Old Settlers Die Suddenly. Mr. Mark Moler received word today announcing the death of Mrs. Moler's parents Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Campbell, at Caldwell, Idaho, this week.

Mr. Campbell passed away on last Saturday, his death being due to kidney and bowel trouble, while his wife died Wednesday following after a short illness with pneumonia. Both were well advanced in years. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were among the early settlers in the vicinity of Zeoring, having located there in 1859. They resided on their farm two and one-half miles west of Zeoring until 1886 when they moved to Sioux Falls, S. D., and after a residence of ten years there moved to Caldwell, Idaho. A peculiar coincidence is the fact that Mrs. Moler's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Mead, who for years lived near her parents in the Zeoring neighborhood also died very suddenly recently, their deaths being but a couple of weeks apart.

Board of Control "Broke." The members of the board of control, who visited the city Friday to inspect and accept the new Soldiers' Home Buildings, found themselves in the unenviable position of "being broke" when the time came to leave the city for Des Moines in the evening. The members did not apply for a night's lodging at the police station, as do others who are in the same position, but managed to get home in the velvet cars. Judge Robinson had 30 cents left after lending Judge Kinne car fare, and paying the architect Liebig's bills. Mr. Liebig was the cause of it all, as he left Des Moines without his pocket book. The members of the board did not happen to be burdened with funds, but between them they managed to leave town with no outstanding accounts.

William Williams arrested by Constable Haas was sentenced to six days by Justice Burritt this morning on a charge of intoxication.
