

FOR THE CHILDREN

To Keep Their Digestion Perfect Nothing is so Safe and Pleasant as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Thousands of men and women have found Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets the safest and most reliable preparation for any form of indigestion or stomach trouble.

Thousands of people who are not sick, but are well and wish to keep well, take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after every meal to insure perfect digestion and a good appetite.

But it is not generally known that the tablets are just as good and wholesome for little folks as for their elders.

Little children who are pale, thin and have no appetite or do not grow or thrive, should use the tablets after eating and will derive great benefit from them.

Mrs. G. H. Crossley, 538 Washington street, Hoboken, N. J., writes: Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets just fill the bill for children as well as for older folks.

I had the best of luck with them. My 2-year-old girl takes them as readily as candy. I have only to say "tablets" and she drops everything else and runs for them.

A Buffalo mother a short time ago who despaired of the life of her babe was so delighted with the results from giving the child these tablets that she went before the notary public of Erie County, New York, and made the following affidavit:

"Gentlemen—Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were recommended to me for my 2-months-old baby, which was sick and puny and the doctors said was suffering from indigestion. I took the child to the hospital, but there found no relief. A friend mentioned the Stuart tablets and I procured a box from my druggist, and used only the large sweet lozenges in the box and was delighted to find they were just the thing for my baby. I feel justified in saying that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets saved my child's life. Mrs. W. T. DeHoop."

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of April, 1897.

HENRY KARIS, Notary Public in and for Erie County, New York.

For babies, no matter how young or delicate, the tablets will accomplish wonders in increasing flesh, appetite and growth.

Use only the large sweet tablets in every box. Full sized boxes are sold by all druggists for 50 cents, and no parent should neglect the use of this safe remedy for all stomach and bowel troubles if the child is ill in any way regarding its food or assimilation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been known for years as the best preparation for all stomach troubles, whether in adults or infants.

PIN-HOOK POLITICIANS

Democratic Machine's Bluff and Bluster Over Coronership Proves to be a Farce.

Opinion Secured From Attorney General Remley, Who Says There's No Vacancy.

Even If One Existed It Would Be Nonsense to Challenge Votes of Republicans.

Coroner Lierle is secure in his office until the end of his term in January, 1902, and the democratic bluster regarding the invalidating of the election in Marshall county because of the refusal to place the name of Dr. T. C. Brady on the official ballot as a candidate for coroner to fill an alleged vacancy has now been shown to be either a great, big bluff or a sort of pin-hook politics.

Chairman George R. Estabrook, of the county republican central committee, County Auditor F. W. Hargrave and Coroner F. P. Lierle went to Des Moines Tuesday night to consult with Attorney General Remley concerning the question raised by the Marshall county democratic machine. They took with them copies of all the papers pertaining to the subject, together with the proceedings of the board of supervisors which approved the coroner's bond. Attorney General Remley received the visitors courteously and gave the question thorough investigation and attention. Then he announced that the republicans need not be alarmed over the threats made and he gave the following opinion:

"First. Under the showing there is no vacancy in the office of coroner in Marshall county.

"Second. If there was a vacancy and the name of the democratic nominee upon the ticket the remedy would be by mandamus proceedings.

"Third. If the ticket goes out without the name of the democratic nominee upon it it is still a valid ticket, for the law does not contemplate the disfranchisement of the voters.

"Fourth. To challenge a voter depends solely upon the qualifications of the voter to vote, not on what may or may not be on the ballot.

"It is the most farcical proceeding I ever heard of," said Remley. "If the democrats attempt to challenge republican voters, they will be met by a suit for each voter who is challenged to swear in his vote. They can not invalidate the election as to the ticket, and they can only contest the election of coroner and on that point I would like nothing better, as an attorney, than to place Dr. Brady's name on the ticket. The republicans had little fear that the democrats would accomplish anything by attempts to invalidate the election in this county, but wanted to be in a position to call any future bluffs that Messrs. Bradford, Henry and Brady might make. They also wanted to know just what course to pursue relative to the coronership and do not propose that the democrats shall, thru sneaking tactics, secure that office.

Following the decision of the attorney general, Auditor Hargrave will refuse to place Dr. Brady's name on the ticket, and Chairman Estabrook will see to it that the voters of the entire county are not frightened and are not deterred from casting their ballots by bluffs or challenges that may be made on the day of election. If the democrats persist in trying to challenge further the republican are prepared for them.

CHAIRMAN HENRY'S VIEWS. Chairman Charles Henry, of the county democratic central committee, was asked today what his party proposed to do now that Attorney General Remley has passed on the question. Mr. Henry said that he was not in a position to say just what course would be pursued, but that the contest would not be abandoned. He said further that he did not believe the attorney general had a right to pass on the question without hearing both sides.

THE SWEARINGIN FUNERAL. Methodists of Iowa Attend the Last Sad Rites for an Able Divine. What was probably the largest funeral in Iowa in many years that has attracted the attention of Methodist ministers of the state was that of Rev. Dr. Richard Swearingin, of Gladbrook, which was conducted from the Methodist church this afternoon.

Rev. Swearingin was the last member of the first Iowa Methodist conference and his labors in the church for a period of more than half a century brought to him one of the widest of acquaintances. Methodist divines from parts of Iowa assembled in the city today to do him homage, and pay their last respects to one whom they loved as a Christian man, a fellow worker for the good and a brother minister of the gospel.

The funeral services were not of the ordinary kind, as there was no one sermon or eulogy given. Dr. F. M. Coleman, of the Methodist church, had the general services in charge, but a large number of the visiting pastors assisted and spoke on one theme and another. Dr. N. S. Fellows, of Iowa City, took up the life of Dr. Swearingin as a pioneer, after which Dr. W. S. Barclay, of Davenport, spoke on "Swearingin as a Preacher." "As a Defender of the Faith and Doctrine" was the theme on which Dr. H. O. Pratt, of Manchester, spoke, while Dr. J. G. Van Ness, until recently pastor here, but now of Mason City, spoke on "His Heart Life and Friendship." Others of the visiting clergymen took various parts in the service and spoke briefly of their knowledge of the oldest Methodist minister in Iowa.

The casket bearing the remains occupied a place near the altar and was covered with beautiful flowers, the gifts of friends of the dead man. His flock at Gladbrook sent a handsome design of the sickle and sheaf, while the church at Albion, of which he was pastor so long, and the church here, paid tributes in a floral way.

The music of the service was by a mixed quartet composed of Mesdames Ella Baughman and A. L. Bryant, Messrs. Walter Green and H. B. Miller. Favorite hymns of the deceased, "When the Mists Have Rolled Away," "Some Day We'll Understand" and

"Good-Night," were sung, and at Riverside while the remains were being placed in the "resting" vault, "Farewell, Father," was sung.

HIGH COURT REVERSES

Olmstead-Hoy Breach of Promise Suit Has a Hearing in the Supreme Court.

Case in Which a Waterloo Girl Was Given $3,000 Damages is Reversed.

Court is Supposed to Have Held That No Engagement Existed Between the Parties.

The supreme court of Iowa has held that a Waterloo lady is not entitled to receive the good money of a young Marshalltown man because of the breaking of an alleged engagement. Among the decisions rendered by the court at Des Moines today was one reversing the decision of the district court in the suit brought by Miss Nannie Olmstead, of Waterloo, against Andrew W. Hoy, until recently a druggist of this city. This case was tried by Judge Caswell in the district court of Marshall county in 1899. Miss Olmstead, who was a handsome young lady and highly respected in her home city, brought suit for $10,000 damages, claiming that Mr. Hoy had broken without reason a promise to marry her. She alleged that in 1896 while Mr. Hoy was a resident of Waterloo, they became engaged; that after his removal to this city he made frequent trips to that city to see her; that finally the time for their marriage was set for the spring of 1899, and that she was making all preparations for the event when in November, 1898, she received word from Mr. Hoy's marriage to Mrs. Jessie Hurley, a milliner of this city.

Mr. Hoy set up the defense that while he had proposed to Miss Olmstead she accepted the proposal conditionally, and introduced her letters to show that both were free to marry and, provided they at any time found some one they liked better. The jury, at the conclusion of the hearing, which attracted much attention in this city and in Waterloo, awarded Miss Olmstead $3,000 damages. Efforts were made to have the verdict set aside at that time, but this Judge Caswell refused to do and the case was appealed to the supreme court, with the result that it is now reversed. Several points were raised in the appeal. The important one being that the engagement was conditional, and it is presumed by the attorneys for the defendant that the reversal is on this ground. If it is there will be no retrial, as the plaintiff would have nothing to go to court on.

Mr. Hoy is at the present time engaged with a large drug house at Cedar Rapids, having disposed of his business interests here.

A BEAUTIFUL RECEPTION. Mrs. Henry Pappas Hostess at One of the Largest Receptions Ever Given in the City.

The beautiful home of Mrs. Henry Pappas was the scene of a reception Tuesday afternoon, which, in numbers and beauty of decoration has seldom been excelled in the city. Two hundred and fifty-six invitations were sent out and at least 225 ladies called between the hours of 2 and 7. The rooms were lavishly decorated with flowers, smilax and ferns. Great bouquets of yellow and white chrysanthemums were placed in the parlors, and meteor and American beauty roses were also used. The dining room was lit pink roses being everywhere. The ladies were all interested in the table cover, a handsome piece of damask, elaborately embroidered and sent to Mrs. Pappas from Europe. The hostess was assisted in the parlors by Mesdames O. L. Binford, Henry Stone, A. S. Burnell and P. A. Stern. At the door was Miss Elsa Stern and at the head of the stairway Marian Smith and Winifred Chamberlain. Mrs. Pappas had the refreshments of the dining room, where the refreshments were served by Misses Beattie Oliver, Mary Welles, Marion Parker and Helen Bunnell.

IS SURE HE KNOWS. Mr. F. C. Letts Able to Substantiate His Political Claims. Editor Times-Republican—Dear Sir: My attention has been called to an article in the Reflector of recent date headed "Does He Know?" and signed "Imperialist." First, I want to thank the editor of the Reflector for his prompt attention and, in briefly answering the signer of that article I wish to say that I do not train wholly with sugar, oil and other trust magnates, but I am pleased to know and remember that I was born of poor parents and have been compelled to work for a living all my life, and I am more pleased to say and know that I number among my friends more people by far among the middle classes than among the rich, and I am never more pleased than when I am talking to men who earn their living by the sweat of their brow, and I want to say to Imperialist that I have not come to my present conclusions, I. e., that McKinley will be re-elected, without giving the matter much serious thought and investigation and interviewing laboring men. I have done this in Chicago, New York and elsewhere, as my business carries me largely over the United States.

I will, as briefly as possible, give a few illustrations that have come under my own observation. In the great soap works of the James S. Kirk Company, of Chicago, 90 per cent of their men will vote for McKinley. In a manufacturing plant that I have visited only last week out of thirty-eight men eighty-seven will vote for McKinley. I have talked to at least fifty motormen and as many street car conductors in Chicago, not knowing any of them by name, but catching them from time to time while riding on the street cars, and I have not talked to one who intends voting for

LECTURE ON ART

William A. Reaser, of New York, Addresses the Twentieth Century Club.

Valuable Suggestions to Students of Art—American and European Instruction.

The art revival which has swept over the country in the past two or three years and has had such an effect on the lines of work laid out by the women's clubs, as well as in the schools and colleges, has not passed by Marshalltown. To such an extent has the art impulse been felt that many who a few years ago would have confessed that they knew nothing at all about art and artists, have spent their spare moments in studying the subject and now keep a discreet silence on their ignorance. For this reason it has come to be that nothing is enjoyed more than something which pertains to art. Realizing this and herself deeply interested in all forms of art, Mrs. H. J. How, president of the Twentieth Century Club, persevered in her attempt to have speak for the club the noted artist, Mr. Willbur A. Reaser, of New York.

This was not Mr. Reaser's first visit to Marshalltown, as he was here last winter and spoke before the club, but owing to the fact that it was a very stormy night, very few had the pleasure of hearing him. The fact that Mr. Reaser is an artist does not make him a better speaker, but it does inspire those who hear him with the feeling that he is one who knows of what he is speaking, that he is one who can give, as it were, a "peep behind the scenes."

The subject of Mr. Reaser's talk was "The Two Salons," and those who knew but little of the art exhibits in Paris have a well defined idea of them, so lucid was his description. Mr. Reaser confessed that he is an enthusiast, but there was no need for the confession, for his very voice and manner proclaim that. One remark that he made called forth mental applause from many, that it is unwise for an artist to go abroad too early in his career. The formative period should be spent in the home land, where technique can be gained as well as in the cities of the old world. The galleries are what should call the artist abroad, that in them he may study the masterpieces of the world, when the danger of absorption and mere copying is past. Yet the inspiration gained from the old art centers is recognized by Mr. Reaser, and in no weak terms he tells of the benefits and influence of Paris. The history and the importance of the salon of the Champs Elysee, from the day when the artists modestly wheeled on wheelbarrows or carried in their hands their pictures to be hung upon one of the bridges of the Seine, to the day when the ambitious artist longs for nothing more than that his canvas may be accepted and perhaps receive an honorable mention or a medal, were told.

The second salon, the one located on the Champs de Mars, had its beginning when a number of brilliant men became dissatisfied with some of the practices of the old salon, and so instituted another. Thru curiosity many came at the opening, but it was soon to be seen that the new exhibit was no mere fad to pass away, but that it was to be a recognized factor in the art life of Paris.

Perhaps the most interesting part of the lecture was that wherein Mr. Reaser told of the life of the art students in the Latin Quarter, immortalized in literature by Thackeray and DuMaurier. The generosity of the gay city attracts the many artists who flock there every year. Care sits lightly on them, whether they be rich or poor. Their work is done for pure love of work, their ambition is unbounded and their enthusiasm mirrors the life around them. Mr. Reaser had with him a number of fine copies of works of recent artists, who are becoming known and talked about. These he exhibited and commented upon, bringing out their excellencies and touching upon their deficiencies. Mr. Reaser is a very pleasing speaker and an enthralling lecturer with wit and humor, that it is very entertaining and bright.

After the serving of a cup of chocolate and marmalades, a short musical program was enjoyed. Miss Mabel Woodbury on the violin, Miss Emma Woodbury on the piano and Mr. John Woodbury on the flute played a trio by Mercadante and for an encore an elegy by Faucouler. Mrs. William Sandoe whistled Elbalcco by Strauss and her encore was "Comin' Thru the Rye."

STATE ROBBED OF CLOTHING. Lockers of Company H Broken Into and Several Garments Stolen.

The state of Iowa is loser by about $25 as the result of a case of larceny in which thieves entered the armory of Company H, Forty-ninth Iowa, in Forney's Hall and, breaking open several lockers, stole four shirts, two jackets and two pairs of trousers. Several of the members' lockers were broken into before the thief found what suited or fitted him. The clothing taken is among the smaller sizes, and that in the lockers of some of the larger men, after the locks were broken and the clothing inspected, was thrown aside and others were entered until the right sizes were secured. All of the lockers were securely fastened and the hasps had to be broken in order to allow the thief to get at the clothing. There is no clue to the thief, yet the officers of the company are hopeful of laying their hands on the culprit. The matter has been reported to the police.

REGISTER TOMORROW. Boards Will Be in Session and Every Voter Must Enroll His Name.

The registration boards of the city will be in session for three days commencing tomorrow. The session will be held from 8 a. m. until 9 p. m., and as this is a presidential year a complete registration of voters must be made. The first ward board will be in session at the Woodbury hose house, that of the second ward in the office of George Humblon on North Center street, that of the third ward in the city building, and that of the fourth in the Alert hose house on South Third avenue. Every voter must have his name on the registration books or he can not cast his ballot on November 3. It is important that voters should give this their prompt attention and at least two-thirds of the entire vote of the city should be registered on the first day.

Not Guilty. Goods well bought are half sold and the good people of Marshalltown realize the fact that is the reason why the Marshall Tailoring Company is enjoying a good trade and making up more clothes than all the other outfits combined. The silk man did not work us. We examined the contents of the spool and found the bumble bee before the trick was finished. Always patronize an up-to-date firm and the Marshall Tailoring Company surely appreciates it. Yours truly, GEORGE SOLOMON.
