith, the well known convict lessee, has sold his goodwill to James W. English, Jr., of Atlanta. While the price he received for his convicts is not given out, it is known that he sold out his holdings at a handsome profit. Recently there has been a strong demand for state convicts, and the lessees under the new system are anxious to get all the men they can, even at advanced prices. The activity in the coal, iron and lumber markets causes a big demand for this class of labor, which it is generally understood is the very best that can be had, due to the fact that a lessee gets six days' full time out of his convicts every week, rain or shine. This makes them valuable and will continue to keep them so.

Joseph Chamberlain threw a great deal of light on British negotiations and purposes in the Transvaal in his speech before parliament. As a representative of the government, he disclaimed any intention of inaugurating the war. At the same time he made it clear that it was the purpose of Great Britain to remain the paramount power in South Africa, and to insist upon the rights of British subjects. An effort by the opponents of the war in parliament to disapprove of the conduct of the negotiations with the Transvaal republic met with a rebuke by a vote of 361 to 135, thus showing that the "antis" are not strong in parliament at least.

WINE OF CARDUI. A SURE MEDICINE. I have been suffering from female weakness for four years, and have taken many medicines, but Wine of Cardui and Back-Draught have done more for me than anything else. MRS. CAROLINE EVANS. It is a mistake to take any and every kind of medicine when you are sick. There is danger in it. Most of the so-called cures for "female weakness" do nothing more than deaden the pain temporarily, and when the effect wears away the patient is weaker and sicker than before. It is never wise to take chances. You have only one life, and that is dear and precious. If you have any pain, ache, disorder or weakness in the female organs, nothing will help you like Wine of Cardui. It helps do away with morning sickness during the early stages of pregnancy, and modifies the pains of childbirth; recovery is rapid and future health is assured. The Wine is purely vegetable, being made of herbs whose medicinal properties act directly upon the organs of womanhood. It is a long-tried remedy, and has many years of success behind it. It is sure. Why take a chance medicine when you can get a sure medicine? Druggists sell Large Bottles for $1.00.
